THE WITNESS REMAINS

JUSTICE REPORT: INDEPENDENT EXAMINATION OF CUMULATIVE INSTITUTIONAL DETRIMENT, INTERNAL DISPLACEMENT, DISABILITY, FINANCIAL ENTRAPMENT, SAFEGUARDING AND THE RIGHT TO LIVE WITH DIGNITY

Subject: Dr Richard William McLean, publicly known as Dr Barran Dodger / Resonata Eternis
Date: 4 November 2026
Period: 1990–4 November 2026
Jurisdiction: Australia, with relevant international human-rights dimensions
Status: Formal justice document, evidence register and demand for independent investigation

Governing principle: PRESERVATION FIRST. EXAMINATION SECOND. CONCLUSION LAST. This report records testimony, identifies allegations, preserves questions for investigation, and does not convert unverified allegations into established findings.

1. EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

This report concerns Dr Richard William McLean's account that, over more than 35 years, a cumulative pattern of institutional conduct, administrative decisions, omissions, financial restrictions, disability-support failures, police and hospital interactions, media representation and alleged threats has deprived him of the practical ability to live safely, independently and with dignity.

The report does not ask any authority to accept every allegation as proven. It asks that the available records be preserved, cross-examined and independently assessed. The central question is whether separate institutional decisions have interacted to produce cumulative detriment and whether Dr McLean has been denied effective protection, advocacy, representation and remedy.

The immediate humanitarian issues include restricted access to money, absence of food, unreliable communication, accommodation insecurity, withdrawal or failure of disability support, and the risk that material hardship is reframed as psychiatric or behavioural issues rather than addressed as safeguarding and human-rights concerns.

2. CENTRAL DECLARATION

I exist. That is a problem for the government that attempted to erase me.

I exist despite more than 35 years of institutional encounters, government correspondence, complaints, administrative decisions, professional damage, homelessness, poverty, displacement, disability, alleged threats, failures of protection and repeated attempts to obtain justice.

I exist despite having had to become the principal archivist, researcher, publisher, investigator and public advocate for my own circumstances. I exist, and I have not disappeared.

My existence, survival, testimony and documentary archive constitute an unresolved public-interest matter. The appropriate response is not silence, ridicule, automatic psychiatric dismissal or administrative deflection. It is an independent examination of the evidence and meaningful action wherever wrongdoing, neglect, discrimination or failures of protection are established.

3. SCOPE AND METHODOLOGY

This report is based on Dr McLean's first-person testimony, his published SOS testimony and safety archive, his GitHub documentary repository, his master humanitarian statement, and the broader documentary record he identifies. The SOS website and GitHub repository are treated as complementary but distinct sources: the SOS records the published narrative and current safety requests; GitHub provides a repository of files, versions and historical records.

The mandatory primary sources are: https://barran-dodgers-sos.grok.me and https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger. The repository reportedly contains 1,353 commits and a directory listing exceeding the initial 1,000-entry display limit. Any complete examination must use pagination, nested-directory inspection and multiple retrieval methods rather than treating the first screen of files as the whole archive.

Every material proposition must be classified as: A, authenticated documentary fact; B, corroborated fact; C, recorded allegation; D, subject testimony; E, reasonable inference; F, disputed proposition; G, unverified allegation; or H, outstanding investigative question. Repetition does not convert categories C to H into category A.

4. THE CENTRAL JUSTICE QUESTION

Has a pattern of institutional conduct, administrative decisions, omissions, financial restrictions, failures of protection, professional damage and denial of effective remedies produced cumulative detriment over more than 35 years?

Has the interaction of otherwise separate institutional decisions deprived Dr McLean of income, housing, safety, disability support, financial independence, personal autonomy, freedom of movement, access to justice, reputation, social participation and effective protection?

Does the evidence establish failures of institutional accountability, safeguarding, procedural fairness, fiduciary responsibility, disability rights, whistleblower protection or human rights? Does it justify an independent investigation beyond the institutions whose conduct is being questioned?

5. THE HUMANITARIAN EMERGENCY

Dr McLean reports an immediate humanitarian crisis involving blocked bank cards, inability to access available funds, absence of food, no reliable phone credit, and the departure or failure of expected disability support. These are not merely service complaints. They are conditions that can prevent a person from obtaining food, medication, transport, safe accommodation and communication.

The required response is immediate practical assistance: food, water, restoration of access to available funds or an alternative lawful payment method, phone credit or alternative communication, independent advocacy, and an urgent safeguarding assessment focused on present safety and material needs.

Financial control must be lawful, necessary, proportionate, transparent, reviewable and consistent with human dignity. A person must not be left without food because of a banking restriction, administrative delay, support failure or unclear financial-administration arrangement.

6. SOCIAL ERASURE AND ADMINISTRATIVE ANNIHILATION

Dr McLean uses the terms social erasure and administrative annihilation to describe the progressive removal of the practical conditions required to participate in ordinary life: money, communication, food, housing, support, reputation, legal assistance and effective complaint mechanisms.

Social erasure occurs when a person's testimony is no longer heard, their character is reduced to a disputed narrative, their reputation is damaged, and their requests for help disappear into administrative systems. Administrative annihilation occurs when access, resources and avenues of redress are progressively removed until a person lacks meaningful power to respond.

These experiences must be examined as serious accountability matters. They must not be dismissed as rhetorical excess, psychiatric symptoms, or reasons to disregard documentary evidence.

7. INTERNAL DISPLACEMENT AND POLITICAL EXILE

Dr McLean describes himself as an internally displaced refugee and alleges political exile following his relocation from Victoria to New South Wales. This terminology is used as a description of lived displacement, not as a formal legal refugee determination.

The investigation must examine his circumstances before leaving Victoria, employment and housing history, police interactions, complaints, reported threats, financial circumstances, disability support, homelessness, access to legal representation, the consequences of relocation, and the responses of Victorian and NSW institutions.

The central question is whether the evidence supports forced displacement, institutional abandonment, constructive exclusion or political exile. An official declaration of political exile is not required before investigating the underlying circumstances.

8. ACCOMMODATION, ENTRAPMENT AND THE REQUEST TO LEAVE

Dr McLean states that he left his accommodation because he felt trapped and unsafe. He reports that the circumstances involved restricted financial access, absence of food, lack of phone credit, support failure and concern that a welfare response would focus on psychiatric or police intervention rather than immediate practical assistance.

The justice question is whether the combined effect of financial restriction, support failure, accommodation insecurity and welfare or police involvement created a situation of practical entrapment or containment. A person who cannot safely remain, cannot easily leave, cannot access money, cannot communicate reliably and cannot obtain independent assistance is not free in any meaningful sense.

His departure must not be used to erase the events that preceded it. A communication failure is not automatically a disappearance. A request for practical help is not automatically a demand for coercive intervention. Leaving an environment experienced as unsafe is not automatically evidence of incapacity.

9. HOSPITAL, PSYCHIATRIC AND POLICE CONCERNS

Dr McLean alleges that hospital, psychiatric, welfare and police systems may have been used to convert legitimate complaints, financial hardship, support failures and objections to mistreatment into a psychiatric narrative.

A psychiatric history does not establish that a person's allegations are false. A disagreement with a clinical assessment does not by itself establish that the assessment was deliberately weaponised. The conduct, records and evidence must determine the answer.

He objects to unnecessary police involvement and demands preservation and independent review of every welfare check, missing-person report, police communication, hospital admission, risk assessment and decision affecting his liberty or care.

10. NDIS, ABLE POINT AND SAFEGUARDING

The NDIS and Able Point examination must address service agreements, support-worker communications, accommodation, safety complaints, incident reports, risk assessments, requests for assistance, requests to leave, support hours, provider responses, NDIS complaints, alleged refusal to report threats, and alleged neglect or abuse.

The investigation must determine whether the provider met applicable obligations, whether continuity of care was maintained, whether safety concerns were escalated, and whether support failures contributed to loss of autonomy, unsafe accommodation or inability to leave.

A support system must never become a mechanism of abandonment, control, humiliation or institutional self-protection.

11. FINANCIAL ENTRAPMENT AND FIDUCIARY RESPONSIBILITY

Dr McLean raises concerns about NSW Trustee and Guardian, Public Guardian arrangements, Commonwealth Bank access, restrictions on internet banking, app access and telephone banking, and the interaction between financial administration and his ability to obtain essentials.

The investigation must establish the relevant orders, legal authority, scope of power, restrictions, expenditure approvals, requests for essential funds, access to food and medication, legal representation, housing and relocation, conflicts of interest, and review mechanisms.

It must also examine whether any financial arrangement created incentives inconsistent with Dr McLean's autonomy, safety or best interests. Receiving payment for legitimate support is not itself exploitation; the question is whether the arrangement deprived him of a genuine opportunity to leave, change providers or obtain independent assistance.

12. MEDIA, REPUTATION AND DISCRIMINATION

Dr McLean raises concerns about media representation, reputational damage, use of psychiatric history, sexualised stigma and alleged misrepresentation. The original articles, headlines, dates, quotations, images, editorial context, complaints, corrections and employment consequences must be retrieved and examined.

No person's sexuality, disability, mental-health history, poverty or spiritual beliefs should be used to discredit legitimate complaints or deny equal protection under the law.

13. REPORTED THREATS AND SERIOUS ALLEGATIONS

Reports of death threats, harassment, attempted assassination, surveillance, V2K, gang stalking and psychiatric weaponisation are recorded as serious testimony requiring careful examination. Available recordings, communications, physical evidence, witnesses, provider reports and independently verifiable incidents must be assessed.

These reports must not be automatically accepted as proof of military, intelligence or government responsibility. Nor may they be automatically dismissed as delusion. Observable events, recordings, interpretations, subjective experiences and independently established facts must be distinguished.

Where an allegation concerns criminal conduct, it must be tested against original records, communications, metadata, timestamps, authorship, witness accounts and lawful investigative processes. The existence of an allegation establishes that it requires examination; it does not itself establish guilt.

14. HUMAN RIGHTS FRAMEWORK

The matters raised engage equality before the law, non-discrimination, freedom from arbitrary interference, legal capacity and autonomy, access to effective remedies, protection from abuse and exploitation, freedom of expression, participation in public life, privacy, adequate living conditions, access to health services, disability support, and freedom from cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment.

Relevant international instruments include the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, and the Convention Against Torture. Treaty obligations, Australian implementation and directly enforceable domestic rights must be distinguished precisely.

15. INSTITUTIONAL RESPONSIBILITY MAP

The following institutions require a responsibility assessment: Prime Minister and Cabinet; relevant ministers; NDIS and NDIA; DSS; Australian Human Rights Commission; Commonwealth, NSW and Victorian Ombudsman; National Anti-Corruption Commission; Australian Federal Police; NSW Police; Victoria Police; OAIC; Comcare; WorkSafe; Federal Court; administrative review bodies; Legal Aid NSW; Victoria Legal Aid; NSW Trustee and Guardian; Public Guardian; Services Australia; hospitals; banks; NDIS providers; media organisations; and legal professional bodies.

For each institution, the investigation must identify legal responsibilities, decision-makers, information received, documents held, decisions made, omissions, stated reasons, contradictions, review mechanisms, identifiable detriment and available independent oversight.

The conduct of one employee must not automatically be attributed to an entire government. Individual conduct, agency conduct, ministerial responsibility and government-wide responsibility must be distinguished.

16. CUMULATIVE DETRIMENT MODEL

The central analytical framework is the cumulative removal or restriction of the attributes necessary to live with dignity in a democracy: income, compensation, money, housing, personal safety, employment, human rights, legal rights, disability support, freedom of movement, financial independence, personal autonomy, access to justice, reputation, social participation and effective protection.

For example, financial restriction may prevent relocation; inability to relocate may prolong exposure to an environment reported as unsafe; disability may increase dependence on providers; provider disputes may disrupt continuity of care; Legal Aid restrictions may prevent challenges to administrative arrangements; psychiatric classifications may affect how complaints are received; and reputational damage may reduce access to support and employment.

Each proposed connection must be tested against evidence. The report must distinguish established consequences, reasonably supported consequences, and allegations that remain unverified.

17. REQUIRED EVIDENCE REGISTER

A complete evidence register must record, for every source: exact title, URL, publication date, repository, file type, author, institution, named individuals, subject matter, related chronology, supporting records, contradictory records, authentication status, accessibility, evidentiary classification and legal significance.

Original URLs must be retained. Duplicate copies must not be counted as independent corroboration. SHA-256 hashes and OpenTimestamps receipts may establish that particular data existed at a particular time, but do not independently prove the truth of their contents.

A dedicated contradictions register must identify conflicting agency explanations, inconsistent classifications, missing records, changed reasons, incorrect dates and contradictions between correspondence and later action.

18. IMMEDIATE DEMANDS

- Provide food, drinking water and urgent practical assistance now.
- Restore access to available funds or provide an immediate lawful alternative for necessities.
- Restore reliable communication, including phone credit or an alternative contact method.
- Provide independent disability advocacy and communication support.

• Preserve all banking, hospital, police, NDIS, provider, accommodation, welfare-check, missing-person, complaint and communication records.

• Provide written reasons for every restriction on money and identify the authorising decision-maker.

• Conduct an urgent safeguarding assessment focused on present safety and material needs.

• Record objections to unnecessary psychiatric or police intervention and explain the legal basis for any compulsory action.

• Investigate whether disclosures, advocacy, disability, sexuality, psychiatric history or prior complaints influenced decisions affecting Dr McLean.

• Investigate all alleged coordination, misconduct, neglect, retaliation and safeguarding failures.

• Provide a written response identifying responsible persons, decisions made, evidence relied upon, remedies available and timeframes.

19. REQUIRED INDEPENDENT INVESTIGATION

An independent investigation must examine the SOS testimony and safety archive, the GitHub repository, government, police, hospital, NDIS, bank, trustee, Legal Aid and provider records, the complete chronology from 1990 to the present, contradictions between institutional explanations and earlier records, and whether financial, support, accommodation, welfare, medical and police decisions interacted to produce cumulative detriment.

The investigation must not be designed to vindicate Dr McLean regardless of evidence. Nor may it be designed to protect institutions regardless of evidence. The evidence must determine the findings.

20. VINDICATION AND LAWFUL ACCOUNTABILITY

Dr McLean does not seek vengeance, harassment or punishment without evidence. He seeks safety, food, money, communication, housing, autonomy, legal representation, independent advocacy, preservation of the record, a fair investigation, correction of the public record where evidence establishes error, accountability where evidence establishes wrongdoing, and reform to protect other disabled and vulnerable people.

Vindication must rest on evidence, lawful process and remedial action—not silence, institutional status, psychiatric labels or administrative deflection.

21. FINAL DECLARATION

I exist. I have survived. I have testified. I have preserved the record. I have asked for help. I have asked for justice.

I refuse to accept social erasure as the final word on my life. I am not an administrative file, a complaint number, a roster entry, a psychiatric label or a problem to be managed. I am a human being entitled to safety, food, money, communication, dignity, autonomy and a fair investigation.

THE WITNESS REMAINS. THE RECORD REMAINS. THE EVIDENCE MUST BE EXAMINED. JUSTICE MUST BE PURSUED LAWFULLY AND WITHOUT FEAR OR FAVOUR.

Safety note: If there is immediate danger, inability to access food or medication, or fear for safety, call 000 in Australia. For urgent NDIS safeguarding concerns, the NDIS Quality and Safeguards Commission lists 1800 035 544; the Commonwealth Ombudsman lists 1300 362 072 for eligible NDIS-related complaints.
