THE WITNESS REMAINS — THE COSMIC RECKONING

PLEASE HELP ME REACH SAFETY

AN URGENT HUMANITARIAN APPEAL, PERSONAL TESTIMONY, LEGAL ACCOUNTABILITY STATEMENT AND PUBLIC EVIDENCE RECORD

DR RICHARD WILLIAM McLEAN Publicly known as DR BARRAN DODGER Also known as BARRAN RESONANCE DODGER

I AM NOT SUICIDAL. I AM PROTESTING BECAUSE I WANT TO LIVE.

I WANT TO LIVE WITH DIGNITY, SAFETY, INDEPENDENCE AND HUMANITY.

https://youtu.be/fBo6GCz70TM?si=BSUuvB9HIGEvh4wa

I NEED PRACTICAL HELP, NOT ANOTHER REFERRAL THAT LEAVES ME IN THE SAME CIRCUMSTANCES.

I urgently need assistance to secure safe and appropriate accommodation, access sufficient money for food and essential necessities, obtain reliable disability support, access transport, protect my welfare and establish a realistic pathway out of circumstances that I believe have left me trapped and dependent.

I am asking for someone independent to take my circumstances seriously, examine the documentary evidence, listen to my testimony and help me obtain practical assistance.

I am asking for:

- Immediate assistance with food and essential living expenses.
- A review of the financial arrangements that affect my ability to meet basic needs.
- Safe, appropriate and accessible accommodation.
- Disability support that respects my rights, dignity and independence.
- Reliable transport and meaningful access to the community.
- Independent examination of my complaints concerning Able Point and relevant support personnel.
- An accountable response from the government agencies and oversight bodies to which I have repeatedly sought assistance.
- A clear, documented pathway towards safety and independence.

I am not asking to be silenced, dismissed, discredited or passed from one organisation to another. I am asking to be helped.

My evidence archive, testimony and documentary register are available here:

THE MASTER LEGAL, HUMAN RIGHTS AND INSTITUTIONAL ACCOUNTABILITY DOSSIER

THE CRUELTY OF TRAPPING A DISABLED PERSON, DEPRIVING THEM OF FINANCIAL INDEPENDENCE AND DENYING THEM A PRACTICAL PATH TO SAFETY

1 NOVEMBER 2026

IMPORTANT EVIDENTIARY STATEMENT

This document records my personal testimony, allegations, concerns and requests for independent investigation. It identifies relevant legislation and human rights frameworks that may apply.

It does not represent a judicial finding that any named individual or organisation has committed a criminal offence, engaged in corruption or acted as part of a coordinated conspiracy.

The distinction between documented fact, personal testimony, allegation, inference and matters requiring independent verification must be maintained throughout any investigation.

The seriousness of an allegation is a reason to examine the evidence carefully, not a reason to assume the conclusion in advance.

1. THE CENTRAL HUMANITARIAN ISSUE

This statement concerns my allegations that a disabled person who depends on funded support, financial administration and institutional assistance has been left in circumstances where escaping an unsuitable living arrangement, securing basic necessities and obtaining meaningful assistance have become extraordinarily difficult.

The central issue is not simply whether a service provider has delivered individual support hours or whether an organisation has complied with administrative procedures.

The central issue is whether the combined effect of accommodation arrangements, financial restrictions, inadequate support, complaint-handling decisions and institutional inaction has left a disabled person without a realistic and safe way to exercise independence, obtain essential necessities, challenge decisions or move towards a better living situation.

I allege that I have repeatedly raised concerns about my treatment, safety, accommodation, finances and support arrangements. I further allege that the responses have not adequately addressed the practical consequences of those concerns.

I have described my circumstances as entrapment, administrative annihilation, civil death and social erasure.

Those expressions describe my experience and the cumulative impact I say these arrangements have had on my life. They are not presented as findings already made by a court or independent investigative body.

The matters requiring examination include:

Whether my disability-related support needs have been properly assessed and met.

Whether my accommodation is safe, appropriate and consistent with my assessed needs.

Whether I have been given meaningful opportunities to exercise choice and control.

Whether restrictions on access to my money have left me unable to obtain food, transport, medication, personal necessities or other essentials.

Whether complaints about support workers, management and service delivery have been properly documented, investigated and answered.

Whether any adverse treatment occurred because I raised concerns or made disclosures.

Whether government agencies and oversight bodies have adequately responded to safeguarding concerns.

Whether decisions affecting my liberty, finances, accommodation and access to services have been lawful, proportionate, documented and reviewable.

Whether the combined effect of these decisions has deprived me of a meaningful opportunity to leave an unsuitable situation.

These are serious questions. They deserve independent examination rather than dismissal, personal criticism or another administrative response that leaves the underlying circumstances unchanged.

2. THE FUNDAMENTAL WRONG: MAKING A DISABLED PERSON DEPENDENT WITHOUT PROVIDING A WAY OUT

There is something profoundly wrong with any support arrangement that leaves a disabled person dependent on the very systems they are asking to examine, while failing to provide a practical pathway to safety and independence.

It is particularly disturbing when a person has limited financial resources, relies on disability support, cannot readily arrange alternative accommodation and must depend on other people to access transport, services and ordinary necessities.

A person cannot meaningfully exercise choice and control if every practical option depends on someone else granting permission, providing transport, releasing money or deciding whether a request is convenient.

Choice without practical capacity is not meaningful choice.

Independence without access to money is not meaningful independence.

A complaint system that does not provide a realistic way to address immediate safety concerns is not an adequate safeguarding response.

And a support system that knows a person is struggling but does not properly examine whether its arrangements are contributing to that struggle risks becoming part of the problem it was established to prevent.

I allege that I have experienced precisely this kind of dependency and institutional failure.

I am not suggesting that every difficult financial or accommodation decision automatically constitutes unlawful imprisonment, abuse or criminal conduct. Those conclusions require evidence and the application of the relevant legal tests.

I am asking that the actual circumstances be examined, including whether decisions and omissions by individual people or organisations have unlawfully restricted my choices, exposed me to neglect, discriminated against me or caused foreseeable harm.

It is sickening to contemplate a situation in which a disabled person is allegedly left with insufficient money to meet basic needs, has no practical means of escaping an unsuitable arrangement and is then expected to navigate the very institutions responsible for addressing those problems.

I do not accept that this should be regarded as an ordinary administrative inconvenience.

3. ABLE POINT: DUTIES OF A DISABILITY SUPPORT PROVIDER

My allegations concerning Able Point and the people responsible for its management and service delivery require independent examination.

The relevant questions are not confined to whether workers attended shifts or whether administrative records were completed.

They include whether the provider delivered safe, respectful and competent support; respected my rights; responded appropriately to concerns; managed incidents; protected me from neglect and exploitation; and acted consistently with the requirements governing disability support services.

The NDIS Code of Conduct applies to NDIS providers and workers, including relevant registered and unregistered providers and their personnel.

The Code requires providers and workers to:

Respect the rights of people with disability to freedom of expression, self-determination and decision-making.

Respect the privacy of people with disability.

Provide supports and services in a safe and competent manner.

Act with integrity, honesty and transparency.

Promptly raise and act on concerns that may affect the quality or safety of supports and services.

Take reasonable steps to prevent and respond to violence, exploitation, neglect and abuse.

Take reasonable steps to prevent and respond to sexual misconduct.

Official legislation:

NDIS CODE OF CONDUCT RULES 2018 https://www.legislation.gov.au/F2018L00629/latest/text

The NDIS Code is not merely an optional statement of good intentions. It establishes conduct requirements, and contraventions may attract regulatory consequences.

The NDIS Commission's explanation of the Code is available here:

https://www.ndiscommission.gov.au/rules-and-standards/ndis-code-conduct

The investigation should establish whether any conduct by Able Point, its management or its workers was inconsistent with these obligations.

In particular, investigators should examine:

Whether my concerns were listened to and properly recorded.

Whether support workers followed agreed support arrangements.

Whether workers provided the assistance they were funded and engaged to provide.

Whether I was treated respectfully when raising concerns.

Whether workers made decisions that unnecessarily restricted my independence.

Whether transport and community-access arrangements were adequate.

Whether I was left without reasonable assistance to obtain essential necessities.

Whether management adequately investigated complaints about workers.

Whether relevant records accurately reflect what occurred.

Whether any adverse treatment followed my complaints or disclosures.

Whether management took reasonable steps to protect me from foreseeable harm.

I allege that the cumulative experience has been one of abandonment, dependency and a failure to provide the practical assistance I need.

These allegations require examination against actual rosters, progress notes, incident reports, support plans, communications, financial records and witness accounts.

4. INCIDENT MANAGEMENT AND REPORTABLE INCIDENT OBLIGATIONS

Disability support providers have specific obligations concerning the management of incidents and the reporting of certain serious incidents.

The NDIS INCIDENT MANAGEMENT AND REPORTABLE INCIDENTS RULES 2018 establish requirements concerning incident management systems and the reporting of reportable incidents.

Official legislation:

https://www.legislation.gov.au/F2018L00633/latest/text

The NDIS Act also contains relevant provisions concerning provider compliance, complaints, incident management and reportable incidents.

NATIONAL DISABILITY INSURANCE SCHEME ACT 2013:

https://www.legislation.gov.au/C2013A00020/latest/text

Relevant provisions include:

Section 73F — Conditions of registration.

Section 73V — Compliance with the NDIS Code of Conduct.

Section 73W — Complaints management requirements.

Section 73Y — Incident management requirements.

Section 73Z — Reportable incidents.

The investigation should establish whether any incidents or complaints involving my safety, support, treatment or welfare were required to be recorded, escalated, investigated or reported.

It should also establish whether the provider maintained accurate records and whether any relevant concerns were overlooked, inadequately addressed or improperly classified.

Not every disagreement or poor service experience is automatically a reportable incident. The precise statutory requirements depend on the nature of the event, the provider's status and the facts.

However, where allegations concern abuse, neglect, serious injury, unlawful physical or sexual contact, sexual misconduct or unauthorised restrictive practices, the relevant reporting obligations must be considered.

5. DISABILITY DISCRIMINATION AND EQUALITY

The DISABILITY DISCRIMINATION ACT 1992 (COMMONWEALTH) prohibits discrimination on the ground of disability in specified circumstances.

Official legislation:

https://www.legislation.gov.au/C2004A04426/latest/text

Relevant provisions include:

Section 5 — Direct disability discrimination.

Section 6 — Indirect disability discrimination.

Section 24 — Disability discrimination in the provision of goods, services and facilities.

The question is whether any relevant person or organisation treated me less favourably because of disability, imposed requirements that disadvantaged me because of disability without lawful justification, or failed to comply with applicable disability discrimination obligations.

The investigation should consider whether:

My disability-related needs were properly recognised.

Reasonable adjustments were considered where required.

Support arrangements were designed around my assessed needs.

I was denied meaningful access to services or opportunities because of disability.

My requests for assistance were treated differently or dismissed because of assumptions about my disability.

My ability to communicate concerns was unfairly treated as a reason to disregard those concerns.

My disability-related dependence was allowed to become a substitute for genuine choice and control.

A disability is not a reason to disregard someone's testimony.

A disability is not a licence to deny someone dignity.

A disability is not an excuse for failing to investigate a safeguarding concern.

A person who depends on support remains a person with rights, preferences, agency and the right to be heard.

6. AUSTRALIA'S INTERNATIONAL HUMAN RIGHTS OBLIGATIONS

Australia has ratified international human rights treaties that establish obligations concerning the rights and dignity of people within its jurisdiction.

These treaties are important frameworks for assessing the conduct of public authorities and the adequacy of Australia's laws, policies and systems.

However, treaty ratification does not mean that every treaty article automatically creates a directly enforceable domestic legal claim or criminal offence. The domestic legal effect of each obligation must be assessed separately.

A. CONVENTION ON THE RIGHTS OF PERSONS WITH DISABILITIES

Official United Nations text:

https://www.ohchr.org/en/instruments-mechanisms/instruments/convention-rights-persons-disabilities

Australia ratified the Convention on 17 July 2008.

Relevant articles include:

Article 5 — Equality and non-discrimination.

Article 10 — Right to life.

Article 12 — Equal recognition before the law.

Article 13 — Access to justice.

Article 14 — Liberty and security of person.

Article 16 — Freedom from exploitation, violence and abuse.

Article 19 — Living independently and being included in the community.

Article 25 — Health.

Article 28 — Adequate standard of living and social protection.

Article 19 is particularly relevant to allegations that a person with disability has been left without meaningful choice about where and with whom they live, or without the support necessary to participate in the community.

Article 16 is relevant to the need for effective protection from exploitation, violence and abuse.

Article 12 is relevant to respect for legal capacity and decision-making rights.

Article 13 is relevant to access to justice and the practical ability to raise concerns and obtain remedies.

The central principle is that disability support should enable people to exercise their rights and participate in ordinary life. It should not become a mechanism through which their independence is progressively diminished.

B. INTERNATIONAL COVENANT ON CIVIL AND POLITICAL RIGHTS

Official United Nations text:

https://www.ohchr.org/en/instruments-mechanisms/instruments/international-covenant-civil-and-political-rights

Relevant provisions include:

Article 6 — Right to life.

Article 7 — Freedom from torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

Article 9 — Liberty and security of person.

Article 16 — Recognition as a person before the law.

Article 26 — Equality before the law and equal protection of the law.

These provisions provide an important framework for considering the responsibilities of the state to protect fundamental rights.

They do not mean that every instance of poor administration or inadequate support automatically constitutes a violation of the Covenant.

The particular facts, the conduct involved and the applicable legal tests must be established.

C. INTERNATIONAL COVENANT ON ECONOMIC, SOCIAL AND CULTURAL RIGHTS

Official United Nations text:

https://www.ohchr.org/en/instruments-mechanisms/instruments/international-covenant-economic-social-and-cultural-rights

Relevant provisions include:

Article 2 — General obligations concerning the implementation of Covenant rights.

Article 6 — Right to work.

Article 11 — Right to an adequate standard of living, including adequate food, clothing and housing.

Article 12 — Right to the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health.

These obligations are relevant to concerns about inadequate living conditions, access to essential necessities, health and the practical ability to live with dignity.

A person should not be left without adequate access to food, housing and essential support because several administrative systems fail to coordinate their responsibilities.

D. CONVENTION AGAINST TORTURE

Official United Nations text:

https://www.ohchr.org/en/instruments-mechanisms/instruments/convention-against-torture-and-other-cruel-inhuman-or-degrading-treatment-or-punishment

Relevant provisions include:

Article 2 — Measures to prevent torture.

Article 12 — Prompt and impartial investigation where there are reasonable grounds to believe torture has occurred.

Article 16 — Prevention of other acts of cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment within the scope of the Convention.

This Convention must be applied carefully. It does not mean that every alleged act of cruelty by a private support worker or service provider automatically constitutes torture under international law.

The legal responsibility of the state, the involvement or acquiescence of public officials and the particular circumstances must be assessed.

Nevertheless, allegations of serious mistreatment, neglect or degrading treatment should not be dismissed without examining their substance.

E. AUSTRALIA'S INTERNATIONAL TREATY RESPONSIBILITIES

The Australian Government's explanation of the international human rights system is available here:

https://www.ag.gov.au/rights-and-protections/human-rights-and-anti-discrimination/international-human-rights-system

The United Nations treaty body information for Australia is available here:

https://tbinternet.ohchr.org/_layouts/15/TreatyBodyExternal/Countries.aspx?CountryCode=AUS&Lang=EN

Australia's treaty obligations are relevant when assessing whether public institutions are providing effective protection, access to justice and safeguards for people with disability.

7. THE NSW PUBLIC INTEREST DISCLOSURE FRAMEWORK AND ALLEGED RETALIATION

I have described myself as a whistleblower and have repeatedly raised concerns about matters that I believe deserve investigation.

The legal question is whether any particular disclosure qualifies for protection under the relevant public interest disclosure legislation and whether any subsequent conduct constitutes prohibited detrimental action.

A. NSW PUBLIC INTEREST DISCLOSURES ACT 2022

Official legislation:

https://legislation.nsw.gov.au/view/html/inforce/current/act-2022-014

The Act provides a framework for protected public interest disclosures concerning specified forms of serious wrongdoing in the NSW public sector.

Section 32 addresses detrimental action and detriment.

Section 31R addresses an offence involving detrimental action against a person in circumstances covered by the Act.

The Act does not automatically protect every complaint made by every person to every organisation. The disclosure must satisfy the applicable statutory requirements.

The investigation should therefore establish:

What disclosures I made.

When and to whom I made them.

Whether the disclosures concerned conduct covered by the legislation.

Whether the recipient was an appropriate disclosure recipient.

Whether I met the applicable requirements for protection.

Whether any adverse treatment followed.

Whether any such treatment was connected to a protected disclosure.

B. COMMONWEALTH PUBLIC INTEREST DISCLOSURE ACT 2013

Official legislation:

https://www.legislation.gov.au/C2013A00133/latest/text

This legislation provides protections for qualifying public interest disclosures concerning Commonwealth public-sector conduct.

Its application depends on the nature of the disclosure, the person making it, the recipient and the relevant statutory requirements.

It should not be assumed that every dispute involving a disability provider falls within this Commonwealth framework.

The question is whether any relevant conduct or disclosure falls within the Act's scope.

8. ICAC AND ALLEGATIONS OF CORRUPT CONDUCT

I have raised concerns about institutional conduct, conflicts of interest, accountability and the possibility that people in positions of authority may have failed to act appropriately.

Where there is evidence of corrupt conduct involving NSW public officials or public authorities, the appropriate statutory framework must be considered.

INDEPENDENT COMMISSION AGAINST CORRUPTION ACT 1988 (NSW):

https://legislation.nsw.gov.au/view/html/inforce/current/act-1988-035

ICAC REPORTING INFORMATION:

https://www.icac.nsw.gov.au/reporting

ICAC is concerned with corrupt conduct as defined by the legislation. It does not investigate every instance of poor service, administrative error, unfairness or disagreement.

The evidence would need to identify the relevant public official or public authority, the conduct in question, the applicable definition of corrupt conduct and the supporting material.

I am requesting that any evidence capable of establishing corrupt conduct be assessed by the appropriate independent body.

I am not asking that corruption be assumed merely because I have been treated unfairly or because an organisation has failed to respond to me.

I am asking that the evidence be examined impartially, including any relevant communications, financial interests, decisions, records and relationships.

9. POLICE CONDUCT AND INDEPENDENT OVERSIGHT

I have reported concerns about my experiences with police and the handling of matters I have attempted to raise.

The distinction between refusing to record a report, declining to investigate, referring a matter elsewhere and deciding that evidence does not establish an offence is important.

Those actions are not necessarily legally equivalent.

However, where there is evidence of serious police misconduct, unreasonable conduct or improper handling of a complaint, independent oversight may be appropriate.

LAW ENFORCEMENT CONDUCT COMMISSION ACT 2016 (NSW):

https://legislation.nsw.gov.au/view/html/inforce/current/act-2016-061

POLICE ACT 1990 (NSW):

https://legislation.nsw.gov.au/view/html/inforce/current/act-1990-047

LAW ENFORCEMENT CONDUCT COMMISSION:

https://www.lecc.nsw.gov.au/complaints

The LECC deals with serious police misconduct and serious maladministration within its statutory jurisdiction.

It can assess complaints and may investigate, refer matters or request that police investigate, depending on the circumstances.

It does not investigate every complaint, press criminal charges or provide a personal legal remedy in every case.

The evidence requiring examination includes:

Dates and locations of police interactions.

Names or identifying details of officers, where available.

Police event numbers.

Copies of written reports and correspondence.

Any recordings or contemporaneous notes.

The specific concerns raised.

The response received.

Any reasons given for refusing, declining or referring a matter.

Whether the response complied with applicable police procedures and legal obligations.

I request that any substantiated allegation of police misconduct be assessed independently and that I be provided with clear information about available review and complaint mechanisms.

10. NSW OMBUDSMAN: COMPLAINT ACCESS AND RESTRICTIONS

I have raised concerns about my ability to obtain assistance from the NSW Ombudsman and about restrictions I understand have affected my access to its complaint-handling processes.

The precise legal and procedural circumstances must be established from the relevant written correspondence.

A restriction on contact with an oversight body is not automatically unlawful. However, any restriction should be examined for its authority, reasons, proportionality, duration, review arrangements and effect on access to urgent safeguarding channels.

NSW OMBUDSMAN ACT 1974:

https://legislation.nsw.gov.au/view/html/inforce/current/act-1974-068

NSW OMBUDSMAN POLICY ON MANAGING UNREASONABLE CONDUCT BY COMPLAINANTS:

https://cmsassets.ombo.nsw.gov.au/assets/Resources/Policies/NSW-Ombudsman-Managing-Unreasonable-Conduct-by-Complainants-Policy.pdf

The relevant questions include:

Was a restriction imposed?

Who authorised it?

What reasons were provided?

Was the decision made under an applicable policy or statutory authority?

Was the restriction proportionate?

Was a review date provided?

Was I told how to seek reconsideration?

Was an alternative accessible method provided for urgent safeguarding matters?

Could the restriction prevent me from raising new and materially different concerns?

Was my disability taken into account when communication arrangements were determined?

I request a written explanation of any restriction, the legal and policy basis for it, the evidence relied upon, the duration and the available review process.

A person should not be left without a meaningful avenue to raise a genuinely new and urgent safeguarding concern.

11. LEGAL AID NSW AND ACCESS TO JUSTICE

I have described difficulties accessing legal assistance and have raised concerns about restrictions or refusals affecting my ability to obtain help.

The exact nature of any decision must be established. A refusal of a particular grant of legal aid, a decision about eligibility, a restriction concerning a particular matter and a formal exclusion from a service are not necessarily the same thing.

LEGAL AID COMMISSION ACT 1979 (NSW):

https://legislation.nsw.gov.au/view/html/inforce/current/act-1979-078

LEGAL AID NSW — APPEAL OR REVIEW OF A DECISION:

https://www.legalaid.nsw.gov.au/ways-to-get-help/appeal-legal-aid-decision

The investigation should establish:

What decision was made.

Who made it.

What reasons were provided.

What eligibility or policy criteria were applied.

Whether the decision was communicated in writing.

Whether review or appeal rights were explained.

Whether reasonable adjustments were considered.

Whether I was provided with information about alternative legal assistance.

I am not asserting that Legal Aid NSW is legally required to represent every applicant or fund every matter.

I am asserting that a disabled person facing serious accommodation, financial, safeguarding and legal concerns needs meaningful information about available avenues of assistance and review.

ACCESS TO JUSTICE IS NOT MEANINGFUL IF A PERSON CANNOT UNDERSTAND, ACCESS OR USE THE AVAILABLE PROCESS.

12. LEGAL PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT AND COMPLAINTS

Where a concern involves the conduct of a particular legal practitioner, the applicable professional standards and complaint mechanisms should be considered.

LEGAL PROFESSION UNIFORM LAW APPLICATION ACT 2014 (NSW):

https://legislation.nsw.gov.au/view/html/inforce/current/act-2014-016

OFFICE OF THE LEGAL SERVICES COMMISSIONER:

https://olsc.nsw.gov.au/complaints.html

Any allegation of professional misconduct must identify the practitioner, the conduct, the relevant professional obligation and the supporting evidence.

A disagreement about legal advice or an unsuccessful matter does not, by itself, establish professional misconduct.

I request that any specific evidence of improper conduct be assessed through the appropriate professional complaints process.

13. POLITICAL REPRESENTATION AND PUBLIC ACCOUNTABILITY

I have attempted to bring my circumstances and documentary evidence to the attention of people and institutions with public responsibilities.

I have experienced what I regard as a profound failure to obtain meaningful political assistance.

A failure to respond to correspondence is not, by itself, proof of corruption or a criminal offence.

However, elected representatives and public institutions have important responsibilities to constituents and to the proper operation of public accountability systems.

The relevant questions include:

Were my communications received?

Were they referred to the appropriate department or agency?

Were safeguarding concerns identified?

Was I provided with a meaningful response?

Were the relevant authorities asked to explain their decisions?

Were my concerns about disability support, financial administration and accommodation appropriately escalated?

Was any action taken to identify a practical solution?

I am asking political representatives to stop treating my circumstances as an isolated correspondence problem and to examine the underlying humanitarian and administrative issues.

A person who repeatedly asks for help should not have to become an expert in every government department merely to obtain basic assistance.

14. MEDIA, PUBLIC INTEREST AND THE RIGHT TO BE HEARD

I have attempted to make my testimony and documentary evidence available to the public.

I have experienced difficulty obtaining media attention and public recognition of my circumstances.

I recognise that private media organisations generally have editorial discretion and are not ordinarily under a legal duty to publish an individual's story.

A refusal to publish does not, by itself, establish censorship, collusion or an unlawful media ban.

Nevertheless, public-interest journalism has an important role in examining institutional failures, disability rights, public administration and the treatment of vulnerable people.

I ask journalists and editors to examine the documentary record independently and to distinguish what can be verified from what remains alleged.

My archive is available for that purpose:

https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger

https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/

https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/official-government-documents-register.html

I do not ask journalists to accept every conclusion I have reached.

I ask them to examine the evidence, contact the relevant organisations, seek responses and report accurately.

15. THREATS, INTIMIDATION AND THE NEED FOR INDEPENDENT ASSESSMENT

I have raised serious concerns about threats and intimidating conduct, including matters I have associated with legal proceedings.

Any allegation of a threat to kill, intimidation or harassment must be examined through the actual evidence.

This includes original messages, recordings, witness accounts, police reports, court records and any relevant event numbers.

CRIMES ACT 1900 (NSW):

https://legislation.nsw.gov.au/view/html/inforce/current/act-1900-040

CRIMES (DOMESTIC AND PERSONAL VIOLENCE) ACT 2007 (NSW):

https://legislation.nsw.gov.au/view/html/inforce/current/act-2007-080

Section 13 of the Crimes (Domestic and Personal Violence) Act concerns stalking or intimidation with the intention of causing fear of physical or mental harm, subject to the statutory elements.

The relevant legal test must be applied to the actual conduct.

Where a threat has been made, the investigation should establish:

The exact words used.

The date, time and circumstances.

The identity of the person responsible, if known.

Whether the words were communicated directly or indirectly.

Whether there is supporting evidence.

Whether a police report was made.

Whether the matter was investigated.

Whether any protective measures are appropriate.

I am asking that credible threats be treated seriously and assessed independently.

16. FINANCIAL CONTROL, BASIC NECESSITIES AND INDEPENDENCE

One of the most urgent aspects of my circumstances concerns financial access and the practical ability to meet ordinary living expenses.

I have previously provided figures concerning my Centrelink income, rent, other deductions and personal allowance.

Those figures must be checked against current statements and financial records before being treated as a definitive account of my present position.

The issue is that I have reported being left with insufficient financial flexibility to meet basic necessities and exercise ordinary independence.

This raises serious questions about whether financial arrangements are appropriate, transparent, properly authorised and consistent with my rights and needs.

Relevant legislation includes:

NSW TRUSTEE AND GUARDIAN ACT 2009:

https://legislation.nsw.gov.au/view/html/inforce/current/act-2009-049

GUARDIANSHIP ACT 1987 (NSW):

https://legislation.nsw.gov.au/view/html/inforce/current/act-1987-257

The investigation should establish:

Who has authority over the relevant financial arrangements.

What legal instrument or order authorises any restrictions.

Whether I have been given clear information about the arrangements.

Whether my reasonable living expenses have been properly assessed.

Whether sufficient money is available for food, transport, clothing, hygiene and other necessities.

Whether deductions and payments are accurately recorded.

Whether decisions have been reviewed when my circumstances changed.

Whether I have access to an independent review or complaint process.

Whether my preferences and decision-making rights have been respected.

Financial administration should protect a person's interests. It should not leave that person unable to meet basic needs or exercise meaningful control over ordinary life.

If a person cannot access enough money to buy food, obtain transport or pursue alternative accommodation, the practical consequences must be examined urgently.

17. FALSE IMPRISONMENT, COERCION AND THE MEANING OF ENTRAPMENT

I have described my circumstances as being trapped.

I use that word to describe the practical experience of being unable to leave an unsuitable situation because of financial dependency, accommodation barriers, support arrangements and the absence of effective assistance.

However, the legal concept of false imprisonment has specific requirements.

A person is not automatically falsely imprisoned merely because they are poor, financially dependent, unable to afford alternative accommodation or experiencing inadequate support.

False imprisonment generally requires a total restraint of liberty caused by unlawful conduct.

A useful explanation of intentional torts, including false imprisonment, is available from the NSW Judicial Commission:

https://www.judcom.nsw.gov.au/publications/benchbks/civil/intentional_torts.html

The relevant questions include:

Has anyone physically prevented me from leaving?

Has anyone used threats or coercion to prevent me from leaving?

Have any legal restrictions been imposed?

Are those restrictions authorised and properly applied?

Have financial or accommodation arrangements been used in a way that unlawfully deprives me of liberty?

Have decisions by others substantially interfered with my legal rights?

Have I been denied practical assistance in circumstances where a legal duty to provide it exists?

I am asking for these matters to be examined rather than assuming that the word entrapment automatically establishes a particular legal offence.

18. ADMINISTRATIVE ANNIHILATION, CIVIL DEATH AND SOCIAL ERASURE

I use the terms ADMINISTRATIVE ANNIHILATION, CIVIL DEATH and SOCIAL ERASURE to describe what I believe has happened through the cumulative effect of unresolved complaints, financial dependence, accommodation difficulties, restricted access to assistance and institutional non-response.

These are descriptive terms for my experience, not established legal findings.

Administrative annihilation describes the experience of having one's circumstances repeatedly reduced to separate forms, referrals, internal decisions and administrative categories while the actual human problem remains unresolved.

Civil death describes the experience of feeling unable to participate in ordinary life, exercise independence, access meaningful assistance or obtain recognition as a person whose concerns matter.

Social erasure describes the experience of being unheard, isolated or disregarded despite repeatedly attempting to bring serious matters to the attention of people and institutions.

The issue is not whether these expressions are statutory legal terms.

The issue is whether the underlying events can be verified and whether any organisation or decision-maker has failed to meet a legal, contractual, regulatory or professional obligation.

I ask investigators to look beyond administrative labels and examine the cumulative consequences of the decisions made.

19. THE DUTY TO PRESERVE AND EXAMINE THE EVIDENCE

My concerns should be examined against original records wherever possible.

The relevant material may include:

NDIS plans and reassessments.

Support agreements and service bookings.

Support worker rosters.

Progress notes and case notes.

Incident reports.

Complaints and complaint responses.

Emails, text messages and other communications.

Financial statements and payment records.

Centrelink correspondence.

NSW Trustee and Guardian correspondence.

Accommodation agreements and rent records.

Transport records.

Relevant recordings.

Police event numbers and reports.

Court records.

Ombudsman correspondence.

Legal Aid correspondence.

NDIS Commission correspondence.

Medical and allied-health recommendations relevant to support and accommodation.

Records of requests for assistance and the responses received.

The preservation of original records is essential.

Where records are disputed, the original should be retained and any later explanation or correction should be separately identified.

The investigation should distinguish:

DOCUMENTED FACT — supported by an original record or independently verifiable source.

OFFICIAL RECORD — a document issued or maintained by a government agency, court or other official body.

PERSONAL TESTIMONY — my account of what I experienced or observed.

ALLEGATION — a claim that requires independent examination.

INFERENCE — a conclusion drawn from available facts but not yet independently established.

UNVERIFIED MATTER — information for which the necessary original evidence has not yet been obtained.

This approach protects the integrity of the evidence and makes it harder for any party to misrepresent the difference between an allegation and a proven fact.

22. WHAT I AM ASKING FOR NOW

I am asking for an urgent, coordinated and independent response.

I do not need another organisation simply to acknowledge that I have written to it.

I need someone to examine what is happening, identify which organisation has responsibility for each issue, explain what action can lawfully be taken and help resolve the immediate practical problems.

I request:

1. An urgent assessment of my accommodation and immediate safety needs.

2. Assistance to ensure I can access sufficient money for food and essential necessities.

3. An independent review of the financial arrangements affecting my daily life.

4. A practical accommodation pathway that takes account of my disability-related needs and the need for safety and independence.

5. A review of my disability support arrangements and whether they are being delivered appropriately.

6. Independent examination of my complaints concerning Able Point, management and support personnel.

7. Examination of relevant incident reports, progress notes, communications and financial records.

8. Written explanations for decisions that have restricted my access to assistance or complaint processes.

9. Information about accessible review and appeal mechanisms.

10. Protection against any unlawful retaliation if I have made a qualifying protected disclosure.

11. Preservation of all relevant original records.

12. A single accountable contact or coordinated response so that I am not repeatedly required to retell the same circumstances to different organisations.

I request that any person or organisation responding to this appeal distinguish between matters they can resolve directly, matters they must refer to another authority and matters requiring independent investigation.

I also request that urgent practical assistance not be delayed while historical allegations are being examined.

23. THE FINAL STATEMENT: I AM NOT ASKING FOR PERMISSION TO EXIST

I am a human being.

I am a disabled person, but I am not less entitled to dignity, independence, safety, food, accommodation, financial security, legal protection or the right to be heard.

I am not asking for special treatment.

I am asking for lawful treatment, humane treatment and the support necessary to live an ordinary life.

It is sickening to contemplate that a disabled person could be placed in a position where they cannot readily escape an unsuitable arrangement, cannot freely access the money needed to meet basic necessities and must continually plead with institutions to recognise the consequences.

It is particularly distressing when the people and organisations entrusted with providing care, support or oversight are themselves the subject of unresolved complaints.

I believe that the cumulative effect of what I have experienced has been devastating.

I allege that I have been left financially constrained, practically dependent, socially isolated and without an adequate pathway towards safety and independence.

I am asking for those allegations to be examined against the evidence.

I am not sick because I refuse to remain silent about circumstances that I believe are harming me.

I am not wrong for asking questions.

I am not unreasonable for asking where the money has gone, what support I am entitled to receive, why my concerns have not been adequately addressed and what can be done to help me leave circumstances I believe are unsuitable.

And I am not asking anyone to accept my conclusions without examination.

I am asking them to examine the evidence before reaching their own.

If a person is paid to provide care, support or protection, the fundamental question must be whether that responsibility is being fulfilled.

If a public institution receives a credible safeguarding concern, the question must be whether it has been properly assessed.

If a person has been deprived of meaningful access to assistance, the question must be what can be done to restore that access.

If an individual is left without adequate money for essential necessities, the question must be how that situation can be remedied.

If a complaint system becomes inaccessible, the question must be how a person can obtain a fair and meaningful review.

These are not unreasonable questions.

They are questions of humanity, accountability and the rule of law.

I will continue to preserve my records, distinguish evidence from allegation and seek independent examination.

I will continue to ask for help.

I will continue to assert my right to live with dignity.

I AM NOT SUICIDAL.

I AM PROTESTING BECAUSE I WANT TO LIVE.

I WANT TO LIVE FREE FROM NEGLECT, EXPLOITATION, INTIMIDATION AND UNNECESSARY DEPENDENCY.

I WANT TO LIVE SOMEWHERE SAFE.

I WANT TO HAVE ENOUGH MONEY TO LIVE.

I WANT ACCESS TO THE SUPPORT I NEED.

I WANT TO BE HEARD WITHOUT BEING DISMISSED.

I WANT MY EVIDENCE EXAMINED WITHOUT PREJUDGMENT.

I WANT ACCOUNTABILITY WHERE WRONGDOING IS ESTABLISHED.

I WANT THE OPPORTUNITY TO REBUILD MY LIFE.

That is my appeal.

That is my testimony.

That is my request for help.

And that is why the evidence must be preserved.

PRESERVATION FIRST. EXAMINATION SECOND. CONCLUSION LAST.

TIME IS THE WITNESS. TRUTH IS THE JUDGE.

END OF STATEMENT.
