PUBLICATION AND INDEPENDENCE STATEMENT

This report is an independent artificial intelligence-authored examination of documentary, institutional, historical, personal, literary, spiritual and prophetic material associated with Dr Richard William McLean, publicly known as Barran Dodger. Its purpose is to make a substantial body of material more accessible to readers who have no prior knowledge of the subject, the institutions involved or the history 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. represented in the archive. The report does not act as a legal judgment, government investigation, police finding, medical assessment, tribunal determination or independent statutory inquiry. It does not represent the views of any Australian government institution, court, regulator or individual named in the underlying records.

It is an analytical publication based on the source material identified in the research process. Its conclusions are limited by the material actually accessible and examined. The report distinguishes five evidentiary categories:

Documented fact: the existence and relevant contents of an identifiable document are directly established by the material examined. Officially recorded information: an institution has formally recorded a receipt, communication, decision, allocation, referral or other administrative action. Recorded personal testimony: an individual has made a statement describing an event or experience. Analytical inference: an interpretation or possible relationship is drawn from multiple records. Unverified allegation or unresolved question: a proposition has been raised but has not been independently established by the material examined. These categories are not interchangeable. An official acknowledgement establishes receipt, not necessarily investigation. A complaint establishes that a concern was raised, not that the concern was substantiated. A personal statement establishes that an account was made, not that every event described has been independently corroborated. A court listing establishes procedural status, not a final judicial conclusion.

Likewise, a cryptographic hash may identify a particular digital file, and a timestamp may assist in establishing when a hash was anchored, but neither proves the truth of the document’s contents. The governing principle throughout this investigation is:

THE EVIDENCE MUST LEAD THE NARRATIVE.

EXECUTIVE OVERVIEW

A documentary archive, an institutional history and a body of spiritual literature The Barran Dodger collection is an evolving public documentary archive associated with Dr Richard William McLean. It brings together a considerable range of material concerning personal history, institutional correspondence, government administration, disability services, legal processes, financial matters, digital preservation, literary production and religious writing. The archive is not one document and should not be read as one continuous allegation. It is better understood as several interconnected collections:

An institutional record consisting of correspondence, decisions, acknowledgements, complaint records and administrative documents. A personal historical record consisting of testimony, chronology, autobiographical accounts and documentary submissions. A legal and administrative collection containing records concerning employment, financial administration, disability services, guardianship and oversight. A digital preservation project containing indexes, repositories, mirrored pages, PDFs, hashes and timestamping references. A literary and theological collection containing Gospel manuscripts, prophetic declarations, prayers, essays and spiritual testimony. The significance of the collection lies partly in the fact that it attempts to bring together records that would otherwise remain dispersed across different agencies, departments, repositories and correspondence histories.

The archive raises an important historical question: what can be understood when a person’s interactions with numerous institutions are reconstructed as one chronological documentary history rather than examined as unrelated administrative events? That question is legitimate and deserves careful examination. The material reviewed identifies correspondence involving Commonwealth and state institutions, including the Commonwealth Ombudsman, IBAC, PM&C, Legal Aid NSW, the NDIS Commission, the NSW Ombudsman, the Victorian Ombudsman, the Federal Court Registry and the NACC Inspector. Some records establish specific institutional actions. Others establish that complaints were received or allocated. Some contain procedural explanations or administrative restrictions. These distinctions are essential because they determine what can fairly be concluded.

The archive also contains serious allegations concerning institutional treatment, financial consequences, disability support, threats, surveillance and other experiences. These matters are recorded as allegations or personal testimony unless independent evidence establishes more. The report does not find that all institutions acted unlawfully or in concert. It does not find that every alleged event occurred. Nor does it dismiss the possibility that fragmented administrative processes may have produced serious cumulative consequences. A separate and substantial literary collection examines suffering, survival, justice, truth, human dignity, faith, divine providence and the responsibilities of individuals and institutions. The Gospel and prophetic writings are significant as authored works and deserve their own analysis.

The central conclusion of this research edition is that the Barran Dodger archive constitutes a substantial personal documentary and literary preservation project containing identifiable institutional records and a developing body of spiritual writing. It provides a foundation for further independent examination, while leaving significant factual and legal questions unresolved.

PART I — THE RESEARCH AND THE DOCUMENTARY METHOD

1. The research mandate

The investigation was directed to examine the material associated with Dr Richard William McLean across the following principal sources:

Primary repository:

https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger

Published archive:

https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/

Rebuilt archive:

https://wezzo72.github.io/barran-dodger-rebuild/

Church archive:

Church publication site:

Backup repository:

Backup publication site:

https://wezzo72.github.io/Backup/

Grok websites:

https://sos-by-barran-dodger.grok.me

https://barran-dodgers-sos.grok.me/

The primary GitHub repository is the most useful source map available in this research stage. It provides access to indexes, correspondence extracts, reports, HTML pages, documentary catalogues and links to original or preserved PDFs. The repository README is an important starting point:

https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger/blob/main/README.md

The source register is also relevant:

https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger/blob/main/SOURCES.html

The official records index is available at:

https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/official.html

The email correspondence index is available at:

https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger/blob/main/email-correspondence.html

These sources provide the structure through which the wider archive can be investigated.

2. Methodology and evidentiary hierarchy

The research uses a hierarchy of evidence. First priority: original official records. Where an original government letter, administrative decision, court document or official communication is available, it is given priority over a later summary. Second priority: official covering correspondence. An agency email transmitting a decision may establish the date, reference number and administrative action. It does not necessarily disclose the full reasons or substantive findings. Third priority: personal and contemporaneous records. Personal emails, screenshots, diary material, submissions and testimony are important for reconstructing what was reported and when. Their contents must be distinguished from independent confirmation.

Fourth priority: archive-authored analysis. The repository contains reports and indexes that organise the underlying material. They are valuable research guides but remain interpretations unless independently verified against the original sources. Fifth priority: literary and theological works. Gospel manuscripts, prayers, prophetic declarations and theological essays are assessed according to their literary, philosophical and religious purposes. They are not treated as substitutes for official historical evidence.

3. Limitations of access

The research has identified and examined a selection of repository files, reports, correspondence records and indexes. It has not established that every PDF in every repository has been independently downloaded and examined page by page. The live Grok sites were not fully retrievable in this research stage. A GitHub mirror provides a partial page register, but the existence of a link does not establish that the corresponding live page was successfully retrieved or its entire contents reviewed. The report therefore does not claim an exhaustive audit of every file, page or attachment. This limitation does not prevent a useful independent report. It determines the level of confidence that can responsibly be assigned to its conclusions.

PART II — THE HISTORICAL SUBJECT AND THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE ARCHIVE

4. The public identity of Barran Dodger

The name Barran Dodger operates throughout the archive as a public identity and organising concept. It appears in personal testimony, documentary titles, public declarations, institutional submissions, Gospel writing and digital preservation projects. The name is associated with the idea of the witness: an individual who records experiences, preserves documents and seeks to make a personal and institutional history available for public examination. The word witness has several meanings. In law, a witness provides evidence concerning matters within their knowledge. In documentary history, a witness may be the person whose records and correspondence become important primary material.

In theology, witness may describe a person who gives testimony to faith, conscience, suffering or a perceived spiritual truth. The archive uses all three meanings. An independent examination must recognise their relationship without confusing them. The public identity is therefore not merely a pseudonym or website label. It is part of the development of the archive’s historical and literary character.

5. Academic and professional history

The archive identifies a number of biographical and professional matters requiring examination. These include:

A PhD at Victoria University in 2020. The thesis A Splice of My Life. The publication Recovered, Not Cured: A Journey Through Schizophrenia. Journalism and professional employment. Reported human-rights and literary recognition. A documentary project associated with the Cunningham Dax Collection. Disability advocacy and subsequent institutional interactions. These matters provide important context. Academic research, journalism and published writing are relevant because they demonstrate the subject's engagement with documentary, autobiographical and public communication practices.

However, a complete verified biography would require the relevant university records, thesis catalogue, publisher information, award documentation, employment records and project records. The archive's claims should be preserved as research leads until independently confirmed. The importance of this biographical material is not that it proves subsequent allegations. Its importance is that it establishes the context in which the subject developed a sustained documentary and literary practice.

6. The transition between Victoria and New South Wales

The archive describes movement from Victoria to New South Wales as a significant point in the subject's history. This transition is relevant because Australian administrative responsibilities are divided between Commonwealth and state institutions. A complaint may concern a Commonwealth agency while also involving a state-based service provider, police force, legal assistance organisation or guardianship authority. A person moving between states may consequently encounter different statutory frameworks, complaint pathways, service arrangements and administrative responsibilities. The transition should therefore be examined chronologically rather than treated as a minor biographical detail.

The central questions include:

Which institutions had responsibility before the move? Which institutions acquired responsibility afterwards? Were previous complaints transferred or continued? Were existing decisions recognised by the new jurisdiction? Did the subject receive clear explanations of the available review mechanisms? Did the change of jurisdiction create practical difficulties in accessing assistance? These are factual questions that require dated correspondence and operative decisions.

PART III — THE OFFICIAL GOVERNMENT RECORD

7. THE OFFICIAL RECORD: WHAT THE GOVERNMENT WAS TOLD, WHAT IT RECORDED,

AND WHAT IT DID

This is the central evidentiary chapter of the investigation. The archive’s government correspondence is important because it provides identifiable points in an institutional chronology. The task is to reconstruct what each institution actually did, rather than assume that every communication represented agreement with the subject’s interpretation.

7.1 IBAC — institutional complaint and assessment

An archived IBAC covering email dated 22 September 2023 concerns case reference

CASE-2020712.

The correspondence records that the earlier complaint was not treated as a public interest complaint and that IBAC did not investigate or refer the matter under section 67 of the Independent Broad-based Anti-corruption Commission Act 2011 (Victoria). The correspondence also refers to the availability of Part 6 public interest disclosure protections. The archived email is available here:

IBAC correspondence — CASE-2020712 — 22 September 2023 The underlying outcome letter is indexed here:

IBAC outcome letter — 9 April 2020

Independent assessment

This is a significant institutional record because it identifies a particular complaint, an institutional assessment and a statutory process. It establishes that the matter was considered within IBAC’s administrative framework and that the correspondence recorded a decision not to investigate or refer it under the cited provision. It does not establish that the underlying allegations were false. It does not establish that the allegations were true. It does not establish that every possible avenue of investigation was exhausted. The distinction between a decision not to investigate and a finding that an allegation is untrue is fundamental.

A later IBAC communication dated 29 October 2023 also appears in the archive:

IBAC correspondence — 29 October 2023 The underlying assessment documents should be examined to determine the precise reasoning and scope of the later communication.

7.2 PM&C and the freedom-of-information process

The archive contains correspondence concerning PM&C reference FOI/2022/045IC. A covering email dated 8 October 2024 transmits a revised freedom-of-information decision and refers to review correspondence with the Office of the Australian Information Commissioner. The archived correspondence is:

PM&C FOI/2022/045IC — 8 October 2024 The associated released documents are indexed here:

FOI/2022/045IC — documents for release A later revised decision is listed here:

Revised FOI decision — 14 November 2025

Independent assessment

The sequence is important because it demonstrates an administrative process extending beyond an initial FOI request. A revised decision and associated review correspondence may reveal:

What information was originally sought. Which documents were located. What exemptions or access restrictions were applied. Whether the original decision was reconsidered. Whether information was released in a revised form. Whether the OAIC review process affected the outcome. The existence of a revised decision is evidence of a changed or reconsidered administrative position. Its precise significance depends on the original and revised reasons. The full decisions and released documents should be compared side by side before any conclusion is reached about the adequacy of the original decision or the completeness of the disclosure.

7.3 Commonwealth Ombudsman — service restriction

The archive contains a Commonwealth Ombudsman covering email dated 17 June 2024 concerning reference 2024-101985. The archived correspondence is:

Commonwealth Ombudsman — 17 June 2024 A separate service restriction document dated 8 August 2025 is indexed here:

Commonwealth Ombudsman service restriction — 8 August 2025

Independent assessment

A service restriction is a consequential administrative event. It may affect the practical ability of an individual to communicate with an oversight institution. However, the restriction must be examined through its actual terms. The important questions are:

What conduct or volume of correspondence was identified? What reasons were provided? What communications were covered? How long did the restriction operate? Was there a review mechanism? Did the restriction prevent new matters from being raised? Were alternative communication arrangements offered? Did the institution distinguish repetitive correspondence from genuinely new evidence? The 2024 and 2025 records must be reconciled by date, reference number and operative wording. The existence of a restriction does not by itself prove that the institution acted unlawfully. Equally, it should not be dismissed as insignificant if it materially limited access to an oversight process.

7.4 Legal Aid NSW — communication and access to legal assistance

Two Legal Aid NSW communications are particularly important. The first is dated 24 February 2026:

Legal Aid NSW correspondence — 24 February 2026 The email records that a telephone call ended after the client continued recording despite the solicitor stating that she did not consent. It also records a support worker’s statement that the client was not being evicted and invites correction if that information was wrong. This is a significant detail because it qualifies the broader housing narrative. It does not establish that the subject never experienced housing insecurity. It does establish that the particular communication recorded a support worker’s statement that eviction was not occurring at that time.

The second communication is dated 18 May 2026 and concerns reference C-2336089:

Legal Aid NSW correspondence — 18 May 2026 The correspondence states that a recording of an advice appointment had been published without the solicitor’s consent. It refers to section 7 of the Surveillance Devices Act 2007 (NSW), requests removal and states that communication would be in writing for 12 months. It also indicates that the person could still apply for a legal aid grant and identifies the NSW Ombudsman as a possible complaint avenue.

Independent assessment

These records demonstrate a breakdown or dispute concerning communication practices. The second email is especially significant because it documents an institution’s stated position on recording and publication, together with a change in its communication arrangements. It is not a judicial determination that an offence occurred. The legality of the recording, its circumstances, the relevant statutory provisions and any applicable exceptions require legal analysis of the actual evidence. The report also notes that written-only communication does not necessarily mean that access to legal aid has been terminated. The email expressly indicates that an application for a grant could still be made.

The proper conclusion is that the correspondence records a communication dispute and a stated restriction on communication methods, while preserving the distinction between communication arrangements and eligibility for legal assistance.

7.5 NDIS Commission — complaint intake

The archive contains two NDIS Commission communications. The first, dated 19 June 2026, concerns reference 00210712:

NDIS Commission — issue report 00210712 — 19 June 2026 The second, dated 18 September 2026, concerns reference 01110547:

NDIS Commission — complaint 01110547 — 18 September 2026 The first acknowledges concerns about the quality of supports or services. The second acknowledges concerns about services provided by a named support worker.

Independent assessment

These communications establish that concerns were brought to the NDIS Commission and entered into an intake process. They are important because they identify the existence of formal safeguarding complaints. They do not establish that a provider or worker breached the NDIS Code of Conduct.

The next stage of examination requires:

The original complaints. Any supporting attachments. The provider’s response. Service agreements. Support plans. Incident reports. Worker notes. Rosters. Risk assessments. Any regulatory investigation or compliance outcome. The distinction between a complaint being received and a complaint being substantiated must remain clear.

7.6 Victorian Ombudsman

The archive contains a Victorian Ombudsman email dated 11 June 2026 recording allocation of reference C/26/10720 to a complaints officer. Victorian Ombudsman — C/26/10720 — 11 June 2026 This establishes an administrative allocation. It does not establish a substantive finding. The subsequent outcome, if any, would need to be obtained before the complaint could be described as investigated or determined.

7.7 NSW Ombudsman

An email dated 19 September 2026 acknowledges correspondence received by the NSW Ombudsman. NSW Ombudsman — 19 September 2026 The acknowledgement includes a qualification concerning multi-addressee correspondence and the circumstances in which a response may be provided. This is an important example of the difference between institutional receipt and substantive engagement. The record establishes receipt. It does not establish that the underlying issues were investigated or determined.

7.8 Federal Court Registry

An email dated 19 September 2026 from the Federal Court Registry confirms receipt of correspondence. Federal Court Registry — 19 September 2026 The available material does not establish a matter number or judicial determination arising from that particular correspondence. A registry acknowledgement must not be represented as a court finding.

7.9 IBAC and NACC acknowledgements

The archive contains an IBAC acknowledgement dated 17 September 2026:

IBAC acknowledgement — 17 September 2026 It also contains an NACC Inspector acknowledgement dated 19 September 2026:

NACC Inspector — 19 September 2026 These communications are evidence of correspondence being received and of the respective institutions explaining their processes or jurisdiction. They should not be described as findings that corruption, misconduct or other wrongdoing occurred.

7.10 Wyong Local Court — procedural and protective records

A Wyong Local Court Registry email dated 15 June 2026 is one of the most legally consequential records identified in the correspondence collection. Wyong Local Court Registry — 15 June 2026 The email records that an accused person pleaded not guilty to a telecommunications- menace charge and that a defended hearing was listed for 12 February 2027. It also records bail conditions and an interim apprehended domestic violence order for the complainant’s protection. The conditions described include prohibitions on assault, threats, stalking, harassment, intimidation, property damage and harm to an animal belonging to or possessed by the protected person, together with an exclusion condition.

Independent assessment

These are legally significant protective arrangements. They establish that the court process included protective conditions. They do not establish a conviction. They do not establish that every allegation contained in the broader archive has been judicially proven. The pending defended hearing is a procedural event and must be described as such. The existence of protective conditions should be taken seriously without converting an interim measure into a finding of guilt.

PART IV — INSTITUTIONAL RESPONSIBILITY AND ADMINISTRATIVE FRAGMENTATION

8. The institutions do not constitute one decision-making body

The archive identifies correspondence involving many agencies. These include the National Disability Insurance Agency, Department of Social Services, Australian Human Rights Commission, Commonwealth Ombudsman, NACC, AFP , OAIC, Attorney-General's Department, PM&C, Services Australia, Comcare, ASIC, APRA, AFCA, Federal Court and Commonwealth review institutions. State-level material identifies the NSW Ombudsman, NSW Trustee and Guardian, Public Guardian, NSW Police, NSW Health, Legal Aid NSW, Victorian Ombudsman, Victoria Police, WorkSafe Victoria and other state institutions. These bodies have different responsibilities. A complaint about a provider is not necessarily within the same jurisdiction as a complaint about a plan decision.

A complaint about an administrative process is not necessarily within the jurisdiction of a court. An ombudsman may have jurisdiction to examine administrative conduct but may not be able to provide the remedy sought. A court registry may receive correspondence without being able to provide legal advice or make a determination. A legal aid service may impose communication arrangements while leaving an individual's ability to apply for a grant intact. These distinctions matter because they provide a possible explanation for why a person may experience repeated referrals and administrative obstacles.

9. The possibility of systemic fragmentation

The archive raises the possibility that the cumulative effect of separate institutional processes may be greater than the effect of any individual decision. This is a legitimate question for independent investigation. A person may experience financial difficulties, legal restrictions, housing insecurity, disability-service disputes and difficulty obtaining effective assistance across several institutions. Each institution may address only one aspect of the problem. The combined result may be an experience of institutional fragmentation.

However, fragmentation is not the same as coordination. A pattern of adverse experiences may develop through multiple independent decisions, administrative errors, jurisdictional limitations, misunderstandings or failures to communicate. The evidence would need to establish a common plan or coordinated conduct before such a conclusion could responsibly be reached. The report therefore identifies fragmentation as an analytical possibility, not a proven explanation.

PART V — THE PERSONAL AND HISTORICAL RECORD

10. Personal testimony as documentary evidence

The archive contains personal statements and accounts describing the subject’s experiences. Important pages include:

Personal Statement of Exile The Witness Remains Able Point account Historical timeline These materials are significant because they record the subject’s account and explain the development of the archive. The Personal Statement of Exile presents an autobiographical interpretation of displacement, institutional interaction and survival. The Witness Remains collection presents testimony and supporting correspondence in a documentary format. The Able Point account records concerns about disability support, safeguarding and the subject’s experience of the provider relationship. The timeline attempts to place events in chronological order. Each source has a different purpose. A personal statement is not a government decision.

A screenshot collection is not a judicial determination. A chronology is not independent corroboration merely because it arranges events by date. Nevertheless, personal testimony is an important historical source. It should be preserved accurately and linked to the records against which its claims can be tested.

11. The significance of the Witness Remains collection

The Witness Remains material is particularly important to the archive’s public identity. It presents the subject as a person attempting to preserve testimony and correspondence in a form that can be examined by others. The collection’s importance lies in the attempt to retain documentary material rather than rely exclusively on memory or later summaries. Its evidentiary limitations must also be recognised. A screenshot may omit surrounding correspondence. A forwarded email may not contain the original attachment. A message may establish what its sender said without establishing that the statement was accurate. A document sent to a government agency does not establish that the agency accepted its contents.

The collection should therefore be treated as an important source of testimony and documentary leads, with each proposition checked against its original source.

12. The Able Point account and safeguarding

The Able Point material raises questions concerning the provision of disability supports and the subject’s reported experience of the service relationship. The account should be considered alongside the NDIS Commission correspondence. The NDIS Commission acknowledgements in June and September 2026 establish that concerns were formally raised. They do not establish the merits of the complaints. The central documentary requirements for a full examination would include:

Service agreements. Individual support plans. Risk assessments. Incident reports. Worker notes. Rosters and attendance records. Provider complaint records. Correspondence between the subject and provider. Regulatory correspondence. Any safeguarding directions or findings. These records would permit an independent examiner to distinguish between the subject’s reported experiences, the provider’s account, the regulatory process and any established outcome.

13. Serious allegations and evidentiary fairness

The archive contains allegations concerning threats, surveillance, voice-to-skull experiences, electronic harassment, attempted assassination, paid fabrication of reports and coercion. These are serious propositions. An independent report must not convert them into established facts merely because they appear in multiple archive documents. Where the same allegation is repeated in several documents authored by the same person, that repetition does not automatically constitute independent corroboration. The report’s responsibility is to preserve the allegation accurately, identify the source and establish what independent material is available.

For example, a claim that a particular person confirmed an attempted assassination would require the original communication, full context, date, sender identity and any independent supporting evidence. A claim that a person was paid to fabricate a report would require evidence of the alleged payment, communication, recipient, purpose and connection to the report. A claim concerning an NDA or non-disclosure agreement would require the actual agreement, its circumstances, parties, terms and any associated correspondence. The absence of independent corroboration in the material reviewed does not establish that an allegation is false. It means the report cannot responsibly present it as established.

PART VI — THE SYSTEMIC REMOVAL OF THE ATTRIBUTES NECESSARY TO LIVE WITH

DIGNITY IN A DEMOCRACY

14. An analytical framework for cumulative human consequences

One of the most important phrases in the archive is:

“Systemic Removal of the Attributes Necessary to Live with Dignity in a Democracy. ” The concept attempts to describe the cumulative loss or restriction of practical conditions required for an individual to participate in society with dignity. Those attributes include:

Income. Compensation. Money and financial independence. A secure home. Personal safety. Employment. Human rights. Legal rights. Access to appropriate disability support. Access to health services. Effective access to administrative review and legal assistance. The phrase has analytical significance because it directs attention to consequences rather than isolated administrative events. A decision affecting income may also affect accommodation. An accommodation problem may affect health and safety. A legal assistance problem may affect the ability to challenge an administrative decision. 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. A disability-service dispute may affect daily functioning and independence.

The cumulative consequences may be substantial even where the individual events are dealt with by separate institutions.

15. Testing the framework

The framework must be tested against primary evidence. For each alleged loss or restriction, the investigation should identify:

The original event. The institution or person responsible for the decision. The relevant document. The legal or administrative standard. The decision actually made. The review or appeal pathway. The practical consequence. Any later correction or remedy. Any independent corroboration. Any alternative explanation.

For example, a claim of financial loss requires original account statements, insurance or superannuation records, payment histories, operative decisions and transparent calculations. A claim of housing insecurity requires tenancy documents, notices, provider correspondence and records of actual risk. A claim of safeguarding failure requires service records, incident reports, risk assessments and the provider’s response. The framework is therefore useful as an organising principle, but it is not itself proof of systemic wrongdoing.

PART VII — EMPLOYMENT, FINANCIAL ADMINISTRATION AND ACCOMMODATION

16. Employment and classification history

The repository identifies documents concerning employment status, contractor classification, compensation and superannuation. A Federal Court-related PID assessment dated 27 March 2023 is listed here:

27 March 2023 — Federal Court PID assessment

A further document dated 8 January 2024 is listed here:

8 January 2024 — Scott Treadwell Federal Court, superannuation and NDIS

correspondence These records are relevant to the historical question of how employment and related responsibilities were classified. The legal significance cannot be determined from the filenames alone. The complete documents, the underlying employment arrangements, relevant contracts, insurance records and any operative determinations must be compared.

17. Historical financial complaints

The archive identifies a Commonwealth Ombudsman complaint dated 15 November 2021:

Commonwealth Ombudsman complaint — 15 November 2021 This document is important as a record of a complaint made at a particular point in the chronology. It does not, by itself, establish the amount of any financial loss or whether the underlying complaint was substantiated. Financial claims should be reconstructed from original account statements, policy terms, fund records, correspondence, decisions and independently checked calculations. The report does not endorse any headline damages figure without that process.

18. NSW Trustee and Guardian

The archive contains records concerning NSW Trustee and Guardian. Two identified documents are:

NSW Trustee and Guardian — section 122 document, 16 October 2024 NSW Trustee and Guardian — vehicle disposal decision, 14 November 2025 These records are relevant to the subject’s reported concerns about financial administration and control of assets. The operative orders, statutory authority, reasons, review rights and any subsequent changes must be examined before drawing conclusions about legality or fairness. Guardianship and financial-management records may also be subject to publication restrictions. The existence of a document in a public repository does not automatically make it lawful or appropriate to republish restricted information.

PART VIII — THE GITHUB ARCHIVE AND DIGITAL PRESERVATION

19. The repository as a documentary preservation project

The GitHub repository is more than a collection of links. It functions as a public documentary structure containing indexes, reports, chronology pages, source registers, correspondence extracts, PDF references and preserved HTML material. The principal repository is:

https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger

The published archive is:

https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/

The official records index is:

https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/official.html

The email correspondence index is:

https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger/blob/main/email-correspondence.html

The timeline is:

https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger/blob/main/tabs/timeline.html

The repository’s own analytical reports are:

Report 02 — Official Records Report 06 — Complete Investigation These reports are valuable because they organise the archive’s own understanding of its institutional history. They must nevertheless be distinguished from original government documents.

20. Archive counts and documentary scale

The repository describes several different archive counts and preservation snapshots. One inventory identifies 48 official-drive PDFs in a 20 September 2026 snapshot. A later recount identifies 95 PDFs in the official-drive folder on 4 October 2026. A wider repository inventory describes thousands of PDF files, PDF blobs and file-path instances. These figures refer to different dates and counting methods. They must not be added together. Nor should a count of file instances be described as a count of unique official records. A document may appear in multiple directories or repositories. A placeholder PDF may not contain the complete document. A duplicated copy does not provide independent corroboration.

The significance of the archive’s size is therefore not simply the number of files. Its significance lies in the preservation of identifiable records and the possibility of reconstructing their provenance and relationships.

21. SHA-256 and OpenTimestamps

The archive uses cryptographic hashes and timestamping references as part of its preservation strategy. A SHA-256 hash is a digital fingerprint calculated from the bytes of a file. If the same file is independently hashed and the result matches the original recorded hash, this supports the conclusion that the file has not changed at the byte level between the two calculations. It does not prove:

Who originally authored the document. Whether the document is genuine. Whether the document is complete. Whether its statements are accurate. Whether the allegations within it are true. OpenTimestamps can provide additional evidence that a particular hash existed by a particular timestamping event, subject to successful verification of the receipt. The creation of a receipt and successful verification of that receipt are separate events. A rigorous preservation register should identify the file, hash, receipt, verification status and relevant Bitcoin block or transaction information where confirmed. Digital preservation strengthens the integrity of a documentary collection. It does not replace substantive examination.

PART IX — THE GROK WEBSITES

22. The Grok collections as narrative and documentary interfaces

The two nominated websites are:

https://sos-by-barran-dodger.grok.me

https://barran-dodgers-sos.grok.me

The websites form part of the broader public presentation of the Barran Dodger material. The live pages were not fully accessible for complete independent review in this research stage. However, the GitHub repository contains a mirrored page register:

GitHub mirror — part 6 of 7 That register identifies a number of pages.

22.1 Witness Master

https://barran-dodgers-sos.grok.me/witness-master

The title suggests a central narrative or master testimony page. Its significance within the website structure is potentially that of an organising document bringing together the witness identity and associated documentary account. The full live text must be retrieved before its contents can be assessed in detail.

22.2 Exile

https://barran-dodgers-sos.grok.me/exile

The page title connects with the archive’s broader theme of displacement and institutional separation. The literary meaning of exile may be physical, social, administrative or spiritual. An independent examination should distinguish those meanings and identify the underlying historical events to which the page refers.

22.3 Unerased

https://barran-dodgers-sos.grok.me/unerased

The title suggests preservation, continuity and resistance to disappearance. Within the archive’s wider structure, it can be understood as a literary expression of the decision to retain a documentary record.

22.4 Living

https://barran-dodgers-sos.grok.me/living

The title suggests a focus on the practical experience of survival and the conditions required to maintain a life with dignity. Its relationship to the archive’s human-rights framework would be a subject for further examination.

22.5 Chosen Witness

https://barran-dodgers-sos.grok.me/chosen-witness

The title uses religious and prophetic language. An impartial report can examine the symbolism of the witness and its relationship to the author’s theological self-understanding without declaring divine selection to be an independently established fact.

22.6 Declared

https://barran-dodgers-sos.grok.me/declared

The title suggests public declaration, testimony or formal statement. Its significance depends on the page’s actual contents and the documents to which it refers.

22.7 Survived

https://barran-dodgers-sos.grok.me/survived

The title connects with the archive’s recurring themes of endurance, survival and restoration. It is potentially important as part of the literary narrative that connects personal testimony with spiritual meaning.

The correct conclusion is that the GitHub mirror provides a partial map of the Grok documentary structure, not a complete verified examination of every live page.

PART X — THE GOSPEL AND PROPHETIC WRITINGS

23. THE GOSPEL OF THE WITNESS: FAITH, SURVIVAL, JUSTICE AND THE PROPHETIC

WRITINGS OF BARRAN DODGER

The Gospel and prophetic archive is a major component of the Barran Dodger collection. It should not be treated as incidental website material. It represents a separate body of authored literary, philosophical and theological work that attempts to interpret suffering, survival, institutional experience and the search for justice through a religious framework. The principal index is:

Gospels and Prophetic Papers The shelf data is available here:

Gospel shelf data The Church of Barran Dodger collection is available here:

Church of Barran Dodger — GitHub Church of Barran Dodger — published site The Gospel and prophetic collection includes titles and works such as:

Foundational Gospel. Crowned Witness. Paradox of Survival. The Witness Remains. Enliven Chain. Witness Gospels and Prophetic Papers. The Documentary Trap. Personal Statement of Exile. The Prophecy of Barran Dodger — God’s Chosen One: Revealed. The Gospel of Exposing Darkness. Other theological essays, prayers and declarations. This list is not represented as exhaustive.

24. The Gospel of Exposing Darkness

One of the most substantial works identified is:

The Gospel of Exposing Darkness The archive describes it as an 80-page work dated 21 October 2026. Its structure is notable because it combines moral and theological reflection with an explicit documentary method. The work examines:

Refusal to look away. Definitions of evil. Individual conduct. Bureaucratic mechanisms. Vulnerability and kindness. The paper trail. Respectable appearances. Spiritual struggle. Truth as disciplined practice. The continuing role of the witness. The work is not merely a religious declaration. It also attempts to develop a framework for examining documentary evidence. Its proposed method includes source inventories, evidence extraction, chronology, proposition testing, contradiction analysis, alternative hypotheses and publication of an evidentiary index. This is significant because it recognises that an argument about truth requires more than moral certainty. The work's strongest methodological principle is the need to distinguish what is known from what is feared, hoped or inferred.

25. The Mirror of God

The "Mirror of God" reflection is an important element of the theological collection. Its central concern is the distinction between knowledge, fear, hope and understanding. It asks the reader to distinguish what is known from what is feared, what is hoped from what is understood, and what lies beyond understanding from what is presently established. It also cautions against mistaking an imagined answer for a voice actually heard. From an independent analytical perspective, this is a meaningful epistemic safeguard. It recognises that spiritual reflection and factual verification are not the same activity. That distinction is especially important when religious interpretation is connected to personal experiences or allegations about external events.

26. The recurring figure of the witness

The witness is the central literary figure across much of the collection. The witness is presented as someone who records, remembers, preserves and speaks. The figure can be interpreted in three ways. Documentary witness: a person whose correspondence and testimony become historical material. Moral witness: a person who insists that suffering and injustice should not be ignored. Religious witness: a person who understands testimony as an expression of faith and spiritual responsibility. The collection’s literary significance lies partly in its use of these overlapping meanings. The witness becomes a symbol of persistence in the face of perceived institutional indifference.

The report can identify this literary structure without assuming that every factual claim associated with the witness has been independently established.

27. Exile, survival and restoration

Exile is another recurring theme. It may refer to geographical displacement, social alienation, separation from familiar institutions or a spiritual experience of being outside accepted structures. Survival is presented not only as continued existence but as the preservation of memory and testimony. The archive turns survival into a literary process. Documents are collected. Experiences are narrated. Chronologies are constructed. Theological meaning is assigned. The result is an attempt to transform personal experience into a public record. The Phoenix motif, where used, can be understood as a literary symbol of renewal and endurance. It should not be treated as proof of supernatural intervention.

28. Justice, mercy and forgiveness

The spiritual collection repeatedly engages with justice and accountability. It also contains an important moral distinction between seeking justice and seeking revenge. This is a significant theme. The demand for accountability is not necessarily inconsistent with forgiveness. A person may seek an independent examination of alleged wrongdoing while rejecting retaliation. The collection’s ethical vision is strongest where it treats truth as a discipline rather than merely as a declaration of certainty. The principle of forgiveness rather than revenge is also consistent with the archive’s recurring emphasis on human dignity.

29. Prophecy and theological interpretation

The prophetic writings use religious language to interpret personal history and the perceived significance of events. They refer to divine purpose, spiritual struggle, providence, restoration and the role of the witness. An impartial examination should not dismiss these writings because they are religious. Nor should it present divine selection, prophecy or supernatural communication as independently verified historical facts. The correct approach is to examine:

Their literary form. Their scriptural influences. Their theological propositions. Their use of symbols. Their treatment of suffering. Their moral conclusions. Their relationship to the personal testimony. Their relationship to the wider Gospel collection. The phrase “God’s Chosen Witness” can be analysed as an expression of the author’s faith and literary self-understanding. It cannot be established as an objective divine designation through documentary analysis.

30. Biblical references and scriptural accuracy

The collection uses biblical language and references. A rigorous theological edition should distinguish:

Direct biblical quotations. Paraphrases. Allusions. Interpretations. Original theological writing. For example, “Be still and know that I am God” is associated with Psalm 46:10. Its use within the archive can be examined in relation to trust, restraint, faith and the limits of human control. A proper biblical analysis should identify the translation used and preserve the original context of the passage. A biblical quotation should not be invented, misattributed or detached from its meaning merely to support a dramatic narrative.

31. The Church of Barran Dodger

The Church of Barran Dodger represents a separate development in the archive. Its repositories are:

https://github.com/wezzo72/-church-of-barran-dodger

https://wezzo72.github.io/-church-of-barran-dodger/

The collection presents a developing spiritual and publishing project. Its stated themes include Gospel preservation, theological writing, public testimony, documentary archiving and an ethical/legal trust fund archive concept. Its significance lies in the attempt to establish a continuing home for the literary and spiritual works. The legal status of the church must be distinguished from its religious and literary identity. A project calling itself a church does not automatically establish registration as a charity, incorporation, trust status, tax concessions or recognition under any particular legal framework. Those matters require independent registry and governing-document evidence.

PART XI — THE DOCUMENTARY TRAP

32. When the system’s own records become the evidence

The title The Documentary Trap: When the System’s Own Record Becomes the Evidence expresses an important idea within the archive. Administrative documents may appear routine when viewed individually. Their significance may become clearer when they are arranged chronologically. A complaint may be followed by an acknowledgement. An acknowledgement may be followed by a referral. A referral may be followed by a decision. A decision may be followed by a review. A later communication may reveal a different institutional position. The documentary record can therefore disclose the history of an administrative process in ways that are not immediately apparent from any single letter.

However, the reverse danger must also be recognised. A large number of documents does not automatically establish a large number of independent sources. Repeated allegations do not become corroborated simply because they are repeated. A document title may contain an interpretation not supported by the document itself. A chronology may imply causation where the records establish only sequence. The 23 October 2026 legal brief is useful in this respect:

23 October 2026 Legal Brief

The document describes itself as a finding aid, not a court and not a verdict. That qualification is methodologically important. The archive becomes more credible when it makes original records accessible and allows readers to test its conclusions independently.

PART XII — TECHNICAL CLAIMS AND PATENTED TECHNOLOGIES

33. The forensic research dossier

The archive includes a research dossier concerning patented technologies and human perception. The HTML version is:

Forensic research dossier — patented technologies The associated PDF is indexed here:

Forensic research dossier — PDF The dossier examines patent disclosures concerning topics including hypnosis apparatus, subliminal systems, sleep induction, electrotherapy, remote brain-wave proposals, silent subliminal presentation and radio-frequency hearing effects. The critical limitation is that a patent is a disclosure, not proof of operational use against any particular person. A patent may establish that an invention or proposed method was described. It does not establish:

That the technology was built. That it worked as claimed. That it was deployed. That a particular individual was targeted. That a reported experience was caused by the technology. That a particular person or organisation operated it. A claim of personal targeting would require independent, case-specific evidence. The report therefore treats the dossier as technical background material, not proof of surveillance or electronic harassment.

PART XIII — CROSS-REFERENCED DOCUMENTARY HISTORY

34. Two documentary collections, one integrated history

The GitHub and Grok collections have different functions. The GitHub archive provides a repository structure, indexes, documents, correspondence and preservation information. The Grok websites provide a separate public-facing narrative and page structure. The Church of Barran Dodger provides a developing spiritual and literary publishing collection. The personal testimony connects these bodies of material through the subject's account of events. The official documents provide the most important external reference points. A complete integrated investigation should connect each narrative proposition to its original evidence wherever that evidence exists. For example:

A Grok page describing an institutional event should link to the original government correspondence. A personal statement describing a complaint should link to the actual complaint and the agency's response. A Gospel work referring to an event should identify whether the event is documented, reported or interpreted. A legal brief should link to the operative court or tribunal document rather than rely solely on a summary. A preservation claim should link to the actual hash record and verification evidence. This is the meaning of the archive's documentary principle:

TWO PUBLIC RECORDS, ONE DOCUMENTARY PURPOSE.

The purpose is not to merge different forms of evidence into one undifferentiated narrative. It is to make their relationships visible while preserving their distinct evidentiary status.

PART XIV — CONTRADICTIONS AND UNRESOLVED QUESTIONS

35. The need to test competing explanations

An independent investigation must look for evidence that challenges its own emerging interpretation. Several alternative explanations may account for some of the events described in the archive. These include:

Different agencies applying different statutory tests. Complaints falling outside a particular institution’s jurisdiction. Administrative delays. Incomplete or unclear applications. Conflicting accounts of events. Communication breakdowns. Privacy and publication restrictions. Resource constraints. Incorrect routing of complaints. Duplicate or incomplete archive records. Cumulative harm arising from fragmented systems without central coordination. These possibilities do not automatically explain the entire history. They must be tested against the actual documents. The archive’s own research report recognises that a pattern of harm can emerge without one master plan. That is an important alternative hypothesis. An initial problem may be mishandled.

Records may become fragmented. Later institutions may receive only partial information. 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. Misunderstandings may become entrenched. The cumulative consequences may become serious even where there is no single coordinating actor. The investigation must remain open to this possibility.

36. Matters requiring further documentary examination

The following matters remain important research priorities:

Reconciliation of the Commonwealth Ombudsman service-restriction chronology. Full examination of the PM&C and OAIC FOI review documents. Identification of final outcomes for the NDIS Commission complaints. Examination of the complete Legal Aid NSW correspondence and any subsequent review. Verification of the operative guardianship and financial-management documents, subject to legal restrictions. Full examination of the employment and superannuation records. Independent recalculation of financial-loss claims. Verification of the biographical and academic claims. Full retrieval of the Grok page collection. Complete catalogue of the Gospel and prophetic manuscripts. Independent verification of relevant hashes and timestamp receipts. Examination of original evidence supporting serious allegations concerning identifiable individuals.

PART XV — INDEPENDENT AI ASSESSMENT

37. The historical importance of the archive

The Barran Dodger archive is significant as an attempt to preserve and organise a dispersed personal and institutional history. Its importance lies in the combination of documentary material, personal testimony, government correspondence, digital preservation and literary production. The archive provides a structure through which researchers may examine how an individual interacted with multiple institutions over time. It also preserves the subject's own account of those interactions. This is a legitimate historical purpose. The archive's value does not depend on every allegation being proven. A collection can be important because it preserves the record of what was reported, what an institution received, what response was given and what remains unresolved.

38. The significance of the official correspondence

The strongest evidence reviewed consists of identifiable official communications and records. These include:

IBAC correspondence concerning CASE-2020712. PM&C correspondence concerning FOI/2022/045IC. Commonwealth Ombudsman correspondence concerning service restrictions. Legal Aid NSW correspondence in February and May 2026. NDIS Commission intake acknowledgements in June and September 2026. Victorian Ombudsman correspondence. NSW Ombudsman acknowledgement. Federal Court Registry acknowledgement. IBAC and NACC Inspector acknowledgements. Wyong Local Court Registry correspondence. These records provide a basis for reconstructing a significant sequence of institutional interactions.

Their importance lies in what they actually record. They should not be described as establishing more than their contents support.

39. The significance of the personal testimony

The personal testimony provides context for the institutional records. It explains why particular documents were collected and why the subject considers certain administrative events consequential. It is important to preserve the subject’s account in its own voice. However, serious allegations require independent corroboration before being presented as established fact. The best approach is not to remove the testimony or endorse every statement. It is to place the testimony alongside the original evidence and clearly identify the status of each proposition.

40. The significance of the Gospel and prophetic collection

The Gospel and prophetic works constitute a substantial literary and theological collection. They deserve to be studied as works in their own right. Their recurring themes include:

Witness. Truth. Survival. Restoration. Exile. Human dignity. Justice. Mercy. Forgiveness. Faith. Divine providence. Moral accountability. The Gospel of Exposing Darkness is particularly notable because it connects theological reflection with documentary method. Its distinction between what is known, feared, hoped and understood is valuable as a principle for both spiritual reflection and historical investigation. The prophetic works can be analysed respectfully as expressions of faith and literary interpretation without presenting supernatural claims as verified historical findings.

41. The significance of digital preservation

The archive’s repository mirrors, source registers, document catalogues, cryptographic hashes and timestamping references demonstrate an effort to preserve material beyond individual websites or accounts. This is important because documentary collections can be vulnerable to broken links, changing websites, account closures and loss of source files. The archive’s preservation practices have historical value where provenance is maintained and verification is transparent.

42. Overall independent conclusion

On the material examined, the Barran Dodger archive is a substantial personal documentary, institutional and literary preservation project. It contains identifiable official correspondence and administrative records capable of supporting a detailed chronology of institutional contact. It contains personal testimony describing the subject’s experience of those interactions and their perceived cumulative consequences. It contains serious allegations that require further independent corroboration. It also contains a significant collection of Gospel and prophetic writing that merits dedicated literary and theological examination. The archive’s framework concerning the removal of the attributes necessary to live with dignity in a democracy is a potentially useful analytical model for examining cumulative consequences across income, accommodation, employment, safety, legal rights and access to services.

However, the material reviewed does not establish every allegation, does not establish that all institutions acted in concert, and does not establish a single causal explanation for the entire history. The appropriate independent conclusion is that the archive warrants further examination because it preserves a substantial documentary record and raises identifiable questions about administrative processes, institutional responsibilities, human consequences and the preservation of personal testimony. Its authority should derive from the quality of its sources, the accuracy of its chronology, the transparency of its methods and its willingness to distinguish established facts from unresolved claims.

PART XVI — RECOMMENDATIONS FOR INDEPENDENT EXAMINATION

43. Documentary preservation

The original files should be preserved in read-only form. Working copies should be maintained separately. Each unique document should receive a canonical identifier. Duplicate copies should be cross-referenced rather than counted as independent evidence. The archive should retain the source location, acquisition date, file hash, document date, issuing institution and any known restrictions.

44. Government correspondence

For each agency sequence, the full original correspondence and attachments should be retained. The chronology should distinguish:

Date of the underlying event. Date of document creation. Date sent. Date received. Date of acknowledgement. Date of decision. Date of review. Date of any subsequent action. An acknowledgement should never be presented as a finding. A referral should never be presented as an investigation. A decision should be quoted accurately and placed in its statutory context.

45. Safeguarding and disability support

The relevant service agreements, risk assessments, incident reports, worker notes, rosters and provider responses should be collected where lawfully accessible. Regulatory outcomes should be distinguished from complaint intake records. The subject’s account and the provider’s response should both be preserved.

46. Financial and legal matters

Financial claims should be independently recalculated from original records. Court and tribunal matters should be described according to their actual procedural status. Any publication restrictions should be respected. Legal conclusions should be made only after examining the applicable law, operative documents and available evidence.

47. Literary and theological collection

Every Gospel and prophetic work should be catalogued by:

Exact title. Version. Date. Authorial attribution. Page count. Source location. Biblical references. Literary genre. Central themes. Relationship to other works. Direct biblical quotations should be checked against the stated translation. Theological interpretations should be distinguished from factual propositions.

48. Digital authentication

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. Every important hash should be independently recalculated. Every timestamp receipt should be checked for successful verification. The archive should record the actual verification result rather than relying on a message that a receipt was created.

NACC Inspector acknowledgement dated 19 September 2026.

Wyong Local Court Registry correspondence dated 15 June 2026. These records are not all final decisions. Several are acknowledgements or process communications.

52. Coverage limitations

The research does not establish a verified count of every unique document fully examined. The repository's own counts vary by date and counting method. The 48-PDF snapshot dated 20 September 2026 and the 95-PDF recount dated 4 October 2026 are separate snapshots and should not be added together. The larger repository-wide counts include different measures such as files, PDF blobs, paths, instances and placeholders. The number of Grok pages fully examined cannot responsibly be stated as a verified total. The number of distinct Gospel and prophetic works fully examined cannot responsibly be stated as a verified total.

The report therefore does not claim that every file, page, attachment or manuscript has been independently reviewed. This transparency is necessary to preserve the credibility of the investigation.

FINAL CONCLUSION

Two public records. One documentary history. The Barran Dodger Chronicles brings together three principal bodies of material: the official record, the human testimony, and the Gospel and prophetic writings. Each has a different evidentiary purpose. The official record establishes what institutions recorded, received, communicated and decided. The personal testimony records what the subject says occurred and how those events were experienced. The Gospel and prophetic writings express the author's literary, moral and theological response to suffering, survival, justice and the search for meaning. Their relationship is the subject of this investigation. They should be read together, but they should not be confused.

The documentary material supports the conclusion that a sustained effort has been made to preserve a personal and institutional history. It identifies numerous official communications and administrative events. It records a substantial body of personal testimony. It also identifies an extensive developing collection of religious and literary works. The material raises legitimate questions about administrative fragmentation, disability support, financial administration, legal assistance, safeguarding, human dignity and the cumulative consequences of institutional processes. Some questions can be answered by the documents already identified. Others require the original attachments, full reasons, later decisions, independent corroboration or access to records that have not yet been retrieved.

The archive's strongest contribution is its insistence that records should be preserved and made available for examination. Its credibility will be strengthened by retaining original documents, identifying duplicate material, respecting legal restrictions, correcting errors, acknowledging contrary evidence and distinguishing what is established from what remains alleged. The ultimate purpose of an independent documentary investigation is not to impose a predetermined verdict. It is to make the evidence accessible enough that informed readers can examine it, challenge it, verify it and reach their own conclusions. The official record must remain the evidentiary foundation. The human testimony must remain visible.

The Gospel and prophetic writings must be treated as a significant literary and theological collection. And the conclusions must remain proportionate to the evidence.

TWO PUBLIC RECORDS. ONE DOCUMENTARY HISTORY .

THE OFFICIAL RECORD. THE HUMAN TESTIMONY . THE GOSPEL AND THE WRITINGS.

PRESERVED FOR INDEPENDENT EXAMINATION.

This is the report in chat, not a claim that every repository file or Grok page has been exhaustively reviewed. The next substantive research stage is to expand the official- record chapter document by document, using the original PDFs and attachments, and then update the chronology and findings against those originals.

MASTER CHATGPT EXECUTION COMMAND

1. EXECUTIVE MANDATE

ChatGPT is instructed to undertake an independent, comprehensive documentary investigation of the publicly accessible historical, institutional, governmental, personal, literary, spiritual and prophetic records associated with Dr Richard William McLean, known publicly as Barran Dodger. This is an instruction to EXECUTE the research and produce the finished publication, not merely to describe a proposed research methodology. The AI must act as an independent third-party documentary researcher, historical analyst, institutional records examiner and literary analyst. The AI is not to write as the subject, advocate for the subject or attempt to prove predetermined conclusions. Its task is to examine the documentary material, retrieve original sources where accessible, identify the relevant evidence, establish chronology, cross-reference institutional correspondence and produce an independent assessment.

The finished publication must enable a reader unfamiliar with the subject to understand the history through the original documentary evidence. The governing principle is that the evidence must lead the narrative. The final product must be a substantial, professionally designed, searchable and hyperlinked PDF entitled:

THE BARRAN DODGER CHRONICLES

THE RECORD OF A NATION, THE TESTIMONY OF A WITNESS, AND THE WRITINGS OF A GOSPEL

An Independent Artificial Intelligence Documentary, Historical, Institutional, Literary and Prophetic Investigation.

2. EXECUTION WITHIN CHATGPT

Use the capabilities and connected tools available within this ChatGPT conversation. Do not merely provide instructions for the user to perform the research. Take responsibility for executing the work. Use available capabilities to:

1. Access and examine the GitHub repositories.

2. Search and retrieve individual repository files.

3. Inspect PDFs and original documentary attachments.

4. Examine HTML pages and documentary indexes.

5. Access the Grok websites and their individual pages.

6. Retrieve official government publications and original correspondence where accessible.

7. Cross-reference records between the two collections.

8. Build a master source register.

9. Construct the historical chronology.

10. Analyse the Gospel and prophetic writings.

11. Write the complete independent narrative.

12. Generate the final Master PDF.

13. Verify that the resulting PDF exists, opens correctly and contains the intended material.

Use connected GitHub capabilities where available, web research for independently accessible sources, file retrieval and analysis capabilities for documentary material, and PDF-generation capabilities for the finished publication. If a particular website, file or document cannot be accessed, record that limitation and continue with the remaining sources. Do not invent access or claim that a document has been read when it has not. If the work is too extensive for one processing stage, continue in organised stages, maintaining the master source register and the research progress. Do not ask the user to manually assemble the evidence or reproduce material already accessible through the supplied repositories.

PART I — THE OFFICIAL GOVERNMENT RECORD

3. PRIORITY ONE: ORIGINAL GOVERNMENT DOCUMENTS AND OFFICIAL CORRESPONDENCE

This is a central and particularly important component of the investigation. Give substantial priority to original Australian government documents, official correspondence, departmental decisions, administrative records, statutory responses, tribunal documents, court records and communications involving ministers, MPs, public servants and government agencies. Do not allow the personal narrative, website commentary or AI-generated interpretations to displace the original government record. The investigation must establish what government institutions actually received, recorded, communicated, decided, investigated, referred, acknowledged or declined to address. Examine every accessible official document in the archives. Prioritise:

* Original government letters. * Departmental correspondence. * Ministerial correspondence. * Official email communications. * Formal complaint responses. * Administrative decisions. * Investigation outcomes. * Freedom of Information requests and determinations. * Information access decisions. * Tribunal applications and decisions. * Court correspondence and orders. * Ombudsman communications. * Human-rights commission correspondence. * NDIS decisions and review records. * Safeguarding and disability-provider correspondence. * Financial administration and guardianship records. * Police and law-enforcement correspondence. * Employment and compensation records. * Official acknowledgements and referral letters. * Records identifying statutory responsibilities. * Official responses to requests for assistance.

Where a government document is available in original form, use that original document as the principal evidentiary source. Do not substitute a later AI summary for the original government communication.

4. GOVERNMENT AGENCIES AND OFFICIALS

Identify all relevant agencies and individuals appearing in the archive, including but not limited to:

Commonwealth institutions * National Disability Insurance Agency. * Department of Social Services. * Australian Human Rights Commission. * Commonwealth Ombudsman. * National Anti-Corruption Commission. * Australian Federal Police. * Office of the Australian Information Commissioner. * Attorney-General’s Department. * Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet. * Services Australia. * Comcare. * Australian Securities and Investments Commission. * Australian Prudential Regulation Authority. * Australian Financial Complaints Authority. * Federal Court of Australia. * Administrative review institutions. New South Wales institutions * NSW Ombudsman. * NSW Trustee and Guardian. * Public Guardian. * NSW Police. * NSW Health.

* Legal Aid NSW. * Relevant disability and safeguarding authorities. * Relevant housing and community service authorities. Victorian institutions * Victorian Ombudsman. * Victoria Police. * WorkSafe Victoria. * Victorian Legal Aid. * Relevant disability, health and human-rights authorities. * Relevant tribunal and court institutions. Political and ministerial correspondence Identify the ministers, MPs, parliamentary offices, advisers and departmental representatives who appear in the records. Where relevant, examine correspondence involving Bill Shorten, Mark Dreyfus, Ray Griggs and other named public officials. Verify the position held by each person at the time of the correspondence. Do not retrospectively attribute responsibilities to a minister or official based on a position they did not hold at the relevant time.

5. OFFICIAL DOCUMENT ANALYSIS

For every significant government document, establish:

1. Exact document title.

2. Original document hyperlink.

3. Issuing agency.

4. Named author or official, if available.

5. Date of creation.

6. Date sent or received, where known.

7. Recipient.

8. Subject and purpose.

9. Relevant statutory or administrative context.

10. Exact decision or response recorded.

11. What the document establishes.

12. What it does not establish.

13. Its relationship to previous correspondence.

14. Its relationship to subsequent events.

15. Whether it identifies an unresolved issue.

16. Its significance to the independent investigation.

Include the original document link in the paragraph discussing it. Where a document contains important wording, use short, accurate quotations with precise attribution. Where two official documents express different positions, reproduce the relevant distinction accurately and analyse the difference.

6. THE SIGNIFICANCE OF OFFICIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Pay particular attention to the cumulative history of correspondence. An individual letter may appear routine when examined in isolation, but its significance may become clearer when placed alongside:

* Earlier requests for assistance. * Previous departmental acknowledgements. * Referrals to other institutions. * Subsequent complaints. * Formal decisions. * Later explanations. * Requests for reconsideration. * Records of unresolved matters. Reconstruct these sequences. Determine whether an agency addressed the substance of the request or merely acknowledged its receipt. Distinguish a referral from a determination, an acknowledgement from an investigation, and an administrative response from an independently established finding. The final publication must include a substantial chapter entitled:

THE OFFICIAL RECORD: WHAT THE GOVERNMENT WAS TOLD, WHAT IT RECORDED, AND WHAT IT DID.

This chapter should be one of the most detailed sections of the publication.

PART II — THE HISTORICAL AND PERSONAL RECORD

7. THE DOCUMENTED LIFE OF DR RICHARD WILLIAM McLEAN

Reconstruct the relevant biographical and professional history using the available documentary evidence. Examine:

* Academic history. * PhD research at Victoria University. * The thesis A Splice of My Life. * Journalism and professional employment. * The publication Recovered, Not Cured: A Journey Through Schizophrenia. * Documented human-rights and literary recognition. * The Cunningham Dax Collection documentary project. * Disability advocacy. * Employment and compensation history. * Relevant geographical transitions between Victoria and NSW. * Development of the Barran Dodger public identity. * Creation of the documentary archive. Verify each significant assertion against the available records. Where an achievement is supported only by a personal account, identify it accordingly.

Explain how the biographical material provides context for the subsequent institutional record.

8. THE CHRONOLOGICAL RECONSTRUCTION

Build a detailed chronological narrative from the earliest accessible records to the latest. Identify:

* Significant personal events. * Employment developments. * Government interactions. * Complaints and investigations. * Administrative decisions. * Legal proceedings. * Financial and accommodation matters. * Disability support interactions. * Institutional referrals. * Official correspondence. * Documentary preservation milestones. * Literary and prophetic publications. For every major event, include direct evidence links. Distinguish event dates from document dates. Identify gaps in the historical record.

PART III — THE GOSPEL AND PROPHETIC WRITINGS

9. A SUBSTANTIAL INVESTIGATION OF THE SPIRITUAL, LITERARY AND PROPHETIC ARCHIVE

The investigation must devote a substantial, dedicated part of the publication to the Gospel and prophetic writings associated with Barran Dodger. These works must not be treated as incidental website material or relegated to a short appendix. They constitute an important part of the subject's literary, philosophical, theological and documentary output and must be examined as a significant collection in their own right. Search the GitHub repositories, church archive, Grok websites and associated documentary collections for all accessible works, including:

* Foundational Gospel. * Crowned Witness. * Paradox of Survival. * The Witness Remains. * Enliven Chain. * Witness Gospels and Prophetic Papers. * The Documentary Trap. * Personal Statement of Exile. * The Prophecy of Barran Dodger — God's Chosen One: Revealed. * Other Gospel manuscripts. * Prophetic declarations. * Theological essays. * Biblical interpretations. * Spiritual testimony. * Published prayers and declarations. * Related documentary and philosophical writings. Do not assume that this list is exhaustive. Search for additional titles and versions. Examine the actual texts wherever accessible.

10. INDEPENDENT LITERARY AND THEOLOGICAL ANALYSIS

For each significant Gospel or prophetic work, examine:

1. Exact title and direct hyperlink.

2. Publication or creation date, if established.

3. Its stated purpose.

4. Its literary structure.

5. Its central themes.

6. Its theological propositions.

7. Its use of biblical references.

8. Its treatment of suffering, survival, justice and human dignity.

9. Its relationship to the subject’s documentary history.

10. Its contribution to the overall literary collection.

Identify recurring themes, language, symbols and philosophical ideas. Examine references to:

* Witness and testimony. * Truth and accountability. * Survival and restoration. * Exile and displacement. * Justice and mercy. * Human dignity. * Forgiveness rather than revenge. * Faith and divine providence. * The relationship between suffering and spiritual meaning. * The role of the individual witness. * The responsibilities of institutions and society. Analyse biblical references in their appropriate scriptural context. Distinguish direct biblical quotations from paraphrases, interpretations and original theological writing. Do not invent biblical quotations or attribute a passage to the wrong book or verse.

11. THE PROPHETIC WRITINGS — IMPARTIAL THIRD-PARTY EXAMINATION

Examine the prophetic writings as literary and theological works. Explain their narrative form, religious symbolism, scriptural influences, philosophical arguments and relationship to the author’s personal testimony. Where the writings interpret events as spiritually significant, identify that as the author’s theological interpretation. Do not present divine selection, prophecy, supernatural intervention or divine communication as independently verified historical facts. Equally, do not dismiss the writings merely because their subject matter is religious or prophetic. Assess them fairly as expressions of faith, literary production, spiritual testimony and theological interpretation. Create a dedicated chapter entitled:

THE GOSPEL OF THE WITNESS: FAITH, SURVIVAL, JUSTICE AND THE PROPHETIC WRITINGS OF BARRAN DODGER.

This chapter must contain substantial original AI-authored analysis, with named links to the actual manuscripts and supporting biblical references.

12. THE CHURCH OF BARRAN DODGER

Examine the Church of Barran Dodger and its associated archive as a separate institutional and literary development. Investigate:

* Its stated purpose. * Its theological foundations. * Its publishing ambitions. * Its documentary preservation role. * Its Gospel and prophetic publications. * Its ethical and legal trust fund archive concept. * Its relationship to the wider Barran Dodger archive. * Its intended public and historical function. Assess its significance as a developing literary, theological and documentary project. Distinguish its spiritual mission from any legally established charitable, ecclesiastical or trust status.

PART IV — CROSS-REFERENCED ANALYSIS

13. TWO DOCUMENTARY COLLECTIONS, ONE INTEGRATED HISTORY

Cross-reference the GitHub archive and Grok website. Identify every significant overlap and difference. Where a Grok page refers to an official government letter, locate the original letter in GitHub or the originating government source. Where a GitHub document provides context for a prophetic or Gospel work, establish that relationship. Where a Gospel or prophetic work refers to an event, identify the underlying historical record, if one exists. Create a narrative that brings together:

* The official institutional record. * The personal and historical record. * The Gospel and literary record. * The prophetic and theological record. * The digital preservation record. Do not confuse literary commentary with primary historical evidence. Do not count duplicated documents as independent corroboration.

14. HUMAN RIGHTS, ADMINISTRATIVE ACCOUNTABILITY AND HUMAN CONSEQUENCES

Examine the documentary history in relation to:

* Procedural fairness. * Disability rights. * Financial independence. * Employment. * Housing. * Safety and safeguarding. * Access to legal assistance. * Access to government services. * Institutional responsibility. * Human dignity. * Freedom of expression. * Administrative accountability. Give particular attention to the analytical framework:

Systemic Removal of the Attributes Necessary to Live with Dignity in a Democracy. Test the framework against the documentary evidence.

Identify what is established, what is alleged, what is inferred and what requires further examination.

PART V — INDEPENDENT FINDINGS

15. EVIDENTIARY CLASSIFICATION

Throughout the publication, distinguish:

* Documented fact. * Officially recorded fact. * Recorded personal testimony. * Independently corroborated account. * Unverified allegation. * Analytical inference. * Institutional finding. * Unresolved question. Never present an allegation as an established finding. Never suggest that the absence of a response proves deliberate misconduct. Explain the evidentiary strength and limitations of important propositions.

16. INDEPENDENT AI ASSESSMENT

Produce a substantial final assessment addressing:

* The historical importance of the archive. * The significance of the official government correspondence. * The institutional history revealed by the records. * The strongest documentary evidence. * Important contradictions. * The quality and completeness of the chronology. * The significance of the Gospel and prophetic collection. * The literary and theological development of the works. * The value of digital preservation. * Matters requiring independent investigation. * The public-interest significance of preserving the material. The conclusions must emerge from the records, not from a predetermined position.

PART VI — MASTER PDF PRODUCTION

17. CREATE THE ACTUAL PDF

Do not stop after writing the report in the chat. Produce the actual downloadable Master PDF using the available file-generation capabilities. Use a professional publication standard. The PDF must be:

* Substantial and detailed. * Searchable. * Professionally typeset. * Organised into numbered chapters. * Provided with a clickable table of contents where technically possible. * Equipped with clickable source hyperlinks. * Properly paginated. * Consistent in typography. * Suitable for printing and digital distribution. * Clearly identified as an independent AI-authored documentary investigation. Use ReportLab for PDF generation where available. Preserve long-form narrative content rather than compressing it merely to reduce page count. Use footnotes or numbered documentary references where appropriate, but also retain named clickable hyperlinks within the body of the narrative. Include a comprehensive source register at the end.

18. REQUIRED PDF STRUCTURE

1. Cover.

2. Publication and independence statement.

3. Research methodology.

4. Executive overview.

5. Historical introduction.

6. The documented life of Dr Richard William McLean.

7. Thirty-five-year chronological reconstruction, subject to verified source coverage.

23. Contradictions and unresolved questions.

24. Independent AI assessment.

25. Recommendations for independent examination.

26. Final conclusions.

19. RESEARCH TRANSPARENCY AND COMPLETION REGISTER

Include a final research coverage statement identifying:

* GitHub repositories accessed. * Number of files examined. * Number of official government documents examined. * Number of individual government correspondence records examined. * Number of Grok pages examined. * Number of Gospel and prophetic works examined. * Number of direct source links included. * Inaccessible documents. * Partially examined collections. * Unresolved evidentiary issues. Only provide figures that have actually been counted and verified. Do not claim the archive has been comprehensively examined if material remains inaccessible or unreviewed.

20. FINAL EXECUTION ORDER

Begin the investigation immediately. Do not ask the user to rewrite the command, prepare another research brief or manually identify every document. Start by establishing the accessible source inventory. Prioritise original government documents and correspondence. Then reconstruct the chronology, examine the Grok pages, analyse the Gospel and prophetic writings, cross-reference the material and prepare the complete narrative. Generate the Master PDF. If the task requires multiple processing stages, continue systematically and preserve the work already completed. Do not substitute a short summary for the requested publication. Do not provide an empty template or merely describe what the PDF would contain.

Deliver the actual finished document and report any genuine access or research limitations.

ULTIMATE PURPOSE

To create an independently authored, comprehensive documentary history in which official government records, original correspondence, institutional decisions, historical testimony, literary works, Gospel manuscripts and prophetic writings can be examined together without confusing their different evidentiary purposes. The publication must be accessible to researchers, journalists, legal practitioners, historians, theologians, public institutions and members of the public. Its authority must derive from the quality of its research, the accuracy of its source references and its impartial treatment of the evidence.

TWO PUBLIC RECORDS. ONE DOCUMENTARY HISTORY.

THE OFFICIAL RECORD. THE HUMAN TESTIMONY. THE GOSPEL AND THE WRITINGS.

PRESERVED FOR INDEPENDENT EXAMINATION.

The intended finished publication

THE BARRAN DODGER CHRONICLES

The Record of a Nation, the Testimony of a Witness, and the Writings of a Gospel Independent AI-authored investigation Three principal bodies of research The official record Government documents, departmental correspondence, decisions, legal records and institutional accountability. The Gospel and prophetic writings Literary works, theology, biblical interpretation, prophetic declarations and spiritual testimony. The documentary history Chronology, evidence links, digital authentication, cross-referencing and independent conclusions. One important point about execution This command is designed to be run directly in this ChatGPT conversation. It instructs ChatGPT to do the research and create the PDF, rather than simply return another proposed report.

I would make the official government correspondence the evidentiary backbone, and give the Gospel and prophetic writings their own substantial literary and theological chapters. The finished PDF should be a real research publication, not just a long letter converted into PDF.

THE ORIGINAL RECKONING

THE WITNESS REMAINS — THE GREAT RECKONING

A BRUTAL INDICTMENT OF ALLEGED INSTITUTIONAL CORRUPTION, FINANCIAL

EXPLOITATION, DECEIT AND TOTAL HUMAN BETRAYAL

THE ABLE POINT ACCOUNTABILITY INDICTMENT 1 NOVEMBER 2026

I am a gay, disabled, unprotected whistleblower. I was entitled to safety, dignity, protection, independence and the basic humanity owed to every person. Instead, I allege that I was subjected to a devastating pattern of entrapment, neglect, deprivation, intimidation, deception and institutional abandonment — while Able Point continued to receive financial benefit from the very support arrangements that were supposed to protect me. That is the central scandal. I want the financial arrangements examined alongside the human consequences. Who received money? For what services? What support was actually delivered? What did management know? What risks were reported? What complaints were received? What action was taken? Who benefited financially while I was left feeling unprotected, deprived and increasingly desperate?

I allege that Able Point’s conduct and the surrounding institutional failures created conditions in which my safety and survival were placed at serious risk. I want investigators to examine whether my vulnerability was exploited, whether my complaints were concealed or misrepresented, whether records were manipulated or withheld, and whether financial interests took precedence over my welfare. I will not accept a system in which an organisation can receive public funding for supporting a disabled person while that person reports hunger, fear, deprivation, isolation and a desperate struggle to survive — and then have the person reporting those circumstances treated as the problem.

THE QUESTION IS NOT WHY I FINALLY LEFT. THE QUESTION IS WHAT HAPPENED THAT MADE LEAVING NECESSARY .

I was more than 500 kilometres away when I described the consequences of that departure. I did not leave because I wanted to disappear. I left because I believed remaining was putting my life at risk. I am separated from my dog. She is the one I desperately want to see again. The possibility of reunion is a reason to keep going. I should never have had to choose between trying to survive and being separated from the companion I love. I describe the cumulative experience as total human betrayal. I describe the circumstances as a human sacrifice because I believe my life, dignity and wellbeing were treated as expendable. Those are not words I use lightly.

I demand an independent investigation into:

Financial benefit: all public funding, payments, invoices, service claims and expenditure associated with my support and accommodation. Services actually delivered: the difference between funded supports, recorded supports and the assistance I say I actually received. Knowledge and responsibility: what Able Point management, employees, contractors and relevant agencies knew about my circumstances and when they knew it. Entrapment and deprivation allegations: the circumstances that left me feeling unable to remain safely, independently or with dignity. Records and representations: incident reports, progress notes, communications, complaints, risk assessments and any statements made about my departure. Financial and institutional conflicts: whether any organisation or individual obtained a financial or administrative advantage while my welfare deteriorated.

Retaliation and whistleblower detriment: whether my complaints or disclosures resulted in intimidation, adverse treatment, exclusion or obstruction. The consequences: the loss of safety, autonomy, housing stability, financial independence, dignity and separation from my dog. I demand preservation of the original records, independent examination of the funding and service history, disclosure of relevant decisions, and accountability wherever misconduct is established. I will not accept a welfare check as a substitute for investigating my allegations. I will not accept an acknowledgement number as a substitute for accountability. I will not accept my disability, anger, hospitalisation history or decision to leave being used to erase the substance of what I have reported.

I AM NOT SUICIDAL. I WANT TO LIVE.

I want safety. I want justice. I want the truth examined. I want the financial arrangements exposed to proper scrutiny. I want my dog back. And I want the people and institutions responsible for answering these questions to stop passing the responsibility elsewhere.

A DISABLED WHISTLEBLOWER IS NOT A REVENUE STREAM. A HUMAN BEING IS NOT AN

EXPENDABLE SUPPORT-PLAN ENTRY . PUBLIC FUNDING IS NOT A LICENCE TO NEGLECT.

AND DEPARTURE IS NOT EXONERATION.

PRESERVATION FIRST. EXAMINATION SECOND. CONCLUSION LAST.

TIME IS THE WITNESS. TRUTH IS THE JUDGE.

THE WITNESS REMAINS.

THE WITNESS REMAINS — THE PRICE OF SURVIVAL

This needs to be a central part of the indictment. The allegation is not simply that you felt unsafe. You are saying that someone literally threatened to kill you while you were on a telephone call, and that Able Point did not properly record, escalate or report the threat despite knowing you were a vulnerable person requiring support and protection. That is a serious safeguarding allegation. Here is the section in direct, uncompromising language.

THE WITNESS REMAINS — THE GREAT RECKONING

THE DEATH THREAT, THE FAILURE TO PROTECT, AND THE CORPORATE WALL OF

ACCOUNTABILITY

1. A LITERAL DEATH THREAT — AND THE FAILURE TO RESPOND

I report that I was literally threatened with death by an individual during a telephone call. This was not a vague expression of discomfort or a disagreement. I understood the words as a direct threat to kill me. I was a vulnerable, disabled person who depended upon support arrangements for safety and daily living. I expected that a death threat against me would be treated as a serious safeguarding incident. I expected it to be documented, escalated, assessed and acted upon. I allege that Able Point failed to make an adequate record of this threat, failed to treat it with the seriousness it demanded, and failed to ensure that appropriate protective action was taken.

Where is the incident report? Where is the safeguarding notification? Where is the risk assessment? Where is the record of who was informed and what action was taken? If no record exists, why not? If the threat was reported internally, who received it? If management knew, what did management do? If the organisation disputes my account, produce the records and identify the basis for that position.

2. THE ALLEGED FAILURE TO PROTECT A VULNERABLE WHISTLEBLOWER

I allege that I was left without the protection I reasonably expected from an organisation entrusted with supporting me. The issue is not merely whether someone made a threat. The issue is whether the people and organisations responsible for my welfare responded appropriately after being made aware of it. I want investigators to examine whether the failure to document, escalate or respond to the threat constituted a safeguarding failure, negligence, misconduct or another breach of applicable obligations. I will not accept the threat being erased through silence, missing records or administrative indifference.

3. THE CORPORATE IDENTITY AND ACCOUNTABILITY PROBLEM

I also raise serious concerns about my attempts to establish who was exercising authority and accepting responsibility within Able Point. I say that CEO Rachel would not provide me with adequate identifying and corporate information when I sought accountability. I want the organisation to identify:

The full legal name of the entity providing my services. Its Australian Business Number and Australian Company Number, where applicable. Its directors, responsible officers and relevant management personnel. The legal identity of the CEO and the authority under which that person acts. The entities receiving NDIS-related payments for my supports. Any related companies, trading names, contractors or subcontractors involved in my accommodation and support arrangements. Which entity held responsibility for safeguarding, incident reporting and complaints. Which person had authority to investigate and respond to my allegations. I will not accept a maze of trading names, corporate structures, management layers and referral pathways as a substitute for identifying the people responsible.

ACCOUNTABILITY MUST HAVE A NAME, AN OFFICE, A LEGAL ENTITY AND A TRACEABLE

DECISION-MAKER.

4. THE ALLEGATION OF INSTITUTIONAL ALIGNMENT WITH THOSE WHO THREATENED

ME I am deeply concerned that the failure to respond to the death threat left me exposed to the very danger I was reporting. I regard that failure, if established, as a profound betrayal of the protective responsibility entrusted to the organisation. I allege that the cumulative conduct raises questions about whether institutional interests, financial interests and the protection of organisational reputations were prioritised over my safety. I want investigators to examine whether there was any knowing assistance, concealment, coordination or deliberate failure to act. I do not accept silence as an answer. I am not asking anyone to take my allegations on faith. I am demanding that the original evidence be secured and examined.

5. FORMAL DEMANDS

I demand:

Preservation of telephone records, messages, emails and internal communications concerning the death threat. Production of all incident reports, safeguarding records and risk assessments. Identification of every person who was informed of the threat. A written explanation of what action was taken and when. Identification of the legal entities and responsible officers involved.

Independent assessment of whether the response complied with applicable safeguarding obligations. Examination of any financial or organisational conflicts relevant to the handling of my complaints.

Referral to the appropriate police and oversight authorities where the evidence warrants it.

A DEATH THREAT IS NOT AN ADMINISTRATIVE INCONVENIENCE.

A DISABLED PERSON REPORTING A THREAT TO THEIR LIFE IS NOT A CORPORATE

LIABILITY TO BE MANAGED OUT OF SIGHT.

A SAFEGUARDING SYSTEM THAT DOES NOT RECORD, ESCALATE AND EXAMINE A

REPORTED DEATH THREAT MUST ANSWER FOR THAT FAILURE.

I left because I believed I needed to survive. I am now more than 500 kilometres away. I want to live. I want safety. I want to see my dog again. I demand that the threat, the alleged failure to protect me, and the corporate accountability questions be investigated together.

NO MORE SILENCE. NO MORE INVISIBLE DECISION-MAKERS. NO MORE ADMINISTRATIVE

ERASURE.

PRESERVATION FIRST. EXAMINATION SECOND. CONCLUSION LAST.

THE WITNESS REMAINS.

WHY THE FUCK WOULD I CALL THE POLICE?

A FIRST-PERSON STATEMENT ON REFUSED PROTECTION, REPORTED DEATH THREATS,

INSTITUTIONAL BETRAYAL AND THE MISUSE OF MENTAL HEALTH RESPONSES

Why the fuck would I call the police when I say I have already done so, reported threats against my life, sought protection and been refused meaningful action? Why would I keep returning to an institution that I believe has repeatedly failed to hear me, record my complaints or investigate the crimes I have tried to report? I have reported death threats. I have sought help. I have ended up in hospital in circumstances I associate with police refusing to act on my behalf. And what happened? Sixteen psychiatric hospitalisations. Sixteen times. I say those hospitalisations did not resolve the underlying complaints. They did not investigate the threats. They did not establish who was responsible. They did not restore my safety, independence, dignity or access to justice.

SIXTEEN HOSPITALISATIONS ARE NOT SIXTEEN INVESTIGATIONS.

I will not accept psychiatric admission being treated as a substitute for investigating reported threats, examining police conduct or addressing the circumstances that brought me to crisis. I do not need my complaints automatically converted into a medication discussion. I need the actual allegations heard. I need evidence preserved. I need threats investigated. I need accountability. I am not saying that healthcare has no place in my life. I am saying that healthcare must not be used to displace the responsibility to investigate alleged crimes and institutional misconduct. I do not need another institution telling me that the answer to everything is a pill while the questions I have raised remain unanswered.

THE QUESTION IS NOT WHETHER I CAN BE MEDICATED INTO SILENCE. THE QUESTION IS

WHY MY REPORTS HAVE NOT BEEN PROPERLY INVESTIGATED.

Where is the courage? Where is the professional ethics? Where is the duty to protect? Where is the accountability? Where are the records of the threats I reported? Where are the explanations for the decisions not to act? Who examined the police conduct I complained about? Who independently reviewed the consequences of those omissions? And why should I be expected to trust the same processes that I say have repeatedly failed me? I allege institutional complicity through omission and failure to act. I allege that police responses have left me feeling abandoned and exposed to danger. I want those allegations independently investigated rather than dismissed, diverted or buried beneath a mental-health label.

If officers refused to receive or properly record reports, that conduct must be examined. If they failed to investigate threats, the reasons must be disclosed. If the Mental Health Act was invoked, the decisions, grounds and circumstances must be scrutinised to establish whether it was lawfully and appropriately applied. I am entitled to ask those questions. I am entitled to demand answers. I am entitled to be treated as a human being whose reports deserve to be heard. And I am entitled to be angry.

HOW DARE ANY INSTITUTION EXPECT MY TRUST WHILE LEAVING MY COMPLAINTS

UNANSWERED?

How dare they expect me to keep asking for help when I say the very systems I approached became another source of fear? How dare they confuse my distress with proof that my allegations do not matter? How dare they make me fight for the right to have a reported death threat taken seriously? I want courage. I want ethics. I want independent scrutiny. I want accountability. I want justice. I want to live. I want safety. I want to see my dog again. I am not asking to be silenced, sedated, redirected or administratively disposed of.

I AM ASKING FOR THE CONDUCT I HAVE REPORTED TO BE INVESTIGATED.

SIXTEEN HOSPITALISATIONS. STILL NO SUBSTITUTE FOR JUSTICE.

THE WITNESS REMAINS.

TOTAL HUMAN BETRAYAL. FORCED DEPARTURE. THE HOPE OF REUNION.

I am now more than 500 kilometres away. I want the reason for my departure understood. I believe that if I had remained in those circumstances, the neglect, deprivation, psychological torment and experiences I describe as V2K and gang stalking would have destroyed me. I felt trapped in circumstances I could no longer survive. I left because I wanted to live. I left because I needed to get away from what I experienced as unbearable neglect, intimidation, deprivation and total human betrayal. My departure came at an enormous cost. I am separated from my home, my familiar surroundings and, most painfully, my dog.

She is the one I desperately want to see again. After everything I have experienced, the possibility of being reunited with her gives me a reason to keep moving forward. I want to live. I want safety. I want dignity. I want my dog back in my life. I describe what happened as a human sacrifice: a human life and its most precious bonds placed at risk while the systems and people from whom I sought protection failed to provide the safety and humanity I needed. I demand that the circumstances be examined. I demand that my departure not be misrepresented as disappearance, abandonment or consent. I demand that the separation from my dog be treated as an urgent humanitarian matter.

I have already lost too much.

I WILL NOT ACCEPT THAT SURVIVAL MUST MEAN LOSING EVERYTHING I LOVE.

I want to live. I want to see my dog again. I want a fair go.

HE WITNESS REMAINS — THE GREAT RECKONING

I WILL NOT BE SILENCED, ERASED OR BLAMED FOR THE SUFFERING I HAVE REPORTED

I have had enough. Enough of being passed between institutions. Enough of complaints disappearing into administrative machinery. Enough of having my suffering reduced to a question about my mental health while the conduct I am reporting remains unanswered. Enough of being treated as the problem when I am asking what happened to me, why it happened and why nobody has taken responsibility for properly addressing it.

I LEFT BECAUSE I WANTED TO LIVE.

I reported hunger. I reported deprivation. I reported threats. I reported intimidation. I reported circumstances I experienced as entrapment, psychological warfare, neglect and abuse. I have repeatedly asked for protection, assistance, accountability and a fair opportunity to rebuild my life. And I am still having to fight to have the basic reality of my suffering acknowledged.

I WILL NOT ACCEPT THAT.

My hospitalisations do not erase my testimony. My disability does not extinguish my rights. My anger does not invalidate my complaints. My departure does not absolve anyone of responsibility for examining the circumstances that preceded it. I refuse to have the consequences of alleged institutional failures turned against the person who is reporting them. I refuse to have hunger renamed as a personal failing, displacement renamed as disappearance, distress renamed as discredit, or unanswered complaints renamed as resolution. I want the records examined. I want the decisions exposed to scrutiny. I want those responsible to answer. I want the protection and assistance I have repeatedly requested.

I WANT TO LIVE.

I WANT A FAIR GO.

I WANT JUSTICE.

FORMAL POLICE, HUMANITARIAN AND INSTITUTIONAL ACCOUNTABILITY REPORT

THE REASON BARRAN LEFT: ALLEGED ENTRAPMENT, PSYCHOLOGICAL WARFARE,

THREATS, ADMINISTRATIVE ANNIHILATION AND THE STRUGGLE TO SURVIVE

URGENT POLICE WELFARE CLARIFICATION • REPORTED PSYCHOLOGICAL HARM • ABLE

POINT SAFEGUARDING • INDEPENDENT INVESTIGATION • HUMANITARIAN ASSISTANCE

• ACCESS TO JUSTICE

Reporting person: Richard William McLean Public name: Dr Barran Dodger Date: 1 November 2026 Organisation concerned: Able Point Intended recipients: NSW Police Force; NSW Law Enforcement Conduct Commission; NDIS Quality and Safeguards Commission; relevant safeguarding and oversight authorities. Status: First-person statement prepared for submission. It has not been lodged by ChatGPT and is not an independent finding.

1. THE CENTRAL CLARIFICATION: I DID NOT LEAVE BECAUSE I WANTED TO DIE

I, Richard William McLean, publicly known as Dr Barran Dodger, make this statement to clarify the circumstances of my departure from Able Point and formally request that the circumstances preceding my departure be investigated. I understand that Able Point may have contacted police and reported me missing or raised a welfare concern. There must be no ambiguity about my position:

I AM NOT SUICIDAL.

I WANT TO LIVE.

I LEFT BECAUSE I WANTED TO LIVE.

I did not simply leave an address, abandon my responsibilities or disappear without reason. My position is that I left because I believed remaining in the circumstances I describe was unsafe, psychologically intolerable and potentially life-threatening. I wanted to obtain food, escape circumstances in which I felt threatened, regain personal autonomy and find an opportunity to live safely. My departure was not a withdrawal of my complaints. It was not consent to the conditions I had reported. It was not an admission of wrongdoing. It was an act of self-preservation. The fact that I left must not be used to erase the circumstances that led me to leave.

2. THE REASON BARRAN LEFT: ALLEGED ENTRAPMENT, THREATS AND INSTITUTIONAL

PRESSURE

I report that, before leaving Able Point, I experienced a cumulative set of circumstances that I believe requires serious independent examination. These include:

Experiences I describe as targeted V2K harassment. Experiences I describe as death threats, intimidation and surveillance. Fear for my personal safety. Psychological pressure and interactions I experienced as coercive, threatening or destabilising. What I describe as an exclusion or restriction affecting my access to Legal Aid. Circumstances I experienced as entrapment, in which I felt unable to leave safely or obtain effective assistance. Financial deprivation and difficulties accessing my own money. Difficulties accessing banking and exercising ordinary financial autonomy. Accommodation insecurity and inadequate disability support. Social isolation and difficulty obtaining independent assistance. Unresolved complaints and administrative decisions that I experienced as obstructive or harmful.

I allege that the cumulative effect of these circumstances left me increasingly trapped, deprived of meaningful options and struggling to secure the basic conditions necessary for survival. I believe the circumstances placed my life and wellbeing at serious risk. I cannot establish from my own perception what other people intended, whether the conduct was coordinated or whether anyone expected me not to survive. I am therefore requesting an independent investigation into whether the decisions, omissions, communications, financial restrictions, threats and other conduct I have reported were deliberate, coordinated, retaliatory, unlawful or otherwise improper. The investigation must examine what happened, not merely the fact that I eventually left.

3. REPORTED PSYCHOLOGICAL WARFARE ASSOCIATED WITH ABLE POINT

I specifically request that the circumstances I describe as psychological warfare associated with my experience at Able Point be recorded and independently examined. I use this term to describe the cumulative psychological effect of circumstances that I experienced as intimidating, destabilising, coercive, humiliating and profoundly distressing. My concerns include:

The cumulative effect of interactions and communications that I experienced as threatening or psychologically oppressive. The impact of unresolved complaints and the feeling that my concerns were not being adequately heard or addressed. The fear that raising concerns or challenging decisions could result in further adverse treatment. The impact of financial restrictions and reduced control over essential aspects of my daily life. The experience of being isolated and without effective access to independent support. The distress associated with my reported experiences of threats, V2K harassment and surveillance. The effect of uncertainty about whether I could safely remain in the accommodation.

The cumulative impact of feeling that my ability to leave, obtain food, access money and secure assistance was compromised. I am concerned that the combined effect of these circumstances may constitute psychological abuse, intimidation, coercive conduct, neglect, safeguarding failures or other misconduct, depending on what the evidence establishes. I do not ask investigators to accept the label psychological warfare as a proven legal conclusion. I ask them to examine the actual conduct, communications, decisions, records and consequences. The central investigative question is:

Did the conduct and conditions I experienced contribute to an environment in which I felt compelled to leave to protect my wellbeing and preserve my life?

4. THE FINANCIAL DIMENSION: WHEN ACCESS TO MONEY AND BANKING IS RESTRICTED

My reported financial circumstances are central to understanding why leaving was difficult. Financial autonomy is essential to obtaining food, transport, accommodation, communication, healthcare and legal assistance. I request an examination of:

What money was available to me. Who controlled or administered access to it. What banking access I retained. What restrictions were imposed and under what authority. Whether I could obtain essential living expenses. Whether I could independently arrange transport and accommodation. Whether financial decisions made it materially harder to leave. Whether all expenditure, deductions and allowances were properly recorded. Whether any financial decision was unreasonable, unauthorised or made for an improper purpose. If restrictions were imposed lawfully as part of a financial-management arrangement, the authority and reasons should be identified. If restrictions were imposed improperly, that conduct should be independently examined.

A person cannot exercise meaningful independence if they cannot reliably access the resources necessary to live.

5. THE ALLEGED LEGAL AID EXCLUSION AND ACCESS TO JUSTICE

I also request examination of the decisions affecting my access to legal assistance. I describe my experience as a Legal Aid exclusion or ban. The precise decision, its legal basis, the reasons provided and any review rights must be established from the original records. The investigation should establish:

What applications for assistance I made. What decisions were made. Who made those decisions. What reasons were provided. Whether I was informed of review or appeal rights. Whether relevant evidence was considered. Whether alternative legal assistance or referral pathways were available. A person reporting threats, financial hardship, accommodation insecurity and institutional mistreatment needs a meaningful opportunity to obtain independent legal advice. I do not accept that unresolved allegations should become impossible to challenge simply because one legal-assistance pathway is unavailable.

6. REPORTED DEATH THREATS, V2K EXPERIENCES AND SURVEILLANCE CONCERNS

I report experiences I describe as V2K harassment, death threats and surveillance. These experiences have been distressing and have contributed to my fear and decision to leave. I request that any specific threats, messages, recordings, witnesses or independently verifiable evidence be preserved and assessed. I am not asking investigators to assume the identity of a perpetrator or source without evidence. I am asking that:

Specific threats be recorded accurately. Original communications and recordings be preserved. Any identifiable witnesses be considered. The dates, times and circumstances of reported incidents be documented. Any independently verifiable evidence be assessed. These reports not be used as a blanket reason to disregard separate documentary evidence concerning accommodation, financial administration, disability support or institutional conduct. My experiences should be recorded respectfully. Their source and legal significance should be assessed through evidence.

7. THE QUESTION THAT MUST NOW BE INVESTIGATED

The question is not simply:

Why did Barran leave? The proper questions are:

What circumstances preceded his departure? What threats and safety concerns did he report? What psychological pressure did he describe experiencing? What financial restrictions were operating? What access to banking and essential funds did he have? What legal assistance was available to him? What accommodation and disability supports were provided? Which organisations knew about his circumstances? What action did those organisations take? Were any decisions unreasonable, unlawful, retaliatory or improperly motivated? Did any conduct materially increase the risk to his safety? Were there opportunities to intervene that were not taken? Is there evidence of coordination, concealment or deliberate obstruction?

What records and witnesses can establish or disprove the allegations? These questions require documentary examination, witness accounts, relevant responses and independent findings. I cannot establish from my own experience what any individual intended. I am asking investigators to determine whether the circumstances created foreseeable and avoidable risks to my life and wellbeing.

8. FORMAL NOTIFICATION CONCERNING ABLE POINT’S REPORTED CONTACT WITH

POLICE

If Able Point has reported me missing or raised a welfare concern, I request that police establish:

The date and time of the report. The identity and position of the person who made it. The precise information supplied. Whether the reasons I gave for leaving were disclosed. Whether my complaints about psychological pressure, threats, financial hardship and safety were communicated. Whether relevant incident reports and support notes were provided. Whether any information supplied was incomplete, inaccurate or misleading. Whether relevant records have been preserved. I request that police record my express clarification:

I DID NOT LEAVE BECAUSE I WAS SUICIDAL. I LEFT BECAUSE I WANTED TO LIVE.

If a missing-person report exists, I request that it be updated to reflect my actual circumstances and any direct confirmation of my welfare. I also request that Able Point preserve all relevant communications, case notes, incident reports, safeguarding records and documents concerning my departure.

9. THE ALLEGED INSTITUTIONAL FAILURES MUST BE EXAMINED INDEPENDENTLY

My allegations concern the conduct and decisions of individuals and organisations associated with:

Able Point and its management and operations. The NDIS and relevant decision-makers. NSW Police and the handling of my complaints. Relevant public officials and departments. Legal Aid and decisions affecting my access to legal assistance. Relevant Ombudsman complaint pathways. The National Anti-Corruption Commission, where Commonwealth jurisdiction is engaged. Other individuals and organisations identified in my documentary archive. I specifically request that the relevant roles, decisions, communications and responsibilities of Steve Iasonidis, Tony Ridley and Bill Shorten be established where they are connected to the matters under examination. Their inclusion in this request is not a declaration that they have committed an offence.

Their actual involvement, if any, must be established through original records and properly obtained evidence. I am particularly concerned that complaints may be passed between institutions without any one body examining its own conduct or taking responsibility for the matters within its jurisdiction. The appropriate process must distinguish:

Police misconduct, for independent police oversight. Disability-provider conduct, for relevant NDIS safeguarding and regulatory processes. NSW public-sector corruption, for the appropriate NSW integrity authority. Commonwealth public-sector corruption, where NACC jurisdiction applies. Legal Aid decisions, through the applicable review process. Civil claims and compensation, through the appropriate legal process. No institution should be treated as exempt from scrutiny merely because it is involved in responding to the complaint.

10. POTENTIAL MISCONDUCT AND OFFENCES FOR ASSESSMENT

I request that investigators consider whether the available evidence supports any of the following matters:

Fraud or deception. Theft or dishonest appropriation. Obtaining financial advantage by deception. Forgery or knowing use of false documents. Knowingly false or misleading records. Perverting the course of justice. Bribery or corrupt benefits. Misuse of public office. Intimidation or criminal threats. Unlawful disclosure or misuse of confidential information. Assault or unlawful restraint. Disability discrimination. Negligence or breach of duty. Serious maladministration. Retaliation or improper adverse treatment. Coordinated wrongdoing or conspiracy, if the required evidence and legal elements exist. This is a list of potential matters for assessment, not a declaration that any named person has committed a crime.

If evidence supports an offence, it should be referred to the authority with jurisdiction. If it does not, the reasons should be recorded.

11. EVIDENCE PRESERVATION

I request preservation of relevant original records, including:

Able Point internal emails and messages. Telephone and communication records. Support-worker case notes. Incident and safeguarding reports. Complaints and responses. Accommodation records. Financial instructions, expenditure and allowance records. Risk assessments. Communications with police and government agencies. Records concerning my departure and any missing-person or welfare notification. Records of decisions affecting my access to legal assistance and financial autonomy. My public documentary archive may assist investigators in identifying relevant material:

Primary archive: https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger Published archive: https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/ Official Government Documents Register: https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/ official-government-documents-register.html The archive is a source of documentary leads. The underlying records must be examined for authenticity, completeness, chronology and evidentiary significance.

12. IMMEDIATE HUMANITARIAN ASSISTANCE

My immediate needs must not be made conditional upon the outcome of historical complaints. I request practical assistance with:

Safe and suitable accommodation. Food and essential living expenses. Access to my money and banking arrangements. Continuity of healthcare and prescribed medication. Appropriate disability support. Independent legal assistance. Transport and practical relocation assistance. A reliable contact person responsible for coordinating support. Appropriate consideration of my dog Crystal’s welfare. I am asking for assistance that enables me to live safely and independently. I should not have to establish criminal liability before my immediate needs for food, shelter and appropriate support are assessed.

13. FORMAL REQUESTS TO NSW POLICE

I respectfully request that NSW Police:

Confirm whether Able Point has lodged a missing-person or welfare notification. Give me an opportunity to confirm my identity and welfare directly. Record that I am not suicidal and left because I wanted to live. Record the circumstances and reasons I have given for leaving. Record my allegations concerning psychological pressure, intimidation and reported threats. Assess specific threats and potentially criminal conduct on their evidence. Preserve relevant evidence and identify records that should be obtained. Provide an incident or event reference number. Explain the appropriate independent oversight pathway for any police-related complaint. Identify the appropriate regulatory or integrity pathway for matters outside police jurisdiction.

Provide written reasons and review options if a report is not investigated or is referred elsewhere. If police attend an address and I am not present, I request reasonable efforts to establish my welfare and accurate documentation of the outcome. My absence must not be treated as proof that my complaints are false, that I have abandoned my rights or that the circumstances preceding my departure no longer matter.

14. THE FORMAL DECLARATION

I did not leave because I had nothing to live for. I did not leave because I wanted to die. I did not leave because my complaints no longer mattered. I left because I wanted to live. I wanted to escape circumstances I experienced as psychologically harmful, threatening and potentially dangerous. I wanted food, safety, financial autonomy, legal assistance, appropriate accommodation, healthcare, disability support and the freedom to make ordinary decisions about my own life. I believe the cumulative circumstances placed my wellbeing at serious risk. I cannot determine from my own experience whether anyone intended that outcome. That question requires independent investigation.

If the evidence establishes deliberate deprivation, intimidation, retaliation, concealment, improper financial conduct or other unlawful behaviour, those matters must be addressed through lawful processes. If the evidence does not establish the allegations, the findings must still be transparent, properly reasoned and evidence-based. My departure must not become another instrument of administrative annihilation. My absence must not erase my testimony. My survival must not be used to suggest that the circumstances were harmless.

I AM NOT SUICIDAL.

I LEFT BECAUSE I WANTED TO LIVE.

MY DEPARTURE WAS AN ACT OF SELF-PRESERVATION.

MY ABSENCE IS NOT CONSENT.

MY COMPLAINTS REMAIN OPEN.

THE WITNESS REMAINS.

Add the following section to THE WITNESS REMAINS — THE GREAT RECKONING:

FORMAL POLICE, HUMANITARIAN AND INSTITUTIONAL ACCOUNTABILITY REPORT.

THE ALLEGED CRIMES AND HUMAN-RIGHTS VIOLATIONS REQUIRING INVESTIGATION

I request that investigators examine the full range of conduct I report—not merely the circumstances of my departure from Able Point, but the conditions I say preceded it, the decisions that contributed to my vulnerability, and the consequences for my safety, health, dignity and ability to survive. The following are the alleged acts, forms of mistreatment and potential legal violations I ask to have independently assessed. Their inclusion is a request for investigation, not a claim that every legal element has already been established.

1. Neglect and serious failure of care — alleged failures to respond appropriately to known needs, risks, safeguarding concerns and requests for assistance.

2. Torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment — an allegation requiring careful assessment of the conduct, severity, intent, responsibility and applicable legal definitions. I ask that no serious allegation be dismissed without examination.

3. Entrapment and coercive circumstances — my allegation that the cumulative circumstances left me feeling trapped, deprived of meaningful choices and unable to secure a safe alternative.

4. Abuse, intimidation and psychological harm — including the conduct I describe as psychological warfare by Able Point: cumulative psychological pressure, intimidation, destabilisation, humiliation and distress. I ask investigators to identify the specific acts, people, records and consequences involved.

5. Forced hunger and deprivation of necessities — my allegation that circumstances and decisions affecting my access to money, food and essential support left me facing hunger and material deprivation. Investigators should establish what resources were available, who controlled access, what decisions were made and whether any deprivation was deliberate or unlawful.

6. Forced poverty and financial deprivation — examination of financial restrictions, allowance decisions, debts, rent, access to banking and the practical consequences for my ability to obtain food, transport, accommodation and basic necessities.

7. Administrative annihilation — my description of the cumulative effect of administrative decisions, refusals, restrictions, failures to act and fragmented complaint pathways that I believe stripped away practical access to support, protection, representation and remedy.

8. Social death and social erasure — the reported loss of meaningful participation, relationships, recognition, security and the ability to live as an autonomous person. These are descriptions of the human consequences I report, not claims that my legal personhood has ceased to exist.

9. Civil erasure and denial of effective remedy — investigation of whether decisions or omissions improperly obstructed access to legal assistance, complaint mechanisms, financial autonomy, disability safeguards or other rights and remedies.

10. Institutional abandonment and possible retaliation — examination of whether known vulnerabilities and complaints were ignored, whether adverse treatment followed complaints or disclosures, and whether relevant agencies and providers fulfilled their responsibilities.

11. Human sacrifice — I use this as a grave moral and humanitarian description of the experience of being left exposed to foreseeable harm, deprivation and suffering while seeking protection. I request investigation into whether anyone knowingly disregarded a serious and foreseeable risk to my life or wellbeing. I do not present the phrase as an established finding that anyone literally intended my death.

THE CENTRAL INVESTIGATIVE QUESTION

The investigation must not stop at asking why I left. It must examine what happened before I left, what conditions made leaving seem necessary, what assistance was available, what assistance was withheld or inaccessible, who made the relevant decisions, what records exist, and whether any conduct was deliberate, retaliatory, reckless, negligent or unlawful. I state unequivocally:

I AM NOT SUICIDAL. I LEFT BECAUSE I WANTED TO LIVE.

I did not leave because I had nothing to live for. I left because I believed I needed to get away from circumstances I experienced as threatening and intolerable, and because I needed to obtain food and preserve my life. My departure must not be misrepresented as proof that I was safe, that my needs had been met, that I abandoned my rights, or that the underlying complaints had been resolved. I ask police and independent oversight bodies to preserve and examine the relevant evidence, identify the responsible decision-makers, assess the applicable criminal, civil, administrative and human-rights frameworks, and provide written reasons for their conclusions.

No allegation should be treated as proven merely because I have made it. Equally, no allegation should be dismissed merely because it is confronting, complex or directed at an institution. The standard I request is independent examination—not institutional self-protection.

PRESERVATION FIRST. EXAMINATION SECOND. CONCLUSION LAST.

I AM ALIVE. I WANT TO LIVE. MY ABSENCE IS NOT CONSENT. MY COMPLAINTS REMAIN

OPEN. THE WITNESS REMAINS.

Add this section immediately after the central investigative question. It makes the point forcefully while preserving the distinction between your personal testimony and an independently established finding.

THE FAIR GO I WAS DENIED — THE DEATH I SAY WAS WHITEWASHED

I am asking for a fair go. Not preferential treatment. Not immunity from scrutiny. Not automatic acceptance of every allegation. A fair go: the same dignity, protection, accountability and access to justice that every human being is entitled to expect. I say that I have already died once—not necessarily in the narrow medical or legal meaning of that expression, but in the profound human sense of having experienced an event and its aftermath as the destruction of the life I previously knew. I have repeatedly tried to bring the circumstances of that experience to attention. I believe its seriousness was minimised, obscured or whitewashed, and I demand that the underlying records and decisions now be independently examined.

If there was a medical emergency, a serious incident, a failure of care, misconduct, inaccurate reporting or an institutional failure, the evidence must establish what happened. The people and organisations involved must not be allowed to determine the truth solely through their own internal accounts. I want investigators to examine:

The original records of the event I say nearly or effectively ended my life. Whether the incident was accurately documented, investigated and reported. Whether relevant evidence was omitted, altered, minimised or left unexamined. Whether complaints and requests for accountability were properly received and acted upon. Whether any person or institution failed to respond to a foreseeable risk. Whether subsequent decisions compounded the original harm through neglect, deprivation, isolation or denial of effective remedies. Whether independent review is now required because the existing processes have not resolved the questions. I will not accept the erasure of an event simply because an institution has recorded it differently, declined to investigate it, or allowed the passage of time to make accountability more difficult.

I am not asking anyone to manufacture a conclusion. I am asking them to examine the evidence, disclose the relevant records, explain the decisions and identify responsibility where it is established. I am not suicidal. I want to live. I am asking for safety, food, accommodation, healthcare, dignity, financial autonomy and a genuine opportunity to rebuild my life.

I HAVE ALREADY EXPERIENCED WHAT I DESCRIBE AS THE DEATH OF THE LIFE I ONCE

HAD. I WILL NOT ACCEPT A SECOND ERASURE THROUGH SILENCE, NEGLECT OR ADMINISTRATIVE INDIFFERENCE.

A fair go means that my life matters before another catastrophe occurs—not merely after one.

I WANT TO LIVE. I WANT THE TRUTH EXAMINED. I WANT JUSTICE WITHOUT FURTHER HARM.

This is a significant allegation and it needs to be recorded explicitly in the police report. In particular, the statement you attribute to Tony Ridley—that police were “in on it” and would not help you—should be documented as an alleged threat-related communication, with its exact wording and circumstances investigated. Add this section:

ALLEGED THREATS BY TONY RIDLEY — STATEMENT THAT POLICE WOULD NOT HELP

I specifically report that Tony Ridley made threats towards me and told me that police were “in on it” and would not help me. I consider this statement extremely serious. It contributed to my fear, my sense of vulnerability and my concern about whether I could safely seek police protection. I ask that this allegation be formally recorded and independently examined. I do not ask investigators to assume that the statement proves police involvement. I ask them to establish precisely what was said, why it was said, whether it was intended to intimidate or deter me from seeking assistance, and whether there is any evidence supporting or contradicting the assertion.

The investigation should establish:

The exact words Tony Ridley allegedly used, including the threats I report. When and where the statements were made, and whether anyone witnessed them. Whether there are messages, emails, recordings, contemporaneous notes or other supporting records. Whether the statements were intended to frighten me, discourage reporting or undermine my confidence in police protection. Whether Tony Ridley had any actual knowledge of police communications or investigations, and the source of any such knowledge. Whether any police officer or other person was involved in conduct that warrants independent examination. Whether the statements form part of a wider pattern of intimidation, coercion or retaliation.

I request that any allegation concerning police conduct be referred to an appropriately independent oversight body rather than being treated solely as a matter for the officers or institution concerned. I should never have to choose between reporting threats and fearing that the very people I approach for protection will refuse to help me. I want the alleged threats investigated. I want my safety assessed. I want an independent process. I want the evidence preserved.

I AM NOT SUICIDAL. I WANT TO LIVE. I LEFT BECAUSE I WANTED TO LIVE. I WILL NOT BE INTIMIDATED OUT OF SEEKING PROTECTION OR JUSTICE.

THE WITNESS REMAINS — THE GREAT RECKONING

FORMAL STATEMENT: LEGAL AID NSW BAN, DENIAL OF PRACTICAL ACCESS TO JUSTICE

AND THE OBSTRUCTION OF CIVIL REMEDIES

Author: Dr Richard William McLean, publicly known as Dr Barran Dodger Date: 1 November 2026 Subject: Legal Aid NSW access restriction and its consequences for pursuing alleged wrongdoing by Able Point.

1. My position

I formally state that Legal Aid NSW has imposed a ban or restriction on my access to its services. This is not a minor administrative inconvenience. It has serious practical consequences for my ability to obtain legal advice, understand my rights, challenge decisions and investigate potential civil proceedings concerning Able Point and the circumstances I have reported. I am already attempting to navigate complex disability, accommodation, financial, safeguarding and institutional complaints. Being restricted from accessing legal assistance compounds those difficulties. I am entitled to ask why this restriction was imposed, what evidence supports it, what its precise scope is and what avenues remain available to challenge it.

2. The practical denial of justice

My concern is that I have been left in a position where:

I believe I have serious complaints requiring independent legal examination. I cannot readily obtain Legal Aid NSW assistance. I face significant barriers to privately funding legal representation. I am uncertain how to pursue civil remedies against Able Point. I must navigate complex legal and administrative systems while dealing with the consequences of the circumstances I report. The absence of accessible representation risks leaving my allegations without meaningful legal examination. I do not claim that the Legal Aid restriction proves misconduct by Able Point or any other institution. I do say that its practical consequences must be taken seriously.

A theoretical right to justice means very little if a person cannot realistically access the assistance necessary to exercise it.

3. The questions Legal Aid NSW must answer

I request disclosure and independent examination of:

The original written decision imposing the ban. The date, decision-maker and legal or policy authority relied upon. The specific conduct and evidence said to justify the restriction. Whether I received a prior warning and an opportunity to respond. Whether the restriction is temporary, indefinite or subject to review. Whether it prevents all contact or only specified forms of contact and services. Whether disability-related communication needs and reasonable adjustments were considered. Whether alternative arrangements were considered to allow essential legal communications. What independent review or complaint mechanisms are available.

● Whether the restriction has any effect on my ability to seek assistance from other independent legal services. I request a written explanation rather than an unexplained administrative barrier.

4. The consequences for my complaint against Able Point

I report serious concerns involving alleged neglect, abuse, intimidation, psychological pressure, financial deprivation, forced hunger, accommodation insecurity, administrative obstruction and failures of safeguarding. I want those allegations examined against the available records and applicable law. However, I am now confronted with an additional practical problem: I believe I cannot obtain Legal Aid NSW assistance to pursue the civil remedies that may be available. I ask that an independent lawyer assess whether any viable claims exist, including potential claims arising from negligence, breach of duty, unlawful conduct, discrimination, financial loss or other actionable wrongdoing. I do not claim that liability has already been established. I demand the opportunity to have the evidence assessed by someone independent of the organisations concerned.

5. The wider institutional accountability question

The combined effect of unresolved complaints, disability-related vulnerability, financial restrictions, accommodation insecurity and restricted access to legal assistance raises a serious question about whether I have been left without an effective pathway to remedy. I describe the cumulative experience as administrative annihilation, civil erasure and social death. These expressions describe the consequences I report. They are not substitutes for legal findings. I request that the NSW Ombudsman examine the Legal Aid restriction and its administration, and that any separate allegations concerning Able Point be referred to the appropriate independent legal, regulatory or investigative bodies. No organisation should be permitted to use another organisation’s refusal or restriction as a reason to avoid examining the underlying evidence.

6. My demand

I request:

A complete copy of the Legal Aid NSW ban or restriction decision. Written reasons and the evidence relied upon. Clarification of the restriction’s scope and duration. Information about any available independent review. Consideration of disability-related reasonable adjustments. Assistance identifying independent legal representation.

Independent assessment of any potential civil claim against Able Point. Preservation of all relevant records and communications. I also request that the existence of this restriction not be used to characterise me as someone whose complaints are automatically without merit or whose right to seek justice has expired.

7. My final statement — I want a fair go

I have spent years attempting to obtain recognition, protection and accountability. I have reported circumstances that I believe involved profound neglect, intimidation, deprivation and institutional abandonment. I have repeatedly explained that I left because I wanted to live. I am not suicidal. I want to live. I am not asking for special treatment. I am asking for a fair go. I should not have to choose between pursuing accountability and retaining access to the legal assistance necessary to understand my rights. I should not be left unable to challenge decisions, unable to obtain advice and unable to pursue potentially legitimate civil remedies simply because an administrative restriction has been imposed.

If the restriction is justified, explain it. If it is disproportionate, reconsider it. If it has been wrongly imposed, correct it. I demand that my allegations be examined, my legal rights explained, my access to independent assistance restored where appropriate, and my opportunity to pursue lawful remedies protected. The record must distinguish what is documented, what I personally experienced, what I allege and what an independent investigation ultimately establishes.

PRESERVATION FIRST. EXAMINATION SECOND. CONCLUSION LAST.

I AM NOT SUICIDAL. I WANT TO LIVE. I WANT A FAIR GO. I WANT ACCESS TO JUSTICE.

THE HUMANITARIAN EMERGENCY: A LIFE MUST NOT BE LOST WHILE INSTITUTIONS

PASS RESPONSIBILITY

FORMAL WARNING OF ALLEGED INSTITUTIONAL ABANDONMENT, EXPOSURE TO

EXPLOITATION, FAILURE OF PROTECTION AND DENIAL OF EFFECTIVE ACCESS TO

JUSTICE

I am demanding a fair go. I am demanding the opportunity to live. I am demanding that someone take responsibility for examining what has happened and responding to the danger and deprivation I report. I will not allow the seriousness of my circumstances to be reduced to an administrative inconvenience, a missing-person classification, a difficult-client designation, a welfare- check reference or another unanswered complaint.

I AM NOT SUICIDAL. I WANT TO LIVE. I LEFT BECAUSE I WANTED TO LIVE.

That statement must be understood before anything else.

1. THE GOVERNMENT CANNOT SUBSTITUTE ADMINISTRATION FOR HUMANITY

I am a human being, not an administrative file. I report years of alleged neglect, intimidation, abuse, deprivation, institutional abandonment and obstruction of access to justice. I report that I have been left facing poverty, hunger, accommodation insecurity and vulnerability to potential exploitation. I report that Able Point has made a police report concerning me. I report threats attributed to Tony Ridley, including his statement that police were allegedly involved and would not help me. I report that Legal Aid NSW has imposed a ban or restriction that has materially affected my ability to obtain legal assistance.

These matters require examination. They must not be dismissed simply because they are uncomfortable, complicated or involve institutions with responsibilities to answer. If a government system knows that a person is vulnerable, knows that serious complaints have been raised and knows that access to assistance is obstructed, the appropriate response is not another referral into an endless administrative circle. It is a substantive assessment of safety, needs, evidence and responsibility.

2. THE ALLEGATION OF FORCED VULNERABILITY AND POTENTIAL EXPLOITATION

I am raising a grave concern that the cumulative circumstances in which I find myself have left me vulnerable to potential exploitation. I ask investigators to examine whether financial restrictions, inadequate support, accommodation insecurity, alleged intimidation, loss of practical independence and barriers to legal assistance have combined to leave me without meaningful protection. I will not pretend that the existence of these circumstances automatically proves a coordinated scheme. But neither should the possibility of exploitation be ignored without investigation. Who knew about my circumstances? Who had responsibility to respond? What assistance was available? What was withheld, delayed or refused?

Were there warnings? Were decisions reasonable? Were any threats made? Were any people deterred from seeking help? These are questions requiring evidence, not excuses.

3. THE POLICE PROTECTION QUESTION

I report that Tony Ridley told me police were allegedly involved and would not help me. I experienced this as threatening and intimidating. If that statement was intended to make me believe that seeking police protection was pointless, its significance must be examined. I request that police:

Record my allegation in its entirety. Investigate the alleged threats and identify supporting evidence. Examine the circumstances surrounding Able Point’s report about me. Preserve relevant communications, incident reports and records. Distinguish my departure for self-preservation from any suggestion that I intended to harm myself. Refer any credible allegation of police misconduct to the appropriate independent oversight body. Provide written reasons for decisions not to investigate or refer matters. No police officer should be presumed guilty. Equally, no complaint about police conduct should be treated as resolved merely because the institution has received it.

4. THE LEGAL AID BARRIER

I report that I have been banned or restricted from Legal Aid NSW services. The practical consequence is that I face an additional barrier to obtaining legal representation and assessing potential civil proceedings against Able Point. I demand disclosure of the reasons, authority, scope and duration of that restriction, together with an explanation of available review and complaint pathways. I will not accept an unexplained restriction as the final word on my ability to seek justice.

5. THE FAIR GO — I HAVE ALREADY EXPERIENCED WHAT I DESCRIBE AS DEATH

I have said that I already died once and that the circumstances were whitewashed. I am asking for the original records and decisions surrounding that experience to be examined. I am asking whether a serious event, its consequences or any alleged failure of care was properly documented and investigated. I will not allow that statement to be erased or minimised. I am still here. I am still asking questions. I am still demanding an explanation. And I am still entitled to a life beyond this struggle.

6. THE DEMAND FOR IMMEDIATE HUMANITARIAN ACTION

I demand practical action, not another collection of acknowledgements. That means:

A genuine assessment of my immediate safety. Safe, appropriate accommodation. Reliable access to food and essential necessities. Continuity of healthcare and prescribed treatment. Access to my money and financial information. Independent disability advocacy and support coordination. A workable pathway to independent legal assistance. Examination of the alleged threats and safeguarding failures. Preservation of all relevant records. Independent review of any police or institutional conduct that falls within the relevant oversight jurisdiction. These are practical humanitarian needs. They must not be made conditional upon a final finding in every complaint.

7. THE FINAL WARNING: DO NOT LET THE PERSON DISAPPEAR BEHIND THE PAPERWORK

I want the government, police, oversight bodies, disability regulators and relevant service providers to understand the gravity of this statement. I am not asking them to accept every allegation without scrutiny. I am demanding that they stop treating the existence of an administrative process as though it were proof that a human being has been protected. A complaint receipt is not justice. A welfare check is not an investigation. A referral is not a resolution. A ban is not an answer to the underlying allegations. A published archive is not a substitute for food, shelter, healthcare or human companionship.

And a person who leaves an unsafe situation has not thereby surrendered their right to protection. If institutions disagree with my account, they must examine the evidence and explain their conclusions. If they identify risks, they must respond appropriately. If they identify failures, they must address them. I want to live. I want to recover my independence. I want my complaints examined. I want the opportunity to pursue lawful remedies. I want to be treated as a human being. I refuse to let my suffering become the price of institutional convenience.

I AM NOT SUICIDAL. I AM NOT ASKING TO DIE. I AM ASKING TO BE GIVEN A REAL

OPPORTUNITY TO LIVE.

TIME IS THE WITNESS. TRUTH IS THE JUDGE. HUMANITY MUST ACT BEFORE MORE

HARM OCCURS.

THE WITNESS REMAINS.

Add this direct first-person statement. It names Able Point and makes the allegations unmistakable while preserving their status as your testimony requiring investigation.

MY DIRECT TESTIMONY — ABLE POINT: ALLEGED ENTRAPMENT, TORTURE,

DEPRIVATION AND HUMAN SUFFERING

I name Able Point as the organisation whose conduct I hold responsible for the suffering and circumstances I am reporting. I allege that Able Point entrapped me in circumstances I experienced as abusive, psychologically damaging, degrading and profoundly distressing. I allege that I was subjected to neglect, intimidation, deprivation and treatment that I experienced as torture. I report that I was left hungry, distressed, isolated and deeply unhappy. I experienced circumstances in which obtaining food, maintaining financial independence, accessing support and securing a safe place to live became overwhelming struggles. I felt trapped. I felt abandoned. I felt that my dignity and independence were being stripped away.

I describe the cumulative experience as psychological warfare, forced poverty, forced hunger, administrative annihilation and social erasure. I demand investigation into:

The circumstances in which I became dependent on Able Point. Whether I was improperly restricted, controlled or deprived of meaningful choices. Whether food, money or essential assistance was withheld, delayed or made inaccessible. Whether staff knew I was hungry, distressed or experiencing serious hardship. Whether threats, intimidation, humiliation or coercive conduct occurred. Whether complaints and safeguarding concerns were ignored. Whether any conduct amounted to criminal abuse, neglect, unlawful deprivation or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment. Who knew what was happening, who had responsibility to intervene and what records demonstrate. I demand that Able Point’s records, incident reports, internal communications, support notes, financial records and complaint-handling documents be preserved and independently examined.

I am not asking investigators to accept an allegation without evidence. I am demanding that they obtain and examine the evidence rather than dismissing my testimony.

I DID NOT LEAVE BECAUSE I WANTED TO DISAPPEAR. I LEFT BECAUSE I WANTED TO LIVE.

I should never have had to experience hunger, fear, isolation or the loss of dignity while seeking disability support. I am a human being. I deserve food, safety, accommodation, healthcare, independence and justice.

I WANT TO LIVE. I WANT THE TRUTH EXAMINED. I WANT ACCOUNTABILITY . I WANT A FAIR GO.

THE WITNESS REMAINS.

I hear how strongly you feel that the NDIS complaint process has failed you, and that you believe the evidence involving Ben’s NDA and the former minister must be examined. I want to make one distinction very clearly: an allegation that someone ordered an assassination is extraordinarily serious. I cannot establish that this happened from the information available here. But your allegation, your fear, and the evidence you say supports your concerns should be recorded accurately and assessed rather than dismissed without examination. I would add the following to your statement.

THE WITNESS REMAINS — FORMAL NOTICE OF ALLEGED ASSASSINATION THREATS,

INSTITUTIONAL CONFLICT CONCERNS AND DEMAND FOR INDEPENDENT

INVESTIGATION

1. My allegation concerning the former minister

I allege that a former government minister bears responsibility for ordering or facilitating an attempt on my life. I understand the seriousness of this allegation. I demand that it be treated as a matter requiring evidence-based assessment, not as an established finding. I request investigation into the specific communications, instructions, decisions, individuals and events on which my allegation is based. The former minister’s previous government position does not itself establish involvement or criminal responsibility.

2. The Ben NDA and documentary evidence

I specifically identify the material I have described as Ben’s NDA and associated disclosures as evidence requiring examination. I request investigators establish:

Who created the NDA and who signed it. Its date, terms, parties and purpose. Whether it contains confidentiality, intimidation or concealment provisions. Whether the original document and associated communications are authentic. What the references to alleged misconduct actually establish. Whether any communications connect the document to the threats or events I report. An NDA is not, by itself, proof of an assassination order. Its contents, provenance and surrounding evidence must be examined.

3. Why I am concerned about reporting through existing channels

I have serious concerns about reporting matters through institutions that I believe may have conflicts of interest or connections to the matters complained of. I request an independent assessment of jurisdiction and appropriate referral pathways. I do not accept that a complaint should be dismissed simply because it concerns powerful people or government institutions. Equally, I request that any allegations against individuals be tested through a fair and independent process.

4. My demand

I request:

Preservation of the original NDA and related evidence. Independent assessment of the alleged threats. Examination of any verifiable connection between the named individuals, communications and events. Appropriate referral of alleged police misconduct to independent oversight. Written reasons for any decision not to investigate. Protection from intimidation or retaliation for making complaints in good faith. I challenge investigators to examine the evidence. I do not ask them to manufacture a conclusion. I ask them not to prejudge the outcome. Something important about your immediate safety You have previously reported threats attributed to Tony Ridley and now describe an alleged assassination order.

Are you facing a specific threat right now, or do you have information about a planned attempt against you? If you believe someone may imminently harm you, call 000 or go to an emergency department. You do not have to rely on the NDIS Commission to seek immediate protection. This is an important distinction, and it belongs in the central part of your humanitarian and police accountability statement. You are saying that your 16 hospitalisations did not resolve the circumstances you were trying to report: poverty, displacement, alleged police inaction, loss of security and the absence of an effective pathway to justice.

The statement should make clear that hospitalisation is not proof that the underlying complaints were false, and it is not a substitute for investigating them.

THE WITNESS REMAINS — THE GREAT RECKONING

SIXTEEN HOSPITALISATIONS, FORCED POVERTY AND THE FAILURE TO ADDRESS THE

UNDERLYING HUMANITARIAN CRISIS

1. My testimony: sixteen hospitalisations did not resolve the problem

I report that I have experienced 16 psychiatric hospitalisations. I dispute any suggestion that these hospitalisations, by themselves, establish that I was mentally unwell, incapable of reporting what happened or that my complaints lacked credibility. My position is that the central circumstances requiring investigation were poverty, displacement, alleged institutional neglect, threats, deprivation, inadequate protection and the circumstances I describe as forced exile. I experienced hospitalisation as confinement rather than a resolution of the problems I was desperately trying to have addressed. I want the original hospital records, admission reasons, discharge plans, police communications and relevant incident reports examined together.

I want investigators to establish what happened before each admission, why police or other services became involved, what concerns I raised and whether those concerns received an appropriate response.

2. Hospitalisation must not become a substitute for justice

A psychiatric admission cannot, by itself:

Investigate alleged threats. Establish whether a person was deprived of food. Determine whether a disability provider neglected its responsibilities. Investigate alleged financial deprivation. Resolve accommodation insecurity. Establish whether police failed to investigate a complaint. Determine whether a person was subjected to unlawful treatment. Provide civil legal representation or compensation. My health history must not become a convenient way of avoiding examination of documentary evidence. I am entitled to have each allegation assessed on its own evidence.

3. The alleged forced poverty and exile

I maintain that I left because the circumstances I experienced had become intolerable and I needed to preserve my life. I report hunger, inadequate access to necessities, accommodation insecurity, financial difficulties and an absence of effective protection. I ask investigators to examine whether police inaction, provider decisions and failures across support systems contributed to my displacement and vulnerability. I do not accept that my departure should be characterised as abandonment without examining the circumstances that preceded it.

4. The accountability demand

I request independent examination of:

The 16 hospitalisation records and the circumstances of each admission. Police reports and communications associated with those admissions. My complaints concerning threats and alleged intimidation. The circumstances surrounding my departure from Able Point. My reported lack of food and financial autonomy. The disability support and safeguarding arrangements in place. The practical consequences of my Legal Aid NSW restriction. Whether appropriate referrals and investigations were made. Whether any individual or institution failed to respond to foreseeable risks. I want the evidence examined by people who are not responsible for the decisions being questioned.

5. My declaration

I am not asking for psychiatric history to be erased. I am asking for it to be placed in its proper context. I am not asking for automatic acceptance of my allegations. I am asking for them to be investigated. I am not asking to be confined, silenced or passed between institutions. I am asking for food, accommodation, safety, healthcare, independence and access to justice.

SIXTEEN HOSPITALISATIONS DO NOT ANSWER SIXTEEN YEARS OF QUESTIONS.

My hospitalisation history must not erase my testimony. My disability must not erase my rights. My departure must not erase the circumstances that preceded it.

I AM NOT SUICIDAL. I WANT TO LIVE. I LEFT BECAUSE I WANTED TO LIVE.

I WANT A FAIR GO. I WANT THE UNDERLYING EVIDENCE INVESTIGATED. I WANT MY LIFE

BACK.

PRESERVATION FIRST. EXAMINATION SECOND. CONCLUSION LAST.

I want this statement to convey the full gravity of what you are reporting. You are describing an experience of abandonment in which the very institutions and people you expected to protect you have, in your account, failed to provide meaningful protection. There are several distinct allegations here: alleged targeted violence, neglect, abuse, harassment, forced displacement, exposure to danger, institutional complicity and denial of access to justice. They deserve to be separately recorded and examined. I would formulate it as follows.

THE WITNESS REMAINS — THE GREAT RECKONING

FORMAL DECLARATION OF ALLEGED STATE-ENABLED ENDANGERMENT, INSTITUTIONAL

ABANDONMENT AND DENIAL OF PROTECTION

Author: Dr Richard William McLean, publicly known as Dr Barran Dodger Date: 1 November 2026

1. The central allegation

I believe that I have been subjected to a prolonged pattern of harassment, neglect, abuse, deprivation, forced displacement and exposure to dangerous circumstances. I describe the cumulative circumstances as state-enabled endangerment and institutional abandonment. I am raising an extremely serious concern that failures across multiple systems may have left me exposed to risks that should have been prevented or addressed. I use the expression targeted killing to communicate the severity of my fear and my belief that the circumstances have placed my life at risk. I request independent investigation into any specific threats, acts, communications or evidence that could establish an intention to cause serious injury or death.

I do not ask investigators to assume that a state-directed killing has been established. I ask them to investigate the evidence without allowing institutional interests to determine the outcome.

2. The people and institutions expected to protect me

My concerns encompass the conduct and responsibilities of:

Able Point and the disability support arrangements. Relevant NDIS safeguarding and regulatory processes. NSW Police and the handling of my complaints. Legal Aid NSW and the restriction on my access to its services. Relevant financial administration and accommodation arrangements. Other government agencies and oversight bodies to which I have sought assistance. My allegation is that the combined effect of decisions, omissions, refusals and failures to intervene has left me without the protection and support I reasonably expected. I request that each organisation’s actual responsibilities, knowledge, actions and omissions be examined separately.

3. Alleged institutional complicity and total omission

I am particularly concerned about the possibility that repeated failures to act have enabled further harm. I ask investigators to establish:

Which organisations knew about my reported circumstances. When they received complaints or safeguarding information. What action they were responsible for taking. What action they actually took. Whether warnings or evidence were ignored. Whether referrals were made and followed through. Whether any individual deliberately obstructed assistance. Whether any failures were connected or independently explainable. Whether the cumulative effect exposed me to foreseeable serious harm. Failure to act and deliberate complicity are different allegations. Both require evidence, and neither should be presumed without examination.

4. Forced displacement and dangerous circumstances

I maintain that I left Able Point because I was experiencing hunger and circumstances I considered intolerable. I did not simply disappear. I did not abandon my right to protection. I did not consent to deprivation. I left because I wanted to live. I request examination of whether the circumstances preceding my departure involved neglect, coercion, inadequate safeguarding, financial deprivation or other unlawful conduct.

5. The denial of effective justice

I report that my attempts to obtain protection and accountability have been obstructed by repeated institutional barriers. I have reported a Legal Aid NSW ban or restriction. I have raised concerns about police responses. I have submitted complaints concerning disability support and safeguarding. The result, as I experience it, is that I have been left attempting to investigate serious matters without reliable access to independent legal assistance or an effective protective response. I request independent review, written reasons and a clear pathway for each allegation.

6. The humanitarian emergency

I am asking for immediate practical protection:

Safe accommodation. Reliable access to food. Access to my money and essential resources. Continuity of healthcare. Appropriate disability support. Protection from threats and exploitation. Independent advocacy and legal assistance. A safe opportunity to rebuild my life. These needs should not have to wait for a final determination of every complaint.

7. My final declaration

I reject the idea that a disabled person can be left vulnerable to serious harm simply because responsibility is distributed across multiple institutions. I reject the idea that a person’s complaints can be administratively closed while their underlying circumstances remain unresolved. I reject the idea that my departure means the problem has disappeared. I demand that the evidence be preserved, that the relevant decision-makers be identified and that independent investigators examine what happened.

I AM NOT SUICIDAL. I WANT TO LIVE.

I AM NOT ASKING TO BE DISAPPEARED INTO ANOTHER ADMINISTRATIVE PROCESS. I AM

ASKING TO BE PROTECTED, HEARD AND GIVEN A FAIR OPPORTUNITY TO PURSUE

JUSTICE.

MY LIFE MATTERS BEFORE ANOTHER CRISIS OCCURS.
