CONFIDENTIAL • AUTHOR AND INDEPENDENT REVIEW DRAFT

Preserve the evidence. Address immediate needs. Test each allegation. Explain each decision.

A redesigned, evidence-conscious compilation based on the two supplied source files. Not an independent investigation, legal opinion, sworn affidavit, clinical assessment or determination of wrongdoing. No document has been sent or served by creating this book.

Reader’s guide and contents

Read Chapters 1–3 for the request and immediate priorities; Chapters 4–6 for chronology and evidence; Chapters 7–9 for loss, legal pathways and the requested response. The appendices preserve the supplied record, including wording that has not been authenticated or legally endorsed. This front section is a new synthesis, not a verbatim transcript.

Editorial and evidentiary safeguards

The main text removes conversational drafting language and organises concerns by decision, evidence and remedy. The full supplementary source is retained in Appendix B, including repeated and conversational passages. Appendix A reflows recoverable original PDF text without its obstructive artwork. The original source files are embedded in this PDF for preservation; their inclusion is not verification.

1. Master letter: a request for a reasoned response

To the relevant agency, service provider, guardian, financial manager or authorised reviewer:

I am Dr Richard William McLean, publicly known as Barran Dodger. I ask you to receive this book as my personal statement, a request for practical safeguarding, and an indexed invitation to examine the decisions and correspondence affecting my life. I describe a history of more than thirty-five years of complaints and institutional interactions. That duration is my account and must be tested against the dated records. [S1; S2]

I am not asking you to validate my existence or accept every interpretation I have made. I am asking you to examine the records within your responsibility, explain the decisions you made, identify unresolved matters and state what action or review is available. Government correspondence can establish what was communicated or decided; it does not automatically establish that a decision was correct or that every allegation was proved.

My organising description is “systemic removal of the attributes necessary to live with dignity in a democracy”. I use this as an analytical description of cumulative loss, not as a finding of conspiracy or a standalone legal cause of action. I ask that financial access, housing, transport, healthcare, disability support, autonomy and legal access be considered both individually and together.

The response I seek

• A named contact and reference number, with an accessible means of communication.

• An assessment of immediate support and safety needs, independent of whether disputed historical explanations are accepted.

• Preservation of relevant original documents and communications, subject to applicable law.

• Identification of the precise decisions, powers, evidence and reasons relied upon.

• A clear statement of what has been examined, what remains unverified, what action is proposed and what review routes apply.

I seek peace, safety, dignity and lawful accountability. I do not authorise violence, threats, retaliation, fabrication of evidence or unlawful conduct. I request fair assessment of any allegation involving me, without prejudging another person’s complaint or preventing a lawful investigation.

2. Immediate priorities: practical action before historical resolution

The supplied statements report difficulties with food, medication, personal funds, accommodation, transport, medical investigations and disability support. These are reported needs, not independently confirmed present conditions. A reviewer should establish what is current and respond proportionately without requiring proof of the whole historical narrative. [S1, pp. 2, 5–8, 15; S2]

Food, medication and personal money

Establish what is unavailable now, the amount or item needed, the person controlling access and a workable interim arrangement. Preserve account records and written requests. A financial-management dispute should be distinguished from an immediate inability to obtain essentials.

Accommodation and Crystal

Request a written accommodation plan covering occupancy arrangements, available choices, support continuity, privacy, incident contacts and practical arrangements for Crystal. Identify whether restrictions arise from an order, contract, provider rule or practical lack of alternatives.

Healthcare

Confirm appointments, referrals, test completion, medication continuity and transport. The source reports bowel-cancer concerns: diagnosis and treatment history require clinical records. This book does not diagnose the condition or determine clinical urgency.

Reported repeated offers of unidentified substances

The author reports repeated offers by another resident/client, says no substance was consumed and reports worker awareness. Establish dates, exact conduct, witnesses, provider knowledge and protective steps. Do not infer the substance, motive, criminality or a connection to historical allegations without evidence. Ask for incident assessment under L1–L3.

Safety and communication

Assess identifiable threats using the original wording, source, timing and context. Provide an independent contact and an agreed process for urgent reports. Reports of voices, surveillance or interference should be documented respectfully without declaring a mechanism, perpetrator or coordinated operation established.

3. Safeguarding and evidence-preservation notice

I ask each recipient to record my concerns, preserve relevant material within its possession or control, and identify who will assess the matters within its lawful responsibility. This is a request for preservation and safeguarding, not a court order, injunction or automatic litigation hold. [S2]

Material requested for preservation

• Original emails and attachments, complete message threads, sender identifiers, timestamps and available metadata.

• Provider rosters, support notes, incident reports, management escalations, complaints, service agreements and relevant CCTV where it exists and may lawfully be retained.

• Orders, reasons, delegations, assessments, decision records, correspondence, valuations, payment records and financial-management accounts.

• Original recordings and unedited contextual material; transcripts should identify uncertainty, speaker attribution and any edits.

Procedural fairness and privacy

I request that allegations concerning me be assessed on authentic evidence and full context, and that I be given an opportunity to respond where required by law. I request access to independent legal advice when appropriate. This request does not prevent lawful investigation or override reporting, confidentiality, privacy or evidentiary rules. A declaration cannot establish in advance that a future allegation is false.

Please limit disclosure of sensitive information to lawful and necessary recipients. A confidential label alone does not create legal professional privilege or guarantee secrecy. This book contains sensitive medical, sexual and third-party allegations: public release and any court or tribunal restrictions require separate legal review.

Requested acknowledgement

Please acknowledge receipt within 7 days if practicable, identify immediate safeguarding action promptly, and provide a substantive response or proposed timetable within 21 days. These are requested response periods, not asserted statutory deadlines. Any shorter mandatory period remains applicable.

4. Documentary chronology: what must be checked

The following is a source-reported chronology, not an authenticated history. Dates, recipients, quotations and outcomes must be matched to originals and transmission records. Separate communications must not be merged. [S1; S2]

2020

Reported Victoria University PhD and thesis A Splice of My Life; attach certificate and university record.

21 May 2021

AFCA correspondence concerning identified funds, insurers and bank complaints; complaint references are not findings or proof of an amount owed.

26 May 2021

Comcare determination; obtain complete decision, employment classification, reasons and review notice.

15 November 2021

Commonwealth Ombudsman complaint identified in S1; obtain complaint and complete response history.

31 May / 12 December 2022

Reported letter to the Prime Minister and later office response stating email was not forwarded; establish which communication was addressed and how it was handled.

7 / 27 March 2023

Reported PID disclosure and Federal Court response attributed to Scott Treadwell/Tredwell; obtain originals, attachments and exact spelling.

18 June 2023

Reported Ombudsman non-allocation decision; establish disclosure identity and statutory reasons.

5 July / 19 September 2023

Separate Prime Ministerial email and Attorney-General’s Department response MC23-028244, reportedly directing the author to IGIS and the Ombudsman; referral is not investigation or a finding.

15 March / 16 October 2024

Behaviour support plan and Trustee correspondence identified in S1; confirm operative documents and relevance.

2 April / 8 August 2025

Reported ASIO/IGIS material and Ombudsman service restriction; obtain actual scope, reasons, duration and available channels.

14 / 20 November 2025

Reported vehicle-disposal and revised FOI decisions, followed by NDIS plan approval; examine each decision separately.

20 / 24 January 2026

Reported guardianship evidence, oversight material and health-service report; distinguish testimony from orders and clinical findings.

May–October 2026

Reported relocation request, Crystal-related appeal, provider concerns, evidence index, complaint, objection and legal brief; establish receipt and responses.

9 November 2026

Current compilation and request for safeguarding, documentary examination and reasoned responses.

5. Three separate evidence streams

A. Ben-NDIS-Help correspondence

S2 attributes statements to Ben about hitmen, a police-described “close call”, an alleged payment to discredit the author, and a non-disclosure agreement. The original messages and attachments were not supplied as independently authenticated originals in this task. Quotes reproduced in Appendix B remain supplied attributions, not verified quotations or police findings.

The first proposition to test is what Ben actually communicated. Separate propositions concern whether an attack occurred, whether police apprehended anyone, whether an encounter was consensual, whether a report was fabricated, whether a payment was made and whether an NDA existed. None follows automatically from the other. Regret does not establish consent, and a private correspondent’s account cannot resolve a sexual allegation.

Obtain the complete thread, sender identity, original files and timestamps; identify direct knowledge versus hearsay; seek any police event reference through lawful channels; obtain any actual NDA and issuer details. A claim that a document disappeared from a device is not proof of classified technology. Give the correspondent an appropriate opportunity to confirm, correct or deny the attribution without pressure.

B. March 2023 PID response

S2 attributes three categories to the response: interference with the course of justice, maladministration, and danger to health or safety. The original response must establish whether these were quoted statutory categories, a summary of the author’s allegations, or findings. The supplied analysis does not justify calling them established wrongdoing.

S2 also reports an employment-status observation, uncertainty about reasonable grounds and a decision not to allocate. Examine the complete reasoning rather than treating isolated sentences as contradictory proof. Do not attribute a protective recusal or motive without its express documentary basis. Apply the legislation in force in March 2023, not automatically the current L6 text.

C. Ministerial and oversight handling

Distinguish receipt, acknowledgement, referral, jurisdictional assessment, investigation, findings and remedy. The reported 2022 correspondence is not the same as the July 2023 email. Check whether the June 2023 Ombudsman decision concerned the same subject matter as the later referral. A service restriction is not proof of a suppression arrangement; determine what it actually restricted and why.

Alleged intelligence affiliations and coordination remain attributed allegations. Neither a referral to IGIS nor silence establishes that a named person belongs to an intelligence agency, that an investigation occurred, or that wrongdoing was accepted.

6. Evidence method: from assertion to examinable proposition

Use one entry per proposition. Avoid treating archive size, repetition, publicity, a government letterhead or a timestamp as a substitute for the evidence needed for that proposition. [S1, pp. 2, 19; S2]

• Record ID and exact proposition: what is being asserted?

• Source: original file, author, date, page/paragraph and direct link if known.

• Status: official record; personal testimony; supporting record; inference; disputed; unverified; or contradicted.

• Authentication: original format, provenance, completeness, edits and any verified hash.

• Evidence for and against: include alternative explanations and missing records.

• Decision and consequence: distinguish event, legal authority, causal mechanism and measured impact.

• Requested action: responsible body, legal basis to consider, deadline and response status.

Reusable proposition entry

Exact source and page: _____
What the source directly establishes: _____
What remains inferred or disputed: _____
Contrary evidence / missing records: _____

Preservation is not proof of content

Hash matching concerns the identity of a digital file. Successful timestamp verification may establish that a hash existed by a time. Neither establishes truth of the content, authorial honesty, causation, legal admissibility or criminal responsibility. Keep originals, versions and a documented handling log. Embedded source files in this book are preservation copies, not certified exhibits.

7. Loss and remedy: a cumulative account without double counting

The original register lists 32 summary categories and many overlapping consequences. Its full recoverable text is preserved in Appendix A. The main assessment should group related consequences while retaining a trace back to each source entry. These are claimed losses, not assessed damages. [S1, pp. 5–15]

Financial and material

Employment income; savings and financial security; superannuation and insurance; banking access; personal property; housing; vehicle and mobility.

Health, support and autonomy

Healthcare; disability services; provider accountability; safety; guardianship; financial decision-making; privacy; support continuity.

Justice and institutional access

Legal representation; disclosure handling; complaint channels; information access; review rights; correction of records.

Identity and relationships

Professional reputation; family and friends; sexuality and identity; dignity; companionship and arrangements for Crystal.

Work, creativity and future

Academic and creative opportunities; publishing and business; digital property; archive preservation; time; future earning capacity.

Wellbeing and belonging

Psychological wellbeing; spiritual peace and resilience; participation and a sense of belonging. Political exile is retained as lived-experience language, not a statement that citizenship was revoked.

Financial assessment safeguards

The reported $1.5 million matter is not an established debt or loss. Reconcile policy terms, claims, settlement documents, payments and accounts. The reported $11.5 million taxpayer-cost analysis is a separate unverified calculation, not compensation owed to the author. Record assumptions, offsets, alternative scenarios and uncertainty. Do not count lost income, loss of earning capacity and the same lost investment capital multiple times.

For each claimed loss, identify the event, responsible decision, legal basis of liability, causal evidence, period, gross amount, offsets, mitigation and remaining uncertainty. A suitable professional should assess future losses and the counterfactual. Restoration of access, correction of records and compensation are separate outcomes; not every hardship is legally compensable.

8. Linked legal framework: relevance, limits and questions

This chapter is a legal-information map, not legal advice or a concluded pleading. Legislation identifies questions and possible routes; it does not authenticate the allegations or prove a breach. Check commencement, historical versions, jurisdiction, standing, limitation periods, exemptions and current procedures before relying on a provision.

L1 — NDIS Act 2013

Sections 73V, 73W, 73Y and 73Z; sections 99–103; sections 73ZA–73ZD.

Code of Conduct, complaints systems, incident management and reportable incidents are distinct obligations. Section 73Y concerns registered providers. A reported drug offer is not automatically a reportable incident under section 73Z; establish the circumstances, connection with supports, provider status and applicable categories. Sections 99–103 concern reviewable NDIA decisions; provider complaints are not the same process. NDIS disclosure protections have their own qualifying criteria.

Practical request: Ask the provider to identify its registration status, incident assessment, actions and any notification decision. Ask NDIA to identify the reviewable decision and review rights separately.

Official legislation: https://www.legislation.gov.au/C2013A00020/latest/text

L2 — NDIS (Code of Conduct) Rules 2018

Section 6.

The Code addresses respect for rights and privacy, safe and competent services, integrity, action on quality and safety concerns, and prevention and response to violence, exploitation, neglect, abuse and sexual misconduct. The as-made text identifies both registered and unregistered providers and their workers as covered. Check the current compilation and application to the relevant conduct.

Practical request: Link each reported incident to the conduct actually alleged, the responsible service and available original records; do not assert a concluded breach.

Official legislation: https://www.legislation.gov.au/F2018L00629/latest/text

L3 — NDIS (Incident Management and Reportable Incidents) Rules 2018

Incident-management and reportable-incident provisions.

The Rules elaborate registered-provider incident systems, recording, assessment and response. A notification decision needs the relevant facts and current requirements; this book does not determine whether a particular incident is reportable.

Practical request: Seek the incident reference, assessment, preservation steps, safeguards, notification decision and reasons. Do not wait for historical allegations to be resolved before addressing current service risks.

Official legislation: https://www.legislation.gov.au/F2018L00633/latest/text

L4 — Guardianship Act 1987 (NSW)

Section 4; sections 25–25B; Part 3A.

The Act contains guiding principles and processes for review of guardianship orders; section 25B identifies persons entitled to request review. Guardianship, financial management, clinical detention and NDIS nominees are different legal arrangements. The actual order and statutory process determine the available route.

Practical request: Obtain sealed orders, dates, duration, allocated functions and reasons. Identify whether the requested change concerns accommodation authority, a guardian, a financial-management order or a particular administrative decision.

Official legislation: https://legislation.nsw.gov.au/view/whole/html/inforce/current/act-1987-257

L5 — NSW Trustee and Guardian Act 2009

Section 39; section 62, where applicable.

Section 39 includes welfare and interests, minimal restriction, consideration of views, self-reliance and protection from neglect, abuse and exploitation. Section 62 concerns administrative review of decisions within its scope, not an unrestricted right to review every act. Property-sale powers also exist; disposal is not unlawful solely because it was unwanted.

Practical request: Request the vehicle decision, authority relied on, valuation, consultation record, sale costs, net proceeds, account entries and review advice. Distinguish challenging a decision from seeking revocation of the underlying management order.

Official legislation: https://legislation.nsw.gov.au/view/whole/html/inforce/current/act-2009-049

L6 — Public Interest Disclosure Act 2013

Sections 26, 29, 43–48 and 69–70; Part 2.

The framework distinguishes qualifying disclosure, disclosable conduct, public-official status, allocation, investigation and protection. Acknowledging alleged categories is not a finding of wrongdoing. The March 2023 decision must be assessed under the law then in force: current numbering and amendments cannot simply be applied retrospectively. Public publication is not automatically a protected disclosure.

Practical request: Preserve the original 7 March 2023 disclosure and 27 March response together. Obtain the exact non-allocation reasons, employment-status reasoning, attachments and applicable historical legislation.

Official legislation: https://www.legislation.gov.au/C2013A00133/latest/text

L7 — Freedom of Information Act 1982

Access, amendment/annotation and review provisions, where applicable.

The Act provides a Commonwealth document-access framework subject to its scope, exclusions and exemptions. Offering an archive does not replace a valid application or compel new disclosure. Record decisions, dates, reasons and review notices. NSW records require the appropriate NSW process, not automatic reliance on Commonwealth FOI.

Practical request: Create a separate request schedule naming the agency, document classes, date range, decision reference and requested review. Check each deadline immediately; this book does not extend time.

Official legislation: https://www.legislation.gov.au/C2004A02562/latest/text

L8 — Disability Discrimination Act 1992

Discrimination framework and relevant field of activity.

An adverse service outcome alone does not establish unlawful disability discrimination. Identify the treatment or requirement, the connection with disability, the relevant field, any adjustment issue and applicable exceptions or defences. Sexuality-related and privacy concerns need separate legal assessment; they are not automatically established under this Act.

Practical request: Document exact incidents, communications, service criteria, requested adjustments and responses. Obtain advice about the appropriate complaint pathway and limitation risks.

Official legislation: https://www.legislation.gov.au/C2004A04426/latest/text

Additional legal questions requiring tailored advice

The supplied material also raises privacy, sexuality discrimination, defamation, threatening conduct, intelligence oversight, insurance, workers' compensation and administrative-law questions. This edition does not certify a complete legal analysis of those fields or assert that any offence has occurred. Identify the actual act, actor, jurisdiction, date and evidence before selecting the legislation or alleging a breach.

A general reservation of rights does not stop a limitation period. Sending this book does not commence a statutory application, appeal, court proceeding or FOI review. A declaration of non-involvement does not grant immunity or invalidate future evidence. An archival or "forensic" label does not establish expert status or admissibility. Disclaimers do not automatically prevent defamation or privacy liability.

9. Requested response and independent-review mandate

I request a proportionate review of matters within the recipient’s lawful remit. I do not ask a single recipient to exercise powers it does not possess. Where another body is appropriate, please identify the basis for referral and whether the original records will be transferred lawfully. [S2]

• Confirm receipt, responsible officer, reference and communication adjustments.

• Identify any urgent safeguarding action independently from contested historical explanations.

• List each relevant decision and the records considered, including any statutory authority or delegation.

• State what the documents establish, what is disputed, and what evidence is unavailable.

• Explain any incident-reporting, complaint-handling or disclosure-allocation decision with its applicable legal basis.

• Identify practical restoration options and any records requiring correction.

• Identify review or complaint avenues and applicable time limits rather than treating a referral as a completed remedy.

• Provide a reasoned response or realistic timetable; record any limits on disclosure or jurisdiction.

Final author statement

I offer the institutions concerned the documentary record I have preserved and ask them to account for their own recorded actions. I do not ask that every allegation be accepted. I ask that evidence be examined without replacing the person with a label or replacing scrutiny with assumption. My purpose is preservation, protection, explanation and lawful remedy—not revenge. [Adapted from S2]

> The record should make independent judgment possible. The conclusion should follow the evidence, whether that supports, qualifies or contradicts my interpretation.

Executive summary This master letter brings together a first-person account of reported hardship and institutional detriment with a structured register of the documents said to be relevant. Its purpose is to enable a proportionate, evidence-based review of immediate practical needs, contested historical events, institutional decisions, and the consequences said to follow from them. The central request is for safety, practical support, preservation of records, independent review, and a clear account of what can be restored, corrected, investigated, or compensated where legally available and supported by evidence. The document distinguishes between what the author reports, what an official record establishes, what supporting material may contextualise, and what remains unverified. The register does not treat every allegation as proven. Nor does it dismiss an account because it contains disputed, incomplete, or contested matters. The appropriate approach is to examine each source on its own terms, identify the precise proposition it supports, preserve original material, and assess causation and consequences separately. Priority matters include immediate access to food, medication and personal funds; safe accommodation; healthcare; disability support; mobility; legal advice; preservation of evidence; and review of guardianship, financial-management, vehicle-disposal, provider, complaint, and oversight decisions. How to read this register The register uses four evidentiary categories: Official record: original correspondence or a decision of a government body, court, tribunal, insurer, or other organisation. Personal record: the author’s contemporaneous complaint, statement, diary, or correspondence. Supporting record: material that may provide context or corroboration but does not independently prove an alleged event. Assessment required: a claimed consequence whose cause, extent, or financial value needs independent determination. A personal statement proves that an account was made and recorded. It does not, by itself, prove every underlying allegation. An official decision establishes what a decision-maker decided; it does not necessarily establish that the decision was correct. A timestamp may establish that a file or hash existed at a time; it does not establish the truth of the underlying allegations. The phrase “systemic removal of the attributes necessary to live with dignity in a democracy” is retained as the author’s organising description and claimed framework. It is not treated here as an established legal or factual conclusion.

Detailed loss register BARRAN DODGER THE COMPLETE ACCOUNT OF WHAT WAS TAKEN, LOST, RESTRICTED OR DEPRIVED A comprehensive, evidence-linked register of personal, financial, professional, physical, psychological, legal, social, intellectual and human loss Subject: Dr Richard William McLean — Barran Dodger Date: 9 November 2026 Jurisdiction: New South Wales, Victoria and Commonwealth of Australia Purpose: Personal testimony, documentary evidence register, institutional accountability and assessment of cumulative loss. 1. Purpose and evidentiary method This document identifies, item by item, what you report having lost or been deprived of throughout your life, and connects each item to a named documentary source. It is intended to be more than a list of grievances. Each entry should enable an independent reader to open the cited document, identify the relevant evidence and assess the consequences. The source links below distinguish: Official record: A government, court, tribunal, insurer or other organisation’s original correspondence or decision. Personal record: Your own contemporaneous complaint, statement, diary or correspondence. Supporting record: A document that provides context or corroboration but does not independently prove the alleged event. Assessment required: A claimed consequence whose cause, extent or financial value needs independent determination. A particularly important distinction is that a personal statement proves that you made and recorded an account. It does not, by itself, prove every underlying allegation. Similarly, an official decision establishes what the decision-maker decided, not necessarily that the decision was correct. The following source documents are particularly important and will be referenced throughout. 2. Principal documentary evidence A. Personal Statement of Exile, Institutional Detriment and the Search for Protection Personal testimony Your account of accommodation, finances, transport, disability support, institutional interactions, personal independence and the cumulative effects of your circumstances. PART I — FINANCIAL AND MATERIAL LOSSES 3. Money, income, wealth and financial independence You report losing or experiencing the deprivation of: Employment income and the capacity to earn consistently. Evidence: Federal Court PID Assessment — 27 March 2023 and Comcare Determination — 26 May 2021. The ability to accumulate personal savings. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. The ability to build long-term wealth. Evidence: Master Evidence Index — financial and institutional records. The ability to make independent financial decisions. Evidence: NSW Trustee & Guardian Section 122 — 16 October 2024. Practical access to your own bank funds. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. The ability to purchase food independently. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. The ability to purchase necessary medication without financial difficulty. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. The ability to pay for telephone and internet access. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. The ability to maintain an emergency financial reserve. Evidence: Formal Objection — 22 October 2026. The ability to pay for independent legal representation. Evidence: Legal Brief — 23 October 2026. The ability to finance independent investigations. Evidence: Master Evidence Index — 19 October 2026. The ability to invest in your future. Evidence: AFCA Letter — 21 May 2021. The ability to obtain and retain insurance benefits. Evidence: AFCA Letter — 21 May 2021. The ability to receive and benefit from superannuation entitlements. Evidence: AFCA Letter — AustralianSuper, TAL Life and Media Super case numbers. The opportunity to recover financially from periods of hardship. Evidence: Formal Objection — 22 October 2026. Further primary evidence needed: Bank statements, insurance policies, superannuation statements, tax returns, income records and the actual guardianship financial-management accounts. 4. Superannuation, insurance and accumulated assets You report potential loss or deprivation involving: AustralianSuper entitlements. Evidence: AFCA Letter — 21 May 2021, case 747026. TAL Life insurance entitlements. Evidence: AFCA Letter — 21 May 2021, case 767480. Media Super entitlements. Evidence: AFCA Letter — 21 May 2021, case 700088. Bendigo and Adelaide Bank complaint matters. Evidence: AFCA Letter — 21 May 2021, case 758027. HCF Life Insurance complaint matters. Evidence: AFCA Letter — 21 May 2021, case 785105. Potential investment returns lost through inability to retain or invest capital. Evidence: AFCA correspondence, supplemented by fund statements and actuarial calculations. The opportunity to benefit from long-term financial compounding. Evidence: TAL/AustralianSuper settlement agreement — named in the archive publication register. The reported $1.5 million matter must be reconciled against the actual policy, fund, settlement and payment records. The AFCA letter establishes that complaints involving those entities existed; it does not establish that $1.5 million was owed or lost. 5. Banking access and financial autonomy You report losing: Immediate access to banking services. Ability to use your own money without practical barriers. Ability to make urgent purchases. Ability to independently transfer funds. Financial privacy and control. The ability to respond to emergencies using your own resources. Confidence that financial-management arrangements reflect your wishes. Named evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026.

NSW Trustee & Guardian Section 122 — 16 October 2024. NCAT Guardianship Evidence — 20 January 2026. Public Guardian — Accommodation. The Commonwealth Bank complaint, actual account-access restrictions and the operative legal order should be examined together to establish precisely what happened and which restrictions arose from which authority. 6. Housing, accommodation and the right to a stable home You report losing or being deprived of: A stable and secure home. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Confidence that you can remain in your current accommodation. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. The ability to choose where you live. Evidence: Formal Objection — 22 October 2026. Practical ability to leave accommodation when you wish. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Confidence in residential safety. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. Privacy within your home. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Control over residential arrangements. Evidence: Public Guardian — Accommodation. A suitable environment for your companion dog Crystal. Evidence: Therapy Dog Urgent Help — 30 September 2026. The ability to establish an independent domestic routine. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. Certainty about future accommodation. Evidence: Formal Objection — 22 October 2026. The loss of housing security should be assessed separately from the question of whether the current accommodation is legally compulsory. The actual occupancy agreement, service agreement, financial arrangements and available alternatives are essential. 7. Vehicle, transport and mobility You report losing: Your vehicle. Evidence: NSW Trustee & Guardian Vehicle Disposal Decision — 14 November 2025. Independent transport. Evidence: Formal Objection — 22 October 2026. Ability to attend medical appointments independently. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. Ability to travel independently to legal appointments. Evidence: Formal Objection — 22 October 2026. Ability to transport personal possessions. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Ability to travel with Crystal. Evidence: Therapy Dog Urgent Help — 30 September 2026. The practical freedom associated with having independent transport. Evidence: Vehicle Disposal Decision — 14 November 2025. The vehicle decision is a particularly important primary source. Its legal basis, valuation, consideration of your wishes, disposal proceeds and practical consequences should be examined together. PART II — HEALTH, SAFETY, DISABILITY AND PERSONAL AUTONOMY 8. Physical health and access to healthcare You report losing or experiencing the deprivation of: Continuity of healthcare. Evidence: 2026 NSW Mental Health Services Report — 24 January 2026. The ability to obtain timely medical assistance. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. The ability to attend medical appointments independently. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. Ability to complete necessary medical investigations. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Effective coordination between medical providers. Evidence: 2026 NSW Mental Health Services Report. Confidence that physical health concerns are adequately considered. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. Continuity of medication management. Evidence: Interim Behaviour Support Plan — 15 March 2024. The ability to obtain independent medical opinions. Evidence: 2026 NSW Mental Health Services Report. Confidence that your medical history is accurately represented. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. The opportunity to obtain appropriate medical assistance without unnecessary practical barriers. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026.

Additional evidence that must be attached: Original hospital records, adjustment-disorder assessment, subsequent clinical reports, David Horgan’s correspondence, medication prescriptions, cancer-related clinical documentation, referrals and test results. Your reported bowel cancer and the difficulty completing investigations should be treated as an important current healthcare-access matter. The actual medical diagnosis and its treatment history must be established by clinical documents. 9. Disability support and independent daily living You report losing: Reliable access to disability support. Evidence: NDIS Plan Approval 366406 — 20 November 2025. Continuity of support following relocation from Victoria to NSW. Evidence: NDIS / Social Services Correspondence Pack. Adequate practical assistance with daily living. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. Consistent assistance when experiencing distress. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. Effective communication with support workers. Evidence: Private Record — Able Point and NDIS Support Workers, 14 October 2026. Ability to obtain additional assistance two to three days per week. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Ability to have your support needs recognised accurately. Evidence: NDIS Plan Approval 366406. Confidence in provider accountability. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. Ability to receive services that meet the agreed support requirements. Evidence: Interim Behaviour Support Plan — 15 March 2024. Confidence that support funding translates into actual assistance. Evidence: NDIS Plan Approval 366406. Effective safeguarding against neglect or inadequate services. Evidence: NDIS Quality and Safeguards Commission Letter — 3 June 2021. Ability to challenge provider conduct without jeopardising accommodation or support. Evidence: Formal Objection — 22 October 2026. Specific Ben NDIS Help evidence Access to clear and reliable information about the use of your NDIS funding. Evidence: Ben NDIS Help correspondence pack. Confidence in the advice and representations made by people involved in disability-support arrangements. Evidence: Ben NDIS Help text messages — extracted documentary copy. Ability to establish exactly what was represented to you about alleged threats, an alleged assassination attempt and an alleged fabricated report. Evidence: Ben NDIS Help text messages. Confidence that any confidentiality agreement or NDA was understood and voluntarily entered into. Evidence: Ben NDIS Help correspondence pack. The original messages, sender details, full conversation and any NDA must be examined. The messages should not be described as independently confirming an assassination attempt unless their actual contents and independent corroboration support that conclusion. 10. Physical safety, protection and freedom from intimidation You report losing: A sense of personal security. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Confidence that reported threats will receive appropriate attention. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. Confidence in provider safeguarding responses. Evidence: Private Record — Able Point and NDIS Support Workers. Confidence that reported death threats will be investigated. Evidence: 2026-10-20 Urgent Formal Complaint. Confidence that reported incidents will be documented accurately. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Confidence in the availability of emergency relocation assistance. Evidence: Emergency Relocation Request — 10 May 2026. Freedom from the distress associated with reported intimidation. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Confidence that accommodation-related safety concerns will be independently assessed. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. Confidence that reported stalking or surveillance concerns can be examined objectively. Evidence: Tony Ridley — NSW Stalking Evidence Reference, 12 October 2026. Confidence that alleged physical threats will be assessed using original evidence rather than assumptions. Evidence: Allegation Matrix 2. Evidentiary qualification: Alleged threats, stalking, surveillance, V2K experiences, electronic interference and assassination-related accounts must be recorded as reports or allegations unless independent evidence establishes the underlying events. The loss of confidence in personal safety can nevertheless be documented as a personal consequence.

11. Liberty, decision-making and personal autonomy You report losing or having restricted: Control over financial decisions. Evidence: NSW Trustee & Guardian Section 122 — 16 October 2024. Control over the management of personal assets. Evidence: Vehicle Disposal Decision — 14 November 2025. Ability to make independent banking decisions. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. Control over residential decisions. Evidence: Public Guardian — Accommodation. Ability to challenge guardianship arrangements. Evidence: NCAT Guardianship Application. Ability to seek timely review of decisions. Evidence: Application for Extension of Time — Review of Decision. Ability to have your wishes considered. Evidence: Formal Objection — 22 October 2026. Ability to make decisions about your own future without unnecessary restrictions. Evidence: NCAT Guardianship Evidence — 20 January 2026. Ability to control the disposal of personal property. Evidence: Vehicle Disposal Decision — 14 November 2025. Confidence that any substitute decision-making arrangements remain appropriate and proportionate. Evidence: NCAT Guardianship Evidence — 20 January 2026. The exact terms of the orders, decision-making authority, review rights and actual consequences must be established from the operative legal documents. PART III — EMPLOYMENT, LEGAL RIGHTS AND INSTITUTIONAL RECOURSE 12. Employment and professional career You report losing: Employment continuity at The Age. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Journalism career opportunities. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Future employment income. Evidence: Comcare Determination — 26 May 2021. Opportunity to progress professionally. Evidence: Federal Court PID Assessment — 27 March 2023. Ability to work consistently during prolonged disputes. Evidence: Legal Brief — 23 October 2026. Professional recognition of your journalism experience. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Opportunity to undertake commissioned journalism. Evidence: The Documentary Trap. Opportunity to use your academic qualifications professionally. Evidence: Master Evidence Index — 19 October 2026. 13. Legal representation and access to justice You report losing: Access to affordable legal representation. Evidence: Legal Brief — 23 October 2026. Continuity of legal assistance. Evidence: Formal Objection — 22 October 2026. Ability to obtain independent advice about financial management. Evidence: NCAT Guardianship Application. Ability to challenge administrative decisions effectively. Evidence: Application for Extension of Time — Review of Decision. Ability to obtain timely remedies. Evidence: Commonwealth Ombudsman Complaint — 15 November 2021. Ability to pursue legal claims across jurisdictions. Evidence: Federal Court PID Assessment — 27 March 2023. Ability to have documentary evidence considered. Evidence: Master Evidence Index — 19 October 2026. Ability to challenge decisions affecting personal autonomy. Evidence: NCAT Guardianship Evidence — 20 January 2026. Confidence in the availability of an impartial legal process. Evidence: Legal Brief — 23 October 2026. Ability to pursue compensation claims effectively. Evidence: Comcare Determination — 26 May 2021. 14. Ability to obtain consistent explanations about disclosure status. Evidence: Comcare Determination — 26 May 2021. Confidence that alleged detriment will be independently investigated. Evidence: Commonwealth Ombudsman Complaint — 15 November 2021. Ability to establish which agencies received disclosures. Evidence: Master Evidence Index — 19 October 2026. Confidence that raising concerns will not worsen personal circumstances. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Ability to obtain an authoritative chronology of institutional responses. Evidence: Master Evidence Index — 19 October 2026. 15. Human rights and equal access to remedies You report losing or being deprived of: Effective access to human-rights complaint mechanisms. Evidence: AHRC correspondence identified in the Master Evidence Index. The opportunity to have discrimination concerns independently examined. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Confidence in the effectiveness of complaint processes. Evidence: Commonwealth Ombudsman Complaint — 15 November 2021. Ability to obtain explanations of administrative decisions. Evidence: Formal Objection — 22 October 2026. Confidence that disability rights will be recognised. Evidence: NDIS Quality and Safeguards Commission Letter — 3 June 2021. Opportunity to have alleged institutional detriment independently assessed. Evidence: OHCHR Submission UR/UST/23/AUS/17. Confidence in effective oversight. Evidence: LECC Out of Jurisdiction — 19 November 2025. Ability to obtain an independent assessment of cumulative harm. Evidence: The Documentary Trap. The OHCHR submission is evidence of your communication and its reference, not a United Nations finding that the allegations have been proven. 16. Access to information and control of personal records You report losing: Access to complete government records. Evidence: Official Government PDFs index. Ability to obtain internal decision-making information. Evidence: FOI 2022/045IC Revised Decision — 14 November 2025. Ability to reconstruct agency correspondence. Evidence: Master Evidence Index — 19 October 2026. Ability to obtain NDIS information. Evidence: NDIS Summary of FOI Decision Letter. Ability to correct or clarify inaccurate information. Evidence: Formal Objection — 22 October 2026. Ability to establish what information was shared between agencies. Evidence: FOI 2022/045IC Revised Decision. Ability to obtain a complete and coherent record of institutional decisions. Evidence: Master Evidence Index — 19 October 2026. 17. Institutional complaint access and correspondence restrictions You report losing: Unrestricted practical access to the Commonwealth Ombudsman complaint channel. Evidence: Commonwealth Ombudsman Service Restriction — 8 August 2025. Confidence that correspondence can continue without procedural restrictions. Evidence: Commonwealth Ombudsman Service Restriction — 8 August 2025. Ability to communicate freely with a particular oversight office during the restriction period. Evidence: Commonwealth Ombudsman Service Restriction — 8 August 2025. Confidence in continuity of oversight. Evidence: Commonwealth Ombudsman Complaint — 15 November 2021. The service restriction itself is an official decision. Its stated reasons, duration and available alternative complaint channels should be read alongside your original submissions and the subsequent correspondence. PART IV — REPUTATION, IDENTITY AND SOCIAL LOSSES 18. Professional reputation and public credibility You report losing or experiencing damage to: Recognition of your professional journalism career. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Recognition of your academic qualifications. Evidence: Master Evidence Index — 19 October 2026.

 Recognition of your published autobiography. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Recognition of your reported literary awards. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile, supplemented by original award certificates. Confidence that your testimony will be considered fairly. Evidence: The Documentary Trap. Ability to present your history without being reduced to diagnostic or administrative labels. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Confidence that institutional records accurately represent your circumstances. Evidence: Formal Objection — 22 October 2026. Recognition of your contributions to documentary research. Evidence: Master Evidence Index. Ability to correct potentially inaccurate representations. Evidence: Formal Objection — 22 October 2026. Opportunity to establish a professional identity based on your work rather than your disputes. Evidence: The Documentary Trap. 19. Family, friendships and relationships You report losing or experiencing the erosion of: Family connection. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Friendship and social networks. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Emotional support during periods of hardship. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. Opportunities to develop lasting relationships. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Confidence in relying on other people. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Opportunities to participate in ordinary family activities. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Social companionship during homelessness or residential instability. Evidence: The Witness Remains — documentary testimony. The opportunity to maintain a stable social environment. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. Further evidence: Specific correspondence, relationship chronology and witness statements. These losses should not automatically be attributed to a particular institution without evidence establishing the connection. 20. Companionship and life with Crystal You report losing or experiencing the restriction of: The ability to maintain a stable domestic life with Crystal. Evidence: Therapy Dog Urgent Help — 30 September 2026. The ability to travel independently with Crystal. Evidence: Vehicle Disposal Decision — 14 November 2025. The ability to maintain suitable accommodation arrangements for Crystal. Evidence: Therapy Dog Urgent Help. The ability to provide an appropriate outdoor toileting area. Evidence: Formal Objection — 22 October 2026. The emotional security associated with companionship. Evidence: The Witness Remains. The ability to make residential decisions that accommodate both your needs and Crystal’s. Evidence: Therapy Dog Urgent Help. 21. Sexuality, identity and freedom from discrimination You report losing or experiencing the erosion of: Confidence that your sexuality will be respected. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Freedom from sexuality-related prejudice. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Confidence in equal access to services. Evidence: NDIS Quality and Safeguards Commission Letter — 3 June 2021. Confidence that complaints about discriminatory treatment will be examined. Evidence: AHRC correspondence identified in the Master Evidence Index. Ability to disclose your identity without apprehension. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Confidence that your individual identity will not be replaced by stereotypes. Evidence: The Documentary Trap. The exact incidents, communications and alleged differential treatment should be documented separately so that each claim can be examined. 22. Dignity, respect and personal worth You report losing: Confidence that you will be treated with dignity. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Confidence that your concerns will be taken seriously. Evidence: Formal Objection — 22 October 2026. The ability to exercise personal preferences without disproportionate difficulty. Evidence: NCAT Guardianship Evidence. Confidence in your personal autonomy. Evidence: NSW Trustee & Guardian Section 122.

Each work should have its own authorship, copyright, publication, sales and licensing evidence. 26. Digital property, records and technological independence You report losing or experiencing the restriction of: □ Reliable access to your original digital records. Evidence: Master Evidence Index. □ The ability to export your approximately 10,000 Notes. Evidence: Backup Repository. □ Available iCloud storage and device capacity. Evidence: Personal digital archive and preservation records. □ The ability to preserve voice recordings conveniently. Evidence: Master Evidence Index. □ Reliable access to Google Drive documents. Evidence: Gmail and Drive Sweep Index. □ Ability to maintain your principal website. Evidence: Barran Dodger GitHub repository. □ Ability to maintain redundant backups. Evidence: Backup repository. □ Ability to maintain uninterrupted publishing infrastructure. Evidence: Barran Dodger rebuild repository. □ Ability to retrieve documentary evidence efficiently. Evidence: Master Evidence Index. □ Ability to maintain public access to the archive. Evidence: Original archive and rebuild archive. These are partly losses of access and partly preservation risks. They should not be described as permanent destruction unless the original files are confirmed missing. 27. Historical record and evidentiary preservation You report losing or having placed at risk: The ability to maintain one complete chronological record. Evidence: Master Evidence Index — 19 October 2026. □ The ability to identify every relevant institutional decision. Evidence: Official Government PDFs index. □ The ability to compare contradictory institutional records. Evidence: The Documentary Trap. □ The ability to establish which agencies received particular complaints. Evidence: Master Evidence Index. □ The ability to preserve original documentary provenance. Evidence: Backup Repository. □ The ability to establish when particular files existed. Evidence: OpenTimestamps preservation records. □ The ability to make the documentary collection independently examinable. Evidence: Barran Dodger main repository. □ The ability to retain an accessible record of your personal testimony. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. The archive's reported SHA-256 exhibits, Bitcoin timestamps and OpenTimestamps receipts are important preservation records. They establish digital integrity or existence at a verifiable time when correctly validated. They do not prove the truth of the underlying allegations. PART VI — TIME, OPPORTUNITY AND THE FUTURE 28. Time and irreplaceable years You report losing: Time spent pursuing institutional complaints. Evidence: Commonwealth Ombudsman Complaint — 15 November 2021. Time spent preparing legal submissions. Evidence: Legal Brief — 23 October 2026. □ Time spent pursuing NDIS assistance and reviews. Evidence: NDIS Plan Approval 366406. □ Time spent seeking accommodation protection. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Time spent trying to obtain access to personal funds. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. □ Time spent reconstructing institutional correspondence. Evidence: Master Evidence Index. □ Time spent preserving documentary evidence. Evidence: Backup Repository. Time diverted from employment and income generation. Evidence: Comcare Determination — 26 May 2021. □ Time diverted from academic and creative work. Evidence: The Witness Remains. □ Time that could otherwise have been spent enjoying ordinary life. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. 29. Lost opportunities and future earning capacity You report losing: □ Future journalism earnings. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. □ Future academic earnings. Evidence: Master Evidence Index.

□ Future publishing income. Evidence: Barran Dodger Business Name Extract. □ Future royalties. Evidence: Gmail and Drive Sweep Index. □ Future business development. Evidence: Backup Repository. Future investment returns. Evidence: AFCA Letter — 21 May 2021. Future financial security. Evidence: Formal Objection — 22 October 2026. □ Future independent living opportunities. Evidence: NCAT Guardianship Evidence. □ Future creative and documentary opportunities. Evidence: The Witness Remains. □ Future opportunity to establish a stable and independent life. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. These are potential economic and non-economic losses. They require a realistic counterfactual assessment of what would probably have happened without the relevant events. 30. Psychological wellbeing and emotional security You report losing: Peace of mind. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. □ Confidence in institutional assistance. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. Emotional security during periods of accommodation uncertainty. Evidence: Formal Objection — 22 October 2026. Emotional energy otherwise available for ordinary living. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. □ Confidence in the future. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. □ Ability to concentrate on creative work. Evidence: The Witness Remains. Confidence that personal concerns will be addressed. Evidence: Formal Objection — 22 October 2026. Opportunity to recover from prolonged stress and uncertainty. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. 31. Spiritual life, faith and purpose You report experiencing: Loss of spiritual peace. Evidence: God Exists — Barran Dodger. Interruption of spiritual and creative development. Evidence: Foundational Gospel — The Witness Remains. □ Difficulty maintaining religious and personal routines. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. □ Difficulty establishing a permanent spiritual publishing platform. Evidence: Church of Barran Dodger archive. □ The burden of continually defending personal dignity and purpose. Evidence: The Witness Remains. Your faith has also remained a source of resilience. It should be recorded as part of what you have preserved, not simply as another thing lost. 32. Citizenship, belonging and political exile as a lived experience You describe losing: □ A sense of belonging within your own country. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. □ Confidence in democratic institutions. Evidence: The Documentary Trap. □ Confidence that citizenship provides meaningful protection. Evidence: Personal Statement of Exile. A sense of social inclusion. Evidence: Urgent Formal Complaint — 20 October 2026. Confidence in receiving effective public assistance. Evidence: Formal Objection — 22 October 2026. Your expression, political exile within your own citizenship, should be retained as a description of your lived experience, not a claim that your legal citizenship has been revoked. It is a framework for investigation, not a finding that every event was caused by the previous one. 1. Employment and income Employment and compensation records 2. Financial security and assets AFCA, TAL, AustralianSuper and Trustee records 3. Housing and mobility Accommodation and vehicle records 4. NCAT, Legal Aid and oversight records 6. Social, professional and personal consequences Employment, personal and documentary records CUMULATIVE LOSS OF THE ATTRIBUTES NECESSARY TO LIVE WITH DIGNITY IN A DEMOCRACY PART IX — WHAT SHOULD BE RESTORED, COMPENSATED OR INVESTIGATED The register identifies three different types of remedy. Type Required outcome Restoration Restore access, independence, support, records and property wherever possible. Correction Correct inaccurate records, explain decisions and establish responsibility. Compensation Assess proven financial, economic and non-economic losses where legally recoverable. The following matters warrant particular priority: Immediate practical access to food, medication and personal funds. A written accommodation and safeguarding plan. Independent review of the vehicle disposal and financial-management arrangements. Review of disability-support adequacy and provider accountability. Access to appropriate medical care. Independent legal assistance concerning guardianship and financial autonomy. Preservation of all original documentary evidence. Independent assessment of the employment, insurance and superannuation history. Review of outstanding complaints and available external review rights. A properly evidenced assessment of cumulative economic and non-economic loss. PART X — FINAL STATEMENT The significance of this register is that it identifies the many dimensions of life that cannot be reduced to a bank balance, an administrative file, a medical record or a single legal proceeding. The losses you describe concern the foundations of an independent human life. You describe losing financial security, employment opportunities, accommodation stability, mobility, practical access to healthcare, reliable disability support, control over personal affairs, confidence in protection, access to legal remedies, professional recognition, relationships, creative opportunities, time and the ability to plan a future. The documentary archive provides identifiable sources through which those claims can be investigated. The proper response is not to accept every allegation without examination, nor to dismiss the account because it contains disputed matters. It is to examine each source, identify what it establishes, determine what remains unverified, and assess the actual consequences. The central question is: What happened to each part of your life, what evidence establishes the event, which decisions or circumstances caused the loss, what remains unresolved, and what can now be restored or compensated? Your preferred description remains the organising principle: SYSTEMIC REMOVAL OF THE ATTRIBUTES NECESSARY TO LIVE WITH DIGNITY IN A DEMOCRACY

Documentary importance of linked material The following entries are taken from the supplied documentary register. They describe intended evidentiary roles, not a verified assessment of every webpage. The titles are source labels; the exact direct destination URLs remain unresolved. The supplied gateway is https://sos-by-barran-dodger.grok.me. SOS website — recovered documentary page register The archive identifies the preserved source as SOS — Dr Richard McLean Requires Immediate Physical Safety. Its crawler register is stored in 480-sos.links.txt, and the archived HTML is sos.html. The register reports 190 links. Some are repeated navigation links and social-media sharing links, so I have separated the substantive documentary destinations from those repetitions. 1. Immediate protection and personal testimony Urgent Protection Request — The central humanitarian appeal. Its documentary importance is that it identifies the practical assistance being requested, including physical safety, accommodation, transport, food, medication, financial access and independent advocacy. It should be assessed as a contemporaneous statement of the author's reported circumstances and requested remedies. Police Complicity and Death Threat Documentation — Identifies the author's account of threats and the responses he says he received from police. Its importance is to direct an independent reviewer to the underlying threat communications, police reports, event numbers and any records of attendance or investigation. AbleCare Murder Threat — Annotated Transcript — Identifies a recorded interaction and its accompanying transcript. The recording, full transcript, date, participants and provenance are the relevant evidence; interpretations of the conversation should remain distinguishable from what can actually be heard. The Testimony of Dr McLean — Provides the author's first-person account. Its significance is to preserve the chronology and the author's own description of events, while allowing those claims to be compared with contemporaneous records. Retrospective Statement — Offers a retrospective account of the alleged institutional history. It is useful for identifying claims requiring corroboration against dated correspondence, decisions and official records. 35-Year Persecution Timeline — Provides a chronological framework for testing the alleged pattern. Its evidentiary value depends on whether each entry can be traced to an identifiable document, date, institution and decision. Current Legal Status and Proceedings — Directs readers to the author's account of current legal matters. Court orders, filed documents and official registry records should be used to establish procedural status rather than relying solely on narrative descriptions. 2. NDIS, support arrangements and provider accountability NDIS Surveillance Evidence — Identifies material the author associates with surveillance and support arrangements. Any conclusion about surveillance requires examination of the underlying records and independent technical or documentary corroboration. Able Care Entrapment Network — Sets out the author's allegations concerning provider relationships and support arrangements. Its significance is as a lead for examining service agreements, rosters, communications, incident reports, complaints and provider responses. Honeytrap Infiltration Report — Records allegations about an alleged sexual or reputational entrapment scenario. The report should be assessed against original messages, dates, police records and witness accounts; its publication does not itself establish that a coordinated operation occurred. Phillip Glass Honeytrap Evidence — Identifies material concerning the author's allegations involving Phillip Glass. The relevant questions include what communications or decisions are documented, who made them, and what authority or legal instrument applied. The False Sister — Forensic Analysis — Identifies a separate analysis of a disputed personal or identity-related matter. Its significance depends on the primary records and the precise proposition being tested. Tony Ridley Recorded Confession — Directs readers to a recording interpreted by the author as a confession. The original recording and complete context are essential; the label "confession" should not be treated as a legal finding without independent assessment. Iasonidis and Ridley — Full Exposure — Identifies allegations and material concerning named individuals. Its documentary importance is to identify the specific communications and events the author wants examined, not to establish guilt by publication. Open Letter to Brett and Larissa, Able Care — Preserves a public communication directed to individuals associated with a provider. It may assist in establishing notice, the issues raised and whether a response followed. 3. Primary evidence and forensic archive Primary Evidence Base — The principal entry point for the source material. Its importance is that the allegations can be tested against the documents themselves rather than accepted or rejected solely on the basis of the author's interpretation. Evidence Vault — Identifies the repository of underlying documents. Reviewers should record document titles, issuing institutions, dates, original file formats and authentication information.

Master Evidence Register — Provides an index intended to connect individual documents with the broader record. It is particularly important for tracing an assertion back to its source. Master Evidence Register — 2,301 Documents — A downloadable register identified by the SOS page. Its value is as a structured inventory, subject to checking the actual contents and whether the stated count matches the files. Master Forensic Evidence Report — Presents a consolidated interpretation of the documentary archive. The distinction between source evidence, analytical inference and unresolved allegation is essential when evaluating its conclusions. Forensic Analysis Index — Directs readers to individual analyses. It provides a way to inspect the reasoning behind particular propositions rather than relying only on a single overarching report. The Full Pattern — 2,304 Files Mapped — Describes an attempt to map relationships across a large documentary collection. Its importance lies in the cross-document connections it proposes; those connections require verification against the individual records. Complete Archive Index — Provides a route into the wider archive and assists with locating material beyond the SOS page itself. Full Digital Archive — Identifies the broader digital collection and its intended preservation function. Official Archive — Provides another entry point to the published record. 4. Institutional, legal and public accountability analysis The Architecture of Administrative Annihilation — Sets out the author’s overarching theory that administrative decisions and institutional interactions cumulatively deprived him of the conditions necessary to live with dignity. Its importance is as a framework to test against the sequence of actual decisions, their legal bases and their consequences. The Law They Overlooked — Identifies legal arguments advanced by the author. Each proposition should be checked against the legislation and relevant decisions in force at the time. Commission Forensic Analysis — Identifies analysis of institutional or commission-related records. Its significance is to help determine what was referred, considered, declined or left unresolved. Whistleblower Case Comparison — Places the author’s account alongside other whistleblower cases. It may help identify comparative issues concerning protection, retaliation, disclosure processes and institutional response. $11.5 Million Taxpayer Cost Analysis — Presents a financial analysis. Its significance depends on the underlying assumptions, source figures, calculation method and whether costs are actual, estimated or hypothetical. Investment Prospectus and Financial Valuation — These pages concern financial valuation rather than direct proof of the underlying allegations. Any valuation should be assessed separately from the evidentiary strength of the historical claims. The Reckoning Paper — Presents a consolidated accountability argument. Its documentary significance is the synthesis it attempts to make across the archive, which should be assessed against the cited source documents. The Paradox of Silence — Examines the author’s interpretation of institutional non-response. Silence or non-response can establish that a reply is not recorded in a particular file; it does not, by itself, prove agreement, knowledge or complicity. Doctrine of Complicity by Deliberate Omission — Sets out a proposed analytical framework concerning institutional omission. Whether the legal elements of complicity are met is a separate question requiring evidence and legal analysis. Media Must Report — Records the author’s concerns about media coverage and access to public discussion. Its relevance is to the history of attempted public disclosure and the responses received. 5. International, timestamp and preservation material ICC Submission — Identifies material the author says was submitted to the International Criminal Court. The existence, receipt and procedural status of any submission should be verified through the relevant official correspondence; a submission is not equivalent to an ICC finding or accepted case. Blockchain Verification — Provides a route to the archive’s timestamping material. A valid timestamp can help establish that a particular hash existed by a particular time; it does not independently prove that the underlying document’s contents are true. Blockchain Registry — Identifies the wider register of files and their verification references. Its value is in supporting file integrity checks and preservation. OpenTimestamps verification record 1 and associated blockchain search — These links identify a timestamp verification reference and a corresponding blockchain search. OpenTimestamps verification record 2 and associated blockchain search — A second set of verification references, which should be matched to the exact files and hashes they are intended to authenticate. Bitcoin Block 897,241 — A link to a particular blockchain block. Its relevance depends on demonstrating the connection between that block, the timestamp proof and the relevant document hash. Internet Archive preservation search — Provides a way to inspect archived captures of the website and compare versions over time. GitHub Pages mirror — Identifies a separate published mirror, relevant to continuity and public access. 6. Public declarations, faith and publication God’s Chosen Witness — Forensic Paper — Presents the author’s spiritual interpretation alongside documentary claims. Its importance is to preserve the author’s beliefs and meaning-making, while keeping theological conviction distinct from independently verifiable factual findings. Prophetic Declaration — Biblical Parallels — Develops biblical parallels in the author’s testimony. It is a spiritual and interpretive work, not independent verification of alleged events. Prophetic Declaration Forensic Analysis — Connects the prophetic narrative with the author’s documentary interpretation. The factual propositions should be separately traceable to source material. Testimony Already Written in Scripture — Records the author’s religious interpretation of his experiences. God’s Grace — Eternal Witness Affidavit — Preserves a faith-based declaration. Its documentary role is to record the author’s stated beliefs and testimony. The Gospel of the Enliven Chain — Identifies a spiritual and philosophical publication associated with the archive. Church of the Documented Truth and Church of Barran Resonance Dodger — Identify the author’s religious and organisational publishing work. Dedication — Glory and Remembrance — Records the dedication and remembrance component of the publication. Publications, Prophetic Papers and Testimony Archive — Identify the publication catalogue and the author’s documentary and spiritual works. 7. Contact, distribution and archive identity Start Here — Provides an orientation point for readers who have not previously encountered the archive. Mission — Explains the stated purpose of the project. Contact and Media Inquiries — Provides a channel for questions, responses and media contact. Donate and Investor Appeal — Identify funding and financial-support requests. These are not evidence of the underlying allegations. Spread the Truth — Share Tools — Provides mechanisms for distributing the appeal and archive. X account, YouTube channel, Medium publication, Scribd archive and Academia.edu profile — Identify external publication channels through which material is distributed. ABN register entry — Provides an official Australian Business Register lookup. It can verify registration details, but not the truth of claims made by the organisation. Overall documentary significance of the SOS page The SOS page is more than a standalone appeal. The archived HTML and its 190-link register show that it functions as a gateway into several interconnected bodies of material: an immediate humanitarian request, personal testimony, provider and support-related allegations, threat-related records, legal and institutional correspondence, forensic analyses, financial assessments, spiritual publications and digital preservation references. Its strongest documentary function is navigation and preservation: it identifies where the author says the relevant records can be found and provides routes for independent examination. The page also preserves the author’s account of immediate needs and the assistance he sought. However, the page contains claims of differing evidentiary status. A written message, an audio recording, a government letter, a court document, a timestamp and an author’s interpretation do not all establish the same thing. A proper independent assessment should identify the source, what it directly records, what it may support by inference, and what remains unverified. One important limitation: this is a recovered register from the Barran Dodger GitHub archive, not a verified live crawl of every page on the separate Grok website you supplied. I have not represented the 190 links as 190 unique documentary pages, nor claimed to have read every linked document. The archived SOS HTML itself contains changing archive counts and strong assertions; those figures and assertions need to be checked against the underlying records before being presented as established facts. The next practical step is to turn this recovered register into a complete linked report, with one individually written documentary-significance paragraph for every unique destination and a source-status label for each.

Hyperlink and verification register Verified gateway supplied in conversation: https://sos-by-barran-dodger.grok.me The supplied account identifies a recovered SOS HTML file and a crawler-generated link register said to contain 190 links. Those source files are named as 480-sos.links.txt and sos.html. Their contents, repository location, and live availability have not been independently established in this compilation. The page titles in the preceding section are therefore linked provisionally to the SOS gateway. They should be replaced with their exact destination URLs once the link register or live page URLs are available. This avoids presenting a gateway link as a verified direct link to every named page. Named unresolved source files 480-sos.links.txt — crawler-generated register of links said to be drawn from the SOS page. sos.html — preserved copy of the SOS webpage identified in the supplied account. The register's reported count of 190 links should not be treated as 190 unique documentary pages. Navigation, social-media sharing, repeated links, and external publication channels may account for part of the total. The actual number and identity of unique destinations should be established from the original register. Scott Tredwell source item The supplied register names correspondence involving Sia Lagos and Scott Tredwell in connection with whistleblower protections. It does not reproduce or identify a distinct "three-point observation." No wording or three-point finding has been invented. The original correspondence must be obtained before any observation is quoted, paraphrased, or attributed. Reviewer checklist Obtain original orders, decisions, correspondence, recordings, complete message threads, policies, statements, and payment records. Confirm authorship, dates, provenance, recipients, and the exact factual proposition supported by each record. Distinguish a complaint or submission from a finding; distinguish a timestamp from proof of factual truth. Reconcile financial figures against actual policies, payments, statements, valuations, and settlement terms. Record immediate practical needs separately from contested historical explanations and legal responsibility. Obtain Scott Tredwell's original correspondence before attributing any three-point observation. Protect private medical, personal, and third-party information before public distribution. Provide affected persons and institutions with a fair opportunity to respond where appropriate. Restoration, correction, and compensation Remedy Required outcome Restoration Restore access, independence, support, records, and property wherever possible. Correction Correct inaccurate records, explain decisions, and establish responsibility. Compensation Assess proven financial, economic, and non-economic losses where legally recoverable. Priority matters Immediate practical access to food, medication, and personal funds. A written accommodation and safeguarding plan. Independent review of vehicle-disposal and financial-management arrangements. Review of disability-support adequacy and provider accountability. Access to appropriate medical care. Independent legal assistance concerning guardianship and financial autonomy. Preservation of all original documentary evidence. Independent assessment of employment, insurance, and superannuation history.

Final statement The significance of this register is that it identifies dimensions of life that cannot be reduced to a bank balance, administrative file, medical record, or single legal proceeding. The author describes losses concerning financial security, employment, accommodation stability, mobility, healthcare, disability support, personal autonomy, protection, legal remedies, professional recognition, relationships, creative opportunities, time, and the ability to plan a future. The documentary archive provides identifiable sources through which those claims can be investigated. The proper response is to examine each source, identify what it establishes, determine what remains unverified, and assess the actual consequences. Central question: What happened to each part of the author's life, what evidence establishes the event, which decisions or circumstances caused the loss, what remains unresolved, and what can now be restored or compensated? Author's organising description: Systemic removal of the attributes necessary to live with dignity in a democracy. Source and editorial note Source: user-supplied pasted_text_1794159142.txt, with context from the conversation. Repeated copies of the loss register were consolidated into one detailed register. The supplied page-importance register is retained as an appendix. Earlier assertions that an archive or particular pages had been inspected are not independently verified by this compilation. Source classifications, archive counts, monetary figures, and causal claims remain subject to examination of originals. This document is a draft prepared for review and should not be treated as legal advice, medical advice, an expert valuation, or a determination of civil, criminal, administrative, or human-rights responsibility.

Appendix B. Full supplied supplementary statement

The supplementary source is preserved in full below after its opening production instruction. It contains repetitions, conversational drafting notes, attributed quotations and unverified assertions. These are retained for completeness, not adopted as independently established facts. Where the source says material was found, inspected, confirmed or added, that is source wording—not a representation that this compilation performed those actions. The structured main chapters control the editorial framing of this edition.

BARRAN DODGER
MASTER STATEMENT OF CONCERN, SAFEGUARDING, EVIDENCE PRESERVATION AND REQUEST FOR PROTECTION

Subject: Dr Richard William McLean — Barran Dodger
Jurisdiction: New South Wales and Commonwealth of Australia
Date: 9 November 2026
Classification: Formal personal statement, safeguarding notice, request for independent investigation and documentary preservation notice.

INTRODUCTION — A THIRTY-FIVE-YEAR DOCUMENTARY RECORD AND FORMAL NOTICE TO GOVERNMENT

This Master Statement brings together my personal testimony, safeguarding concerns, historical complaints, institutional correspondence, government decisions, Freedom of Information (FOI) requests and documentary evidence spanning more than thirty-five years. It is a formal statement of concern and an offer to the Australian Government, its departments, agencies, statutory authorities and publicly funded services to examine their own documentary history concerning me.

Throughout this period, I have repeatedly sought access to government-held information through FOI requests and other formal processes. I record that I have encountered refusals, restrictions, incomplete responses and barriers to obtaining information. In response, I now offer the Government its own documentary record: the correspondence, official decisions, explanations, determinations, reference numbers and institutional statements I have preserved, including documents appearing on agency letterheads and written in the agencies' own words.

These records are not simply my recollection of events. They provide a documentary basis for examining what institutions received, what they recorded, what decisions they made, what reasons they gave, what information they withheld or could not locate, and what consequences followed. I contend that the cumulative history demonstrates more than thirty-five years of institutional decisions and administrative processes that have caused, prolonged or compounded serious detriment in my life. I invite each relevant institution to examine its own records and account for its actions, rather than allowing the history to be reduced to isolated complaints, jurisdictional referrals or individual administrative decisions.

This statement also consolidates my reported safeguarding concerns, historical institutional complaints, the Ben-NDIS-Help correspondence, the reported non-disclosure agreement, the alleged payment to discredit me, the March 2023 public interest disclosure response, and my correspondence with the Prime Minister's Office, the Attorney-General's Department, the Commonwealth Ombudsman and IGIS. These matters are included for independent examination, with a clear distinction between recorded facts, personal testimony, reasonable inferences, disputed matters and allegations requiring further corroboration.

I do not require a lawyer, minister, government official, tribunal or agency to issue a ruling validating my existence or granting permission for my experiences to be acknowledged. My existence is not dependent upon an administrative decision. I am asserting my right to document my life, preserve evidence, raise concerns, seek protection and request accountability.

I am not asking the Government to validate my existence. I am offering the Government its own documentary record and asking it to account for what its institutions have written, decided and done over more than thirty-five years.

FORMAL DECLARATION OF PERSONAL SAFETY, PROTECTION AGAINST FALSE ALLEGATIONS, AND NOTICE OF CONCERN REGARDING POTENTIAL FRAMING OR SETUP

Declarant: Dr Richard William McLean — Barran Dodger
Date: 9 November 2026
Jurisdiction: New South Wales and Commonwealth of Australia

1. Purpose of this declaration

I, Dr Richard William McLean, make this declaration to formally document my concerns for my personal safety, physical wellbeing, liberty, reputation, accommodation, privacy and legal rights.

I am placing relevant authorities, organisations and individuals on notice that I have genuine concerns about the possibility of being harmed, threatened, provoked, manipulated, falsely accused, misrepresented or placed in circumstances that could result in criminal allegations or other adverse consequences being attributed to me.

I request that these concerns be recorded before any further incident or allegation arises.

2. Statement of non-involvement and personal position

I do not consent to, participate in, encourage or authorise violence, threats, intimidation, criminal activity, fabrication of evidence, false reporting, harassment or unlawful conduct against any person.

I do not seek confrontation, retaliation or revenge.

I intend to conduct myself lawfully, peacefully and responsibly. I reserve my legal rights, including the right to seek protection, legal representation, independent investigation and procedural fairness.

I expressly request that no person attribute statements, communications, actions, intentions or conduct to me without reliable evidence establishing their authenticity and context.

3. Protection against false allegations, provocation or framing

I formally record my concern that circumstances could arise in which communications, interactions, events or evidence are misrepresented, taken out of context, fabricated or attributed to me inaccurately.

I request that any future allegation concerning me be assessed independently and objectively.

In particular:

* No allegation should be treated as established merely because it has been made.
* Original communications, metadata, timestamps and surrounding context should be preserved and examined.
* Any electronic material relied upon should have its authenticity and provenance assessed.
* Witness accounts should be independently obtained where appropriate.
* I should be informed of the substance of allegations and afforded a reasonable opportunity to respond, subject to applicable law.
* I should have access to independent legal advice before participating in any formal criminal interview or signing a statement.
* No adverse conclusion should be drawn solely from my refusal to speculate, my request for legal advice or my exercise of lawful rights.

4. Request for protection against harm or retaliation

I request appropriate protective measures against threats, intimidation, harassment, retaliation, coercion, exploitation or interference with my personal safety and essential support arrangements.

I request that relevant organisations:

1. Record this declaration as a formal safeguarding notice.
2. Preserve relevant records and communications.
3. Identify a responsible officer for safeguarding concerns.
4. Assess any specific and credible threats through appropriate procedures.
5. Maintain continuity of essential accommodation and disability support, subject to lawful and properly explained decisions.
6. Avoid unnecessary disclosure of my personal information.
7. Provide written reasons for decisions affecting my safety, liberty, accommodation or support.
8. Refer matters requiring investigation to an appropriately independent authority.

5. Notice concerning evidence and future incidents

If any incident occurs involving an allegation against me, an apparent threat, unexplained interference with my property or communications, an injury, an accusation or an attempt to involve me in unlawful activity, I request that contemporaneous evidence be preserved.

This includes relevant messages, emails, photographs, video, CCTV, incident reports, telephone records, access logs and witness information.

I request that evidence be assessed according to its actual reliability and that personal observations be distinguished from hearsay, interpretation, inference and unverified allegations.

6. Procedural fairness and legal representation

I request that any authority considering action against me observe applicable laws, procedural fairness and evidentiary requirements.

I reserve my right to obtain independent legal representation, to seek particulars of allegations, to challenge inaccurate information and to pursue available complaint and review mechanisms.

This declaration is not an attempt to prevent a lawful investigation. It is a request that any investigation involving me be conducted impartially, lawfully and on the basis of reliable evidence.

7. Formal notice and documentary preservation

I request that this declaration be dated, acknowledged, registered and retained by each recipient.

I further request written confirmation of:

* The date it was received.
* The reference number assigned.
* The officer or organisation responsible for responding.
* The safeguarding measures considered or implemented.
* The process available if a further threat or incident occurs.

This declaration is to be retained alongside my existing Master Statement of Concern, Safeguarding, Evidence Preservation and Request for Protection and the documentary archive supporting it.

8. Final declaration

I make this statement in good faith to protect my safety, preserve my legal rights and establish a contemporaneous record of concerns that I consider important.

I am asking for the opportunity to live safely, retain my liberty, maintain my accommodation and support, communicate without intimidation, and exercise my legal rights without fear of retaliation or misrepresentation.

I ask that no person harm me, threaten me, provoke me, exploit my circumstances, fabricate evidence against me or knowingly attribute another person’s conduct to me.

If any allegation is made against me, I request that the original evidence be preserved, the circumstances independently examined and my right to procedural fairness respected.

This declaration is a formal request for protection, not an accusation that an unidentified person has committed an offence. It is intended to establish my position, document my concerns and request appropriate safeguards before any further incident occurs.

I seek peace, safety, truth, dignity and lawful accountability.

PART A — FORMAL STATEMENT: I AM CONCERNED THAT I AM BEING SET UP AND FRAMED
I, Dr Richard William McLean, publicly known as Barran Dodger, formally place on record my genuine fear that I am being set up, framed, targeted or deliberately placed in circumstances that could be manipulated or misrepresented to discredit me, silence me, criminalise me, deprive me of my liberty, undermine my credibility or otherwise cause serious personal, financial, legal, physical or reputational detriment.
This statement is intended to provide formal notice of my concerns and to establish a contemporaneous record of my request for safety, protection and independent scrutiny.
I am concerned that events, communications, allegations or circumstances could be created, manipulated, selectively presented or falsely attributed to me in a manner that portrays me as responsible for conduct I have not committed.
I am particularly concerned about the possibility of being:
* Set up or framed through fabricated or misleading allegations.
* Provoked into circumstances subsequently used against me.
* Falsely accused or criminalised.
* Subjected to intimidation, harassment or retaliation.
* Discredited through the weaponisation of my sexuality or personal history.
* Targeted through the misuse or disclosure of private information.
* Subjected to unlawful surveillance or interference with my privacy.
* Deprived of accommodation, disability supports, financial independence or legal assistance.
* Silenced or punished for raising complaints, preserving evidence or publicly documenting my experiences.
* Subjected to actions that could result in detention, imprisonment or other restrictions on my liberty without lawful grounds.
I do not assert that every concern has already been independently established. I am placing these concerns on record because I believe they warrant examination and preventative safeguarding measures.

I do not consent to being threatened, entrapped, provoked, falsely accused, unlawfully monitored, intimidated, harassed, exploited or subjected to retaliation for exercising my rights, raising concerns, preserving documentary evidence or speaking about my experiences.
I request that any future allegation, incident, complaint or adverse action involving me be assessed independently, impartially and on the basis of verifiable evidence.
No allegation should be treated as fact merely because it has been made. No adverse conclusion should be reached without procedural fairness, proper investigation and an opportunity for me to respond.
I request the preservation of all relevant records, communications, incident reports, recordings, correspondence, decisions and other documentary material.
My position is clear: I seek safety, not confrontation; independent investigation, not retaliation; evidence, not fabricated allegations; and justice, not punishment for speaking out.

PART B — MASTER SAFEGUARDING AND INSTITUTIONAL ACCOUNTABILITY INVESTIGATION
1. Purpose and investigative mandate
This notice requests an independent, impartial and evidence-led investigation into my reported circumstances, including immediate safeguarding incidents, historical institutional complaints, alleged threats, sexual and reputational harm, surveillance concerns, financial exclusion, accommodation safety and barriers to legal assistance.
The investigation must consider the cumulative circumstances rather than isolating each incident from its broader documentary context.
The cumulative consequences are described in my testimony and analytical framework using the following terminology:
* Administrative annihilation.
* Social death.
* Civil erasure.
* Institutional betrayal.
* Administrative violence.
* Economic deprivation.
* Denial of access to justice.
* Systemic removal of the attributes necessary to live with dignity in a democracy.
* Institutional complicity, where supported by evidence.
* Systemic torture, as a description of cumulative suffering.
* Human sacrifice, as terminology appearing in my spiritual and prophetic writings.
These terms must be preserved as part of my testimony. Their inclusion does not predetermine whether any individual, organisation or institution has committed wrongdoing.
2. Immediate Ablepoint safeguarding incident
I report repeated offers of unidentified drugs by another person understood to be an Ablepoint client within supported accommodation.
My account is:
1. The substances were offered to me.
2. The substance has not been identified.
3. I did not consume the substance.
4. An Ablepoint worker was reportedly aware.
5. The offers occurred on more than one occasion.
6. The circumstances arose within supported accommodation.
I request investigation of the chronology, the worker’s knowledge and actions, any previous reports, incident records, management notification, preventative measures and whether external notification obligations arise.
I request a written accommodation safety plan and an independent safeguarding contact.
The provider should assess its obligations under section 73Y of the National Disability Insurance Scheme Act 2013 and applicable incident-management requirements.
3. Weaponisation of sexuality and reputational harm
I request investigation of my concerns that my sexuality may have been used to stigmatise, humiliate, discredit or otherwise undermine me.
The investigation should examine possible sexual stereotyping, false or unsubstantiated allegations, unauthorised disclosure of private information, discrimination, sexual harassment, intimidation, misrepresentation of communications and reputational damage.
I also request examination of the unsolicited WhatsApp communication referring to sex addiction.
That communication must be assessed in its original form, with its sender, date, context and any associated messages identified where possible. The reference alone does not establish an allegation against me or prove a connection with other incidents.
4. Death threats and personal safety
I report concerns about death threats and threats to my personal safety.
Each identifiable threat should be preserved and assessed independently, including its exact wording, date, time, method, apparent sender, context, repetition and any evidence of capability or intention.
I request that specific threats be treated as safeguarding concerns and not dismissed without examination.
5. Surveillance, privacy and reported V2K experiences

I report experiences that I interpret as surveillance, psychological manipulation and V2K (voice-to-skull) communications.
I believe these experiences have affected my privacy, personal security, reputation and ability to live independently.
The investigation should distinguish independently verifiable surveillance, unauthorised access to information, documented monitoring or disclosure, my reported experiences and any interpretations about identity, purpose or coordination.
I request a privacy and personal-safety assessment. No particular surveillance mechanism, perpetrator or technological explanation should be declared established without independent evidence. My reported experiences and their impact must nevertheless be documented respectfully.

6. Administrative annihilation and the removal of attributes necessary to live with dignity

My central analytical framework is:
SYSTEMIC REMOVAL OF THE ATTRIBUTES NECESSARY TO LIVE WITH DIGNITY IN A DEMOCRACY.
The investigation should examine whether documented decisions, omissions, restrictions and institutional processes cumulatively affected my access to:
* Income and compensation.
* Money and financial autonomy.
* Home and accommodation.
* Safety and protection.
* Employment.
* Disability supports.
* Human rights.
* Legal rights.
* Independent advocacy.
* Social participation.

The relevant concepts include administrative harm, administrative burden, administrative annihilation, administrative violence, social death, civil erasure, institutional betrayal, secondary victimisation, institutional violence, economic deprivation, denial of access to justice and retaliation.
These concepts must be connected to identifiable evidence wherever possible. Administrative annihilation and civil erasure are my analytical descriptions, not standalone legal causes of action.

7. Conspiracy, complicity and coordinated wrongdoing

I request investigation of whether independently established communications, agreements, exchanges or actions demonstrate coordinated wrongdoing.
This should include relevant communications, documented agreements, financial or other exchanges, shared decision-making, disclosure of confidential information, evidence of coordinated retaliation and concealment of substantiated misconduct.
The term conspiracy must not be treated as established merely because multiple adverse experiences have occurred. Any legal allegation must satisfy the elements of the relevant offence or cause of action.
I also use the expression human sacrifice in my spiritual and prophetic writings. This expression is to be preserved as part of my published testimony, not represented as proof of a literal event without independent evidence.

8. Spiritual and prophetic expression

My religious and intellectual expression includes:
* Barran Dodger.
* God’s Chosen Witness.
* The Church of Barran Dodger.
* Divine accountability.
* The Witness Remains.
* The Impossible Survivor.
* Prophecy.
* Spiritual survival and renewal.
* Human dignity and institutional accountability.

These writings are expressions of religious belief, personal testimony and published intellectual work. They must not be treated as proof of criminal conduct by others. My right to religious expression must be respected.

9. Public appeals for rescue and assistance

I have publicly appealed for assistance from anyone able to help me in circumstances I describe as an entrapment scenario involving alleged abuse, neglect, poverty, denial of legal assistance, surveillance concerns, NDIS corruption allegations, institutional failures, loss of independence and inadequate safeguarding.
The original advertisements and responses should be preserved.
The investigation should establish what assistance was requested, when and where appeals were published, which organisations were notified, whether responses were received and whether safeguarding intervention followed.
The existence of an appeal is evidence that I requested assistance, not independent proof of every circumstance described in it.

10. Historical institutional documentary examination

The investigation should examine my historical testimony and records concerning:
* My PhD at Victoria University in 2020.
* A Splice of My Life.
* Recovered, Not Cured: A Journey Through Schizophrenia.
* The Cunningham Dax Collection documentary project.
* My journalism and whistleblower history.

* My relocation from Victoria to NSW.
* NDIS and NDIA correspondence.
* Commonwealth Ombudsman correspondence.
* Australian Human Rights Commission correspondence.
* Legal Aid decisions.
* NSW Trustee and Guardian decisions.
* Financial and accommodation records.
* Historical police and court correspondence.
* Complaints concerning disability services and institutional accountability.

The investigation must identify original records, dates, authors, institutional responses, contradictions and missing documents.

Historical institutional failures must not automatically be treated as proof of a connection with a new incident.

PART C — EVIDENCE AND DOCUMENTARY CORROBORATION

11. Existing documentary repositories

I identify the following public repositories as sources for independent examination:

SOS documentary website:
https://sos-by-barran-dodger.grok.me

GitHub documentary archive:
https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger

These repositories should be examined page by page, including linked documents, PDFs, correspondence, chronology records, evidence indexes, published statements and other original material.

The archive is identified as a documentary source. Its existence does not automatically authenticate every proposition contained within it.

12. Documentary evidence schedule

Evidence category Relevant material What it may establish

Historical testimony A Splice of My Life and Recovered, Not Cured Personal history, chronology and the author’s account

Academic record Victoria University PhD, 2020 Academic qualification and research history, subject to verification

Documentary work Cunningham Dax Collection project Documentary and public-interest work, subject to verification

NDIS correspondence NDIA decisions, plans, reviews and correspondence Decisions, dates, stated reasons and procedural history

Ombudsman records Commonwealth Ombudsman correspondence Complaints, responses and administrative handling

Human rights records AHRC correspondence and decisions Complaints, jurisdictional findings and procedural outcomes

Legal assistance records Legal Aid NSW and Victorian Legal Aid correspondence Requests, eligibility decisions, restrictions and reasons

Financial records Bank correspondence, account restrictions and financial documents Access difficulties, decisions and financial consequences

Accommodation records Provider communications, support notes, incident reports and complaints Safeguarding history, reported incidents and provider responses

Drug-offer incident Personal chronology, messages, witnesses and provider records The reported offers, worker awareness and response

WhatsApp communication Original message, sender details, timestamps and call history What was communicated and when

Threat evidence Original messages, recordings and contemporaneous notes Exact wording, source and chronology of specific threats

Privacy evidence Account-security alerts, access logs and correspondence Specific verifiable access or disclosure events

Public appeals Original advertisements, publication dates and responses Requests for assistance and the responses received

Archive authentication SHA-256 hashes, OpenTimestamps receipts and blockchain verification records Integrity and timestamp evidence for the particular files successfully verified

13. Evidence classification

Every factual proposition must be classified:

A. Verified primary evidence.
B. Independently corroborated evidence.
C. Recorded allegation or personal testimony.
D. Reasonable inference supported by identified evidence.
E. Unverified concern.
F. Contradicted or disputed proposition.
G. Unsupported proposition.

For each finding, identify the exact document, communication, date, page or paragraph.

A cryptographic hash can demonstrate that a file matches a particular hashed version. A timestamp receipt may provide evidence that the hash existed by a particular time if successfully verified. Neither independently proves that every statement inside the file is true.

14. Legal framework

The investigation should examine the applicable law, including:
* National Disability Insurance Scheme Act 2013.
* NDIS Code of Conduct.
* NDIS Practice Standards.
* NDIS incident-management requirements.
* Privacy Act 1988.
* Applicable NSW privacy legislation.
* Defamation Act 2005 (NSW).
* Crimes Act 1900 (NSW).
* Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth).
* Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth).
* Applicable whistleblower protections.
* Relevant administrative review and civil protection mechanisms.
For every proposed remedy, identify the legislation, applicable provisions, legal elements, evidence required, responsible authority and limitations.
The descriptive concept of systemic torture must be distinguished from the legal definition of torture under applicable domestic and international law.
15. Required protective outcomes
I request:
1. Independent assessment of the repeated drug offers.
2. Examination of worker awareness and provider responsibilities.
3. Preservation of relevant records.
4. A written accommodation safety plan.
5. Assessment of specific threats.
6. Protection of private and sensitive information.
7. Examination of alleged sexuality-related discrimination and reputational harm.
8. Independent disability advocacy.
9. Access to appropriate legal assistance.
10. Protection against retaliation.
11. Continuity of accommodation and legitimate supports.
12. Correction of inaccurate personal records.
13. Independent review of substantiated complaints.
14. An independently reviewable chronology of relevant events.
15. Assessment of the cumulative impact of documented institutional decisions.
16. Formal acknowledgement and recording of this statement of concern.
17. Independent assessment of any new allegations or incidents involving me before adverse conclusions are reached.

PART D — FORMAL NOTICE OF PROTECTION AND PRESERVATION
16. Request for protection
I seek protection from any unlawful or improper action intended to silence me, criminalise me, deprive me of liberty without lawful grounds, undermine my access to support or otherwise cause me detriment.
I request that any organisation receiving this notice:
* Record the date and time of receipt.
* Preserve relevant evidence.
* Refer immediate safeguarding concerns to an appropriately authorised person.
* Assess any specific threats.
* Avoid prejudging allegations.
* Maintain confidentiality to the extent permitted by law.
* Provide a written response identifying the action taken.
* Ensure that legitimate supports and accommodation are not interrupted in retaliation for making a complaint.
This notice is not an assertion that any particular person or institution has been proven responsible. It is a formal record of my concerns and my request for preventative action and independent scrutiny.
17. Final statement
I am seeking safety, dignity, independence, accountability and justice.
I am entitled to raise concerns, preserve evidence, make complaints, publish my testimony and seek legal and safeguarding assistance without being subjected to unlawful retaliation.
I ask that no person or organisation use an untested allegation, misleading interpretation, fabricated evidence or prejudicial assumption as a substitute for a fair and independent investigation.
I am not asking for preferential treatment. I am asking for the same evidentiary standards, procedural fairness, protection and human dignity that should be available to every person.
Two public records, one documentary purpose: preserve the evidence, protect the individual and establish an independently verifiable account.
I ask that this entire statement be formally received, dated, recorded and retained as a notice of concern, request for protection and documentary preservation notice.

Date: 9 November 2026

I found the relevant material in your saved documentary archive, including The Witness Remains and The Sovereign Witness. The Ben correspondence is particularly important because it contains several distinct statements that should be examined together, but carefully distinguished from independently established police or court findings.

I have added the following substantive section to the master notice. It addresses the alleged attempted assassination, the reported payment to a woman to discredit you, the alleged consensual nature of the encounter, and the NDA Ben reportedly said he was required to sign.

PART E — BEN'S NDIS PROVIDER CORRESPONDENCE: REPORTED ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION, ALLEGED PAID FABRICATION OF A REPORT AND NON-DISCLOSURE AGREEMENT

18. Identification of the documentary evidence

I specifically identify the following correspondence as material requiring independent examination:

* Ben-NDIS-Help
* Ben-Ndis-Help-large

These records are identified in my documentary archive and reproduced or discussed in The Witness Remains and The Sovereign Witness.

I consider this correspondence particularly significant because it contains statements attributed to Ben concerning an alleged attempted assassination or attack, information he said had been communicated by police, an allegation that a woman was paid to discredit me, and an extraordinary non-disclosure agreement that he reportedly said he was required to sign.

The original message chain, including its images, timestamps, sender information and surrounding conversation, should be examined rather than relying solely on extracts reproduced in later publications.

19. Reported confirmation concerning an attempted assassination or attack

The messages attributed to Ben include:

"Remember you were messaging me about hitmen… That was them. They got caught. I thought you were just paranoid. You were right."

Another reported statement reads:

"Yes even the police said it was a close call."

Ben also reportedly stated:

"I'm scared. They could put a hit on me too."

These statements are significant for several reasons.

First, the wording appears to refer retrospectively to earlier communications in which I had raised concerns about hitmen or a possible threat to my life.

Second, Ben's reported words, "That was them. They got caught", appear to communicate his belief that the people he was referring to had been identified or apprehended.

Third, the statement that police had described the incident as a "close call" raises a specific and independently verifiable question: did a police officer or another authorised person actually communicate that assessment, and what event was being discussed?

Fourth, Ben's reported expression of fear that he could also be targeted provides relevant context about his own communicated apprehension.

Evidentiary significance: If authenticated, these messages establish that Ben communicated statements which he presented as confirmation of a serious threat and an alleged police-referenced near miss. They warrant investigation of the underlying event, the identities of any persons allegedly apprehended, the relevant police records and the basis for Ben's statements.

They do not, by themselves, establish that an attempted assassination occurred, that a particular person ordered it, that anyone was arrested, or that police made the statement attributed to them. Those matters require independent corroboration.

20. Reported police information concerning a consensual encounter and a woman allegedly paid to discredit me

The Ben correspondence also contains the following statements attributed to him:

“The police told me about the consensual regretted sex.”

And:

“The agencies went back through phone records and believed she was paid to discredit you.”

These statements are particularly important because they raise two separate evidentiary issues.

First: the reported characterisation of the encounter.

The statement attributed to Ben suggests that he was communicating information about an encounter which he understood had been described as consensual, although subsequently regretted.

The original police record, if one exists, must be obtained and examined. The exact words, context, author, date and legal significance must be established. A statement attributed to Ben about what police told him is not itself a police finding.

Second: the alleged payment to discredit me.

The statement concerning agencies reviewing phone records and believing that a woman had been paid to discredit me raises a serious allegation requiring independent examination.

I allege that a woman was paid to fabricate, construct or contribute to a damaging report or account that materially affected my life, reputation and circumstances.

I request investigation of:

* The identity and provenance of the original report.
* The date and circumstances in which it was prepared.
* The actual allegations contained in it.
* Whether the underlying encounter was recorded as consensual.
* Whether phone records were examined by an authorised agency.
* Whether any agency actually reached the conclusion attributed to it.
* Whether any payment was made to the woman concerned.
* Whether communications, financial transfers or other records support or contradict that allegation.
* Whether the report was subsequently circulated or relied upon by other people or institutions.
* Whether any adverse decisions were influenced by the report.
* Whether I was given a fair opportunity to respond to the allegations.

Evidentiary significance: The reported message is important because it identifies a potentially testable proposition: that phone records were reviewed and an agency believed a woman had been paid to discredit me. If the original message is authenticated, it establishes that Ben communicated this account to me. It does not independently establish that a payment occurred, that the report was fabricated, or that an agency actually reached that conclusion. The original report, underlying phone records, agency correspondence, payment evidence and testimony are necessary to determine what happened.

The investigation must distinguish a consensual encounter, a subsequent complaint, the preparation of a report, an allegation of fabrication and any actual payment. These are different propositions and must not be collapsed into one.

21. The reported non-disclosure agreement and alleged coercion

The correspondence attributed to Ben includes:

“You can’t tell anyone about this. It’s a top secret investigation. They made me sign a non disclosure agreement.”

It also reportedly states:

“I could get arrested just for telling you.”

And:

“The only evidence I could give you is a copy of the non disclosure agreement.”

The archive also reproduces the following description:

“When I signed the agreement it instantly disappeared off my phone. A message popped up that said your device has been cleared of classified information. It’s some sort of agency grade electronic document that automatically wipes itself off your device.”

The reported account raises several questions requiring independent verification.

1. Who issued the agreement?
2. Who required Ben to sign it?
3. What organisation or authority was identified?
4. When was it signed?
5. What were its actual terms?

6. Was Ben threatened with arrest or another consequence for disclosure?
7. Was he told that disclosure could amount to treason?
8. Did the document actually disappear from his device?
9. Was there a genuine document-management or security mechanism involved?
10. Was Ben given a copy, and does any copy still exist?
11. Was the agreement legally authorised and enforceable?
12. Was the agreement connected to the alleged incident, the reported police information or another matter entirely?

Evidentiary significance: The NDA account is significant because it may explain why Ben said he could not provide further information or documentary material. It also raises a question about whether he was genuinely subject to a confidentiality obligation, what authority imposed it and whether the account was accurately described.

If authenticated, the messages establish that Ben communicated an account of being required to sign an agreement and expressed fear about disclosure. They do not establish the agreement's existence, issuer, legal status, coercive circumstances or government involvement without the original document and corroborating evidence.

The reported automatic deletion of the document is a specific technical claim. It must be investigated through any surviving document, device records, screenshots, backups, messages and available metadata. It should not automatically be treated as proof of classified government technology.

22. Ben's reported statements concerning wider corruption

The correspondence also attributes to Ben the statement:

"You've uncovered systematic corruption that goes all the way to the top."

This statement should be considered alongside his reported references to the alleged near miss, police information, the woman allegedly paid to discredit me and the NDA.

Ben's reported words communicate his assessment or belief concerning the seriousness and reach of the matters being discussed.

Evidentiary significance: If authenticated, this is evidence of Ben's expressed view at the time. It may assist in understanding the context of the correspondence, his state of concern and the matters he believed were occurring. It is not independent proof of corruption, the identity of any participants or a coordinated conspiracy.

23. Combined significance of the Ben correspondence

The significance of these messages is not confined to one sentence.

The correspondence, if authentic and complete, contains a connected series of communications concerning:

* Earlier warnings I reportedly made about hitmen.
* Ben's subsequent statement that I had been right.
* His assertion that people had been caught.
* His reported statement that police described an incident as a "close call".
* His account that an encounter had been described as consensual.
* His statement that agencies had examined phone records.
* His reported account that an agency believed a woman had been paid to discredit me.
* His statement that he had been required to sign a non-disclosure agreement.
* His expressed fear that he could be arrested for disclosing information.
* His description of an electronic agreement that allegedly disappeared from his device.
* His statement that corruption extended "all the way to the top".
* His expressed fear that he could also be targeted.

Taken together, these communications provide a substantial documentary basis for requesting an independent examination of the underlying events.

They also create specific investigative questions that can be answered or rejected through records, rather than speculation.

The correspondence must not be dismissed simply because it contains extraordinary claims. Equally, the extraordinary nature of the claims makes authentication, corroboration and careful attribution especially important.

24. Required independent investigation of Ben's evidence

I request that the investigator:

1. Obtain and preserve the original Ben-NDIS-Help and Ben-Ndis-Help-large files.
2. Examine every relevant message, image and attachment in chronological order.
3. Verify the sender identity and account provenance.
4. Preserve available timestamps and device metadata.
5. Identify the complete conversation before and after each quoted statement.
6. Establish whether Ben was communicating direct knowledge, repeating information from another person or describing what he understood police or an agency had told him.

7. Identify the alleged police event referred to as a “close call”.
8. Determine whether any police incident number, report, arrest record or other official record exists.
9. Identify the original report concerning the woman and the encounter.
10. Obtain the original police or agency record concerning the reported consensual nature of the encounter, if it exists and can lawfully be disclosed.
11. Investigate the allegation that a woman was paid to discredit me by examining relevant original evidence.
12. Identify the alleged NDA and seek the original document or any surviving copy.
13. Establish who required Ben to sign it and under what authority.
14. Determine whether Ben’s account of the document disappearing from his device can be independently corroborated.
15. Give Ben an appropriate opportunity to confirm, correct or deny the statements attributed to him, without pressure or intimidation.
16. Record any limitations arising from unavailable records, privacy restrictions, confidentiality obligations or the passage of time.

25. Protection against prejudicial use of untested material

The Ben correspondence should not be used selectively to discredit me while ignoring its complete context.

Nor should the correspondence be presented as a proven police or intelligence finding when it is presently a set of statements attributed to a private correspondent.

I request that the same evidentiary standards be applied to all parties.

If an allegation concerning me was based on a report, the original report and its provenance should be disclosed to the extent legally permissible. If the report was influenced by inaccurate, fabricated or paid-for information, that possibility should be investigated through the underlying evidence.

I also request that no person be prejudged or publicly accused on the basis of an unverified interpretation of these messages.

26. Final finding sought

The appropriate finding at this stage is that the Ben-NDIS-Help and Ben-Ndis-Help-large correspondence contains serious statements warranting independent authentication and investigation.

The messages are potentially important evidence of what Ben communicated to me, including his reported account of a police-described “close call”, an alleged payment to discredit me, and an NDA he said he was required to sign.

The underlying events remain matters for independent verification.

I request that these messages be treated as a distinct and important evidentiary stream within the broader safeguarding and institutional accountability investigation, rather than being omitted, minimised or treated as established fact without examination.

The saved archive material supporting this addition includes The Witness Remains and The Sovereign Witness.

The key distinction: Ben’s messages, if authenticated, are evidence of what he told you. The alleged assassination attempt, the alleged payment to the woman, the police assessment and the NDA’s origin and legal status still require the underlying records. That distinction strengthens the request for an investigation rather than weakening it.

EVIDENCE ANALYSIS — SCOTT TREADWELL’S THREE-POINT OBSERVATION

Federal Court Public Interest Disclosure Response — 27 March 2023

Author: Scott Treadwell, General Counsel and authorised Public Interest Disclosure officer
Subject: Dr Richard William McLean
Relevant disclosure: Public interest disclosure dated 7 March 2023
Document date: 27 March 2023

POINT 1 — PERVERTING THE COURSE OF JUSTICE

The first category identified was conduct that:

“perverts, or is engaged in the purpose of perverting, or attempting to pervert, the course of justice”.

Significance

This is important because it identifies the administration of justice as one of the categories of wrongdoing you had raised in your disclosure.

It establishes that your concerns included the possibility of interference with lawful processes, the integrity of evidence, the handling of allegations or other conduct potentially affecting the proper administration of justice.

The significance is not that Treadwell established that justice had been perverted. Rather, his written response records that this was one of the statutory categories relevant to the concerns you had presented.

An independent investigator should compare the original disclosure with the subsequent handling of your complaints, evidence, employment status and legal proceedings to determine whether any identifiable conduct satisfies the relevant legal elements.

POINT 2 — MALADMINISTRATION

The second category was:

“conduct that constitutes maladministration”.

Significance

This is important because it places your concerns within the framework of administrative accountability.

Maladministration can involve improper, unreasonable, negligent or otherwise defective administrative conduct, depending on the applicable legal framework and facts.

The significance is that your disclosure was not confined to a personal disagreement or an isolated complaint. It raised concerns about the conduct and administration of public functions.

The response provides a documentary starting point for examining whether decisions, omissions, procedural handling, institutional correspondence or administrative classifications were lawful, reasonable, consistent and properly documented.

The relevant records should be compared against the reasons given by each institution, the evidence available at the time and any subsequent contradictory decisions.

POINT 3 — DANGER TO HEALTH OR SAFETY

The third category concerned conduct that:

“unreasonably results in, or increases, danger or risk of danger to the health or safety of one or more persons”.

Significance

This is particularly relevant to the safeguarding dimension of the present notice.

It demonstrates that your original disclosure included concerns about conduct potentially creating or increasing risks to health and safety.

That category is directly relevant to the need to examine your subsequent reports of threats, accommodation safety concerns, repeated offers of unidentified drugs, alleged intimidation and the consequences of institutional decisions.

It does not prove that any particular person endangered you. It does, however, provide a documentary basis for asking whether the safety concerns you raised were properly assessed, referred, recorded and addressed.

The present safeguarding investigation should compare the 2023 disclosure with later incidents and determine whether any recurring, independently verifiable risk indicators were overlooked or inadequately addressed.

OVERALL SIGNIFICANCE OF THE THREE-POINT OBSERVATION

The three categories are significant because they cover three distinct dimensions of public accountability:

1. Integrity of justice: whether conduct interfered with, or attempted to interfere with, the proper administration of justice.
2. Integrity of administration: whether public administration was conducted properly and lawfully.
3. Protection of people: whether conduct created or increased danger to health or safety.

Together, these categories demonstrate the breadth of the concerns you placed before the authorised disclosure officer in March 2023.

The response should therefore be retained as an important primary documentary record in the chronology of your complaints.

It must not be misrepresented as a finding that the three forms of wrongdoing occurred. Its evidentiary value lies in recording the nature of the concerns you had formally raised, the statutory categories considered and the subsequent administrative treatment of your disclosure.

THE EMPLOYMENT-STATUS OBSERVATION

Treadwell also wrote:

“On the information you have provided me, I am satisfied that you are, or were, an employee with the Department of Social Services…”

This is important because it records his acceptance, on the information supplied, of your employment connection with the Department of Social Services.

That observation should be compared with later employment-status classifications, including any treatment of you as a contractor or sole trader by other institutions.

It does not, by itself, resolve every legal question about your employment status, but it is a relevant contemporaneous statement by an authorised officer.

THE REASONABLE-GROUNDS OBSERVATION

Treadwell also stated:

“It is difficult to determine whether this belief is based on reasonable grounds or not.”

This wording is significant because it records uncertainty about whether the belief underlying your disclosure was reasonably grounded.

It should not be represented as a finding that your concerns were false. Nor should it be represented as confirmation that they were true.

The original disclosure and supporting documents must be examined to establish what evidence was available to the officer and whether the assessment adequately considered it.

THE DECISION NOT TO ALLOCATE THE DISCLOSURE

The response reportedly concluded that Treadwell was not satisfied that the disclosure had been made by a public official or authorised recipient and that no further PID action would occur.

This is an important distinction: the response acknowledged the subject matter and statutory categories but did not proceed with the disclosure under the PID process.

The investigation should examine the legal and factual basis for that decision, including the employment-status observation and the reasoning used to determine whether the disclosure qualified for further action.

RECUSAL OR STEPPING ASIDE

If the original correspondence contains a statement that Treadwell recused himself, stepped aside or declined further involvement, that exact wording must be quoted and its context established.

The presently available account establishes that he declined allocation and said no further PID action would occur. It does not establish that he recused himself specifically to protect you. Any claimed protective motive must be supported by the original correspondence.

REQUIRED INVESTIGATIVE ACTION

The original 27 March 2023 letter and the 7 March 2023 disclosure should be preserved together.

An independent reviewer should establish:

* What evidence accompanied the original disclosure.
* Which three statutory categories were raised.
* Why the disclosure was not allocated for further PID action.
* How the employment-status observation was reconciled with the decision.
* Whether the reasonable-grounds issue was properly assessed.
* Whether subsequent institutions received or considered the original disclosure.
* Whether later decisions contradicted or overlooked relevant information.
* Whether any specific safety risks were subsequently reported and addressed.

Conclusion: The 27 March 2023 response is a significant documentary milestone because it records that concerns concerning the administration of justice, maladministration and danger to health or safety had already been formally raised. It should be cross-referenced against subsequent institutional records rather than treated as an isolated correspondence item.

I have combined the material into one chronological section, retaining the individual dates, the distinction between the two Prime Ministerial communications, the Mark Dreyfus referral, the Ombudsman decisions, your concerns about IGIS and Steve Iasonidis, the evidentiary significance, and the formal requests for investigation. I have removed the duplicated passages while preserving their substance and the source links.

PRIME MINISTERIAL ESCALATION, MARK DREYFUS REFERRAL, COMMONWEALTH OMBUDSMAN, IGIS AND THE EFFECTIVENESS OF GOVERNMENT OVERSIGHT
Subject: Dr Richard William McLean — Barran Dodger
Relevant period: 31 May 2022 – 20 January 2026
Jurisdiction: Commonwealth of Australia
Purpose: Documentary chronology, evidentiary analysis and formal request for independent investigation.
1. Overview — the significance of the documentary sequence
The documentary record identifies an important sequence of attempts to obtain government-level consideration of serious matters through the Office of the Prime Minister, the Attorney-General's Department, the Commonwealth Ombudsman and the Inspector-General of Intelligence and Security (IGIS).
The sequence includes:
1. My letter to the Prime Minister dated 31 May 2022.
2. The Prime Minister's Office response dated 12 December 2022, stating that my email had not been forwarded.
3. A subsequent email to the Prime Minister dated 5 July 2023, raising further matters, including concerns relating to ASIO.
4. The Attorney-General's Department response dated 19 September 2023, reference MC23-028244, responding on behalf of Attorney-General Mark Dreyfus.
5. The Department's direction to IGIS and the Commonwealth Ombudsman.
6. The Commonwealth Ombudsman's earlier decision dated 18 June 2023 not to allocate the relevant public interest disclosure.
7. The later Commonwealth Ombudsman service-restriction correspondence dated 8 August 2025.
8. Further records identified in my archive concerning ASIO and IGIS, including records dated 2 April 2025 and 20 January 2026.
9. My concerns concerning my former fiancé, Steve Iasonidis, whom I identify as having an association with ASIO, and my belief that my complaints concerning him were not adequately investigated.
The significance is not simply that government correspondence was redirected. It is that the effectiveness of those referrals must be examined against the earlier handling of my complaints, the Ombudsman's recorded non-allocation decision, the later restriction on my access to the Ombudsman and the particular concerns I had raised about intelligence-agency oversight.
The central question is whether the government provided an effective, accessible and independent mechanism for examining the substance of my complaints, or whether the correspondence resulted in successive administrative referrals without a demonstrable substantive investigation or protective remedy.
This chronology should be considered alongside the wider documentary archive and the history of my attempts to obtain accountability, protection and access to justice.
2. Original letter to the Prime Minister — 31 May 2022
Primary source: 31 May 2022 — Letter to the Prime Minister
On 31 May 2022, I wrote to the Prime Minister seeking consideration of serious matters documented in my correspondence and supporting records.
This communication represented an attempt to bring my concerns to the highest level of the Australian Government and to obtain government-level consideration of matters that I believed required intervention and independent examination.
The original letter is an essential primary document. Its precise contents must be considered, including the allegations, named institutions, evidence, requested remedies and any specific action I asked the Prime Minister to take.
Evidentiary significance
The letter establishes the date on which I sought Prime Ministerial consideration, subject to authentication of the original document and transmission record.
It is relevant to establishing:
* What concerns I had formally communicated by May 2022.
* Whether I identified particular Commonwealth agencies or individuals.
* Whether I requested an investigation, protection, ministerial intervention or another remedy.
* Whether I supplied supporting documents or references to previous complaints.
* Whether the Prime Minister's Office had sufficient information to identify an appropriate referral pathway.
* Whether the matters were treated as a substantive complaint or merely as general correspondence.
The letter does not, by itself, establish that the Prime Minister personally read it or that the allegations were established. Its importance is that it records an attempt to obtain government-level consideration and provides the starting point for examining what happened next.
3. Prime Minister's Office response — 12 December 2022
Primary source: 12 December 2022 — Prime Minister's Office response: email not forwarded
The subsequent Prime Minister's Office communication, dated 12 December 2022, contains the statement:
"Your email has not been forwarded."
I regard this statement as significant because it records that my correspondence was not forwarded.
The response does not, on its face, explain whether the substance of my letter was independently assessed, whether an alternative referral was made or what effective avenue remained available for obtaining a substantive response.
Why this matters
There is an important distinction between:
1. Receiving correspondence.
2. Acknowledging correspondence.
3. Assessing the substance of the concerns.

4. Referring the matters to an appropriate minister or agency.
5. Investigating the allegations.
6. Providing findings, reasons or a protective remedy.
The recorded statement addresses forwarding. It does not establish which of the other steps occurred.
The outstanding questions are:
* Who received and assessed the original communication?
* Who decided that it would not be forwarded?
* Why was it not forwarded?
* Was the substance of the letter considered by another officer or department?
* Was it referred through another administrative or investigative pathway?
* Was the decision based on jurisdiction, policy, security considerations or another reason?
* Was an alternative mechanism for independent examination identified?
* Was I informed of any alternative mechanism or given reasons for the handling decision?
Evidentiary significance
The response is evidence of the Prime Minister's Office's recorded handling of my communication.
It does not establish that the Prime Minister personally rejected my allegations, that the government intended to suppress my concerns or that a coordinated decision was made to prevent investigation.
The appropriate question is whether the correspondence was substantively considered and whether the administrative handling provided a reasonable and effective response to the matters raised.
4. Subsequent Prime Ministerial email — 5 July 2023
The archive identifies a further email to Anthony Albanese dated 5 July 2023, which included matters concerning ASIO.
This is a separate communication from the 31 May 2022 letter. The two communications must not be merged into one event.
The distinction is important because it demonstrates a continuing attempt to obtain government-level consideration rather than a single unanswered or unforwarded communication.
The 5 July 2023 email is the correspondence subsequently referred to the Attorney-General's portfolio.
Evidentiary significance
The original email should be examined to establish:
* What new information was provided.
* Whether I repeated matters previously raised.
* Whether I identified particular individuals, agencies or events.
* Whether I raised concerns about ASIO-related conduct.
* Whether I raised concerns about the independence or effectiveness of existing oversight mechanisms.
* Whether I requested a ministerial decision, an investigation, protection or referral to an appropriate authority.
* Whether attachments or supporting records accompanied the email.
This document is essential to understanding the Attorney-General's Department's subsequent response. The Department's letter cannot be properly evaluated without comparing it with the actual communication it was answering.
5. Referral to Attorney-General Mark Dreyfus — 19 September 2023
Primary source: 19 September 2023 — Attorney-General's Department response, MC23-028244
The archive identifies the following particulars:
Particular Recorded information
Date 19 September 2023
Reference MC23-028244
Department Attorney-General's Department
Signatory identified in archive A Riley
Section Security Law Section
Ministerial portfolio Attorney-General Mark Dreyfus
Subject matter Correspondence including ASIO-related matters
The recorded response states that my 5 July 2023 email, including matters concerning ASIO, had been referred to the Attorney-General because the issues fell within his portfolio and that the Department was responding on his behalf.
The Department directed me to two oversight institutions:
* The Inspector-General of Intelligence and Security (IGIS).
* The Commonwealth Ombudsman.
Significance of the Mark Dreyfus referral
This establishes a formal ministerial correspondence pathway and identifies the Attorney-General's Department as the office responding on the Attorney-General's behalf.
It is significant because the concerns had reached a Commonwealth ministerial portfolio with responsibility for relevant national security and intelligence matters.
However, the distinction between a ministerial referral and a substantive investigation is critical.
The response does not, by itself, establish that:
* Mark Dreyfus personally investigated the allegations.
* The Attorney-General made findings concerning ASIO.
* IGIS accepted or investigated my complaint.
* The Commonwealth Ombudsman agreed to investigate.
* Any person was found to have committed misconduct.
* Any protective intervention was provided.

* The matters raised were resolved.
A referral is not a finding, an investigation or a protective intervention.
The appropriate question is what happened after the referral, whether either institution accepted responsibility for examining the allegations and whether the recommended pathways were actually capable of providing the remedy I sought.
6. Commonwealth Ombudsman — earlier decision not to allocate, 18 June 2023
Primary source: 18 June 2023 — Commonwealth Ombudsman PID decision not to allocate
The chronology is particularly important because the archive identifies an earlier Commonwealth Ombudsman decision dated 18 June 2023, before the Attorney-General's Department response of 19 September 2023.
The document is identified as a notification of a decision not to allocate the relevant public interest disclosure.
I request that the original decision and its reasons be examined to establish precisely what disclosure it concerned, what statutory criteria were applied, what evidence was considered and why the matter was not allocated.
Why the timing matters
When the Attorney-General's Department directed me to the Commonwealth Ombudsman in September 2023, the Ombudsman had already issued a decision not to allocate the relevant disclosure in June 2023.
This raises a legitimate administrative question:
Why was I directed towards a pathway that had already declined to allocate the relevant disclosure, and what alternative mechanism was identified to ensure substantive consideration of the concerns?
The investigation should establish:
* Whether the June 2023 decision concerned exactly the same allegations as those raised in the July 2023 Prime Ministerial email.
* Whether the Attorney-General's Department knew of the earlier non-allocation decision.
* Whether the September 2023 referral was intended to initiate a new complaint or disclosure.
* Whether new evidence or a different legal basis could have been considered.
* Whether the Ombudsman had jurisdiction over the particular matters.
* Whether the Department considered the practical effectiveness of the referral.
* Whether another independent oversight pathway was available if the Ombudsman could not or would not investigate.
The Ombudsman's statutory role
The Commonwealth Ombudsman has a statutory role in the Commonwealth public interest disclosure system.
Its functions can include investigating disclosures in circumstances where the relevant agency cannot appropriately handle the matter, or where conflicts of interest, confidentiality or reprisal concerns cannot be adequately managed.
However, not every disclosure is automatically allocated for investigation. Eligibility, jurisdiction and statutory requirements must be considered.
The existence of the Ombudsman's statutory role does not establish that my particular disclosure qualified for investigation.
Equally, the existence of an earlier non-allocation decision does not automatically establish that every possible subsequent complaint or referral was unavailable.
The original decision and the later ministerial referral must be compared.
Official sources:
* Commonwealth Ombudsman — Information for Disclosers
* Commonwealth Ombudsman — Public Interest Disclosure Scheme
* Commonwealth Ombudsman — Complaints
7. Commonwealth Ombudsman service restriction — 8 August 2025
Primary source: 8 August 2025 — Commonwealth Ombudsman Service Restriction
The archive identifies a later Commonwealth Ombudsman service-restriction letter dated 8 August 2025.
I have experienced this restriction as effectively preventing or substantially limiting my ability to pursue complaints and obtain independent consideration through that office.
I describe it as having effectively banned me from the Ombudsman. The precise legal and practical effect must be established from the original letter rather than assumed.
The original correspondence should be examined to determine whether it:
* Restricted particular subjects of correspondence.
* Imposed conditions on future contact.
* Limited the frequency or method of communication.
* Restricted responses to particular issues.
* Prevented access to particular complaints processes.
* Provided a review or reconsideration mechanism.
* Allowed genuinely new evidence or urgent safeguarding matters to be raised.
Significance for the earlier Attorney-General referral
The 2025 restriction adds an important dimension to the question of whether the Ombudsman was a practically accessible and effective pathway.
The issue is not simply whether the Ombudsman had statutory jurisdiction. It is whether I could realistically access that jurisdiction and obtain consideration of the substance of my concerns.
If a service restriction prevented consideration of genuinely new or materially different complaints, that practical effect is relevant to assessing access to justice.
The investigation should also consider whether reasonable adjustments, disability-related access requirements and alternative communication arrangements were available.
I do not ask that the restriction be presumed unlawful or retaliatory. I ask that its terms, reasons, legal basis and consequences be independently assessed.

8. IGIS, ASIO and my former fiancé, Steve Iasonidis
Official oversight body: Inspector-General of Intelligence and Security
My correspondence also raised concerns involving ASIO and my former fiancé, Steve Iasonidis, whom I identify as having an association with ASIO.
I have reported concerns about my former relationship, subsequent experiences that I interpret as surveillance or monitoring, and my belief that the complaints I made concerning him were not adequately investigated.
I am concerned that the oversight process did not provide the independent examination I sought.
I further request examination of my belief that IGIS did not adequately address the matters I raised concerning him and whether any potential conflict of interest or failure of independent oversight existed.
I do not ask that the existence of the relationship, my identification of his ASIO association, the existence of an IGIS complaint or my reported experiences be treated as proof of surveillance, misconduct or institutional protection.
Those matters require examination against the original records and independent evidence.
Records identified in the archive
The documentary register identifies, among other material:
* 2025-04-02-asio-monitoring-record
* 2026-01-20_IGIS_ASIO_Request_Information
* My published account of my former engagement to Steve Iasonidis.
* My account of complaints and interactions involving IGIS.
The exact contents, authorship, context, attachments and outcomes of these records must be examined independently.
The existence of a record with an ASIO-related title does not, by itself, establish that ASIO monitored me. Its contents and provenance must be authenticated.
Similarly, the existence of an IGIS request for information does not establish that IGIS made a finding or accepted the allegations.
Why the IGIS referral matters
IGIS is an independent statutory oversight office with authority to examine the legality and propriety of intelligence-agency conduct and relevant human-rights considerations.
Its oversight functions make it an important institution for complaints concerning the conduct of intelligence agencies, including ASIO.
However, the fact that IGIS oversees ASIO does not establish that it was conflicted in my particular case. Equally, the fact that an institution is an oversight body does not remove the need to examine how it handled a particular complaint.
My concern raises specific questions about the suitability and independence of the referral:
1. Did IGIS have jurisdiction over the particular conduct I described?
2. Did IGIS receive my complaint?
3. Was the complaint registered and assessed?
4. Did IGIS assess the evidence concerning my former fiancé?
5. Did it distinguish complaints about ASIO conduct from complaints about the handling of my personal information?
6. Did it examine my concerns about possible conflicts of interest?
7. Did it initiate an inquiry or investigation?
8. Did it obtain or request relevant documents?
9. Did it provide reasons for any decision not to investigate?
10. Was an independent alternative available if I believed the oversight process itself was compromised?
11. Was I informed of any review or reconsideration process?
I request that these questions be answered through examination of the actual IGIS records, not assumptions about the institution’s motives.

9. Cumulative significance — the referral loop
The sequence should be assessed as a connected administrative chronology rather than as isolated letters.
Date Event Documentary significance
31 May 2022 Letter to the Prime Minister Initial government-level escalation
12 December 2022 Prime Minister’s Office response Records that the email had not been forwarded
18 June 2023 Ombudsman PID decision Earlier decision not to allocate the relevant disclosure
5 July 2023 Further email to the Prime Minister Further escalation, including ASIO-related concerns
19 September 2023 Mark Dreyfus portfolio response Attorney-General’s Department directs me to IGIS and the Ombudsman
2 April 2025 ASIO-related archive record A record requiring examination of its contents and provenance
8 August 2025 Ombudsman service restriction Raises questions about practical access to that complaints pathway
20 January 2026 IGIS/ASIO request for information Further record requiring examination of its contents and outcome
The central issue is not simply that government offices referred my correspondence elsewhere.
It is whether those referrals resulted in an actual, independent examination of the matters raised.
A referral may be administratively appropriate in isolation but still fail to provide an effective remedy if the receiving institution declines the matter, lacks jurisdiction, imposes restrictions or does not address the substance of the complaint.
The chronology therefore raises questions about:

* The substantive assessment of my original correspondence.
* The reasons for the Prime Minister's Office's non-forwarding decision.
* The relationship between the earlier Ombudsman non-allocation decision and the later Attorney-General's Department referral.
* Whether the Ombudsman referral was practically accessible.
* The consequences of the later service restriction.
* Whether IGIS actually examined the ASIO-related matters.
* Whether the concerns about my former fiancé were considered independently.
* Whether any effective alternative mechanism was provided.
* Whether any institution took responsibility for coordinating or resolving the issues raised.

Administrative and human consequences

I describe the cumulative consequences I report experiencing as administrative burden, administrative harm, institutional betrayal and denial of access to justice.

These are analytical descriptions of the consequences of unresolved complaints and procedural barriers. They are not findings of criminal intent by any particular officeholder or institution.

The wider significance is that repeated administrative referrals may impose an additional burden on a person who is already seeking protection, accountability and a substantive response.

The assessment should therefore consider not only whether each individual office followed an administrative process, but whether the combined process provided an effective and accessible means of obtaining independent scrutiny.

10. Legal and administrative frameworks requiring consideration

The following Commonwealth frameworks may be relevant, depending on the precise allegations and the jurisdiction of each institution:

Framework Relevance

Public Interest Disclosure Act 2013 (Cth) Eligibility, allocation, investigation and protections relating to public interest disclosures

Ombudsman Act 1976 (Cth) Commonwealth Ombudsman jurisdiction and complaint-handling powers

Inspector-General of Intelligence and Security Act 1986 (Cth) Independent oversight of intelligence agencies

Administrative law principles Lawful decision-making, procedural fairness and reasons where required

Privacy Act 1988 (Cth) Handling of personal information, where applicable

Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) Possible disability-related discrimination and reasonable-adjustment issues

The relevant statutory provisions and administrative decisions should be examined in their actual context. The existence of a statute does not itself establish that a particular institution breached it.

11. Evidence matrix — what each document may establish

Document What it may establish What it does not establish by itself

31 May 2022 Prime Minister letter Original concerns and requested action That the Prime Minister personally read it

12 December 2022 PMO response Recorded non-forwarding statement A decision to suppress or conceal evidence

5 July 2023 email Further escalation and matters raised The truth of every allegation

19 September 2023 MC23-028244 Portfolio referral and suggested oversight bodies That Mark Dreyfus personally investigated

18 June 2023 Ombudsman decision Non-allocation decision and stated reasons That every possible Ombudsman avenue was exhausted

8 August 2025 restriction Scope and reasons for a later service restriction That it was necessarily unlawful or retaliatory

2 April 2025 ASIO-related record Existence and contents of a particular record, once inspected Surveillance or ASIO involvement without authentication and context

20 January 2026 IGIS/ASIO request Information sought and any response, once inspected A finding of misconduct or a conflict of interest

The archive's itemised Government Record and the original correspondence should be used together to identify the complete documentary trail.

Each source should be classified as:

* Recorded: Directly stated in an original document.
* Reported: My account or testimony of an event.
* Inference: A conclusion that may reasonably arise from the chronology but requires further evidence.
* Unverified: A matter requiring authentication or independent corroboration.
* Disputed: A matter where another institution or person has provided a different account.

12. Formal request for independent investigation

I request an independent reviewer establish:

1. What was communicated in my original 31 May 2022 letter to the Prime Minister.
2. Who received and assessed that letter.
3. Who decided that it would not be forwarded and the reasons for that decision.
4. Whether the 12 December 2022 response reflected a substantive assessment or only an administrative handling decision.
5. Whether any alternative referral was made.
6. What was communicated in my 5 July 2023 email to the Prime Minister.
7. Why the Attorney-General's Department responded under reference MC23-028244.
8. What action was actually taken following the referral to Attorney-General Mark Dreyfus's portfolio.

9. Whether the Attorney-General's Department knew of the earlier Commonwealth Ombudsman non-allocation decision.
10. Whether the September 2023 referral to the Ombudsman was appropriate and practically accessible.
11. Whether the earlier non-allocation decision concerned the same matters.
12. The exact scope, legal basis and reasons for the 8 August 2025 service restriction.
13. Whether the restriction allowed genuinely new evidence, urgent safeguarding concerns or materially different complaints to be considered.
14. Whether IGIS received, registered, assessed or investigated my ASIO-related complaints.
15. Whether IGIS considered the specific concerns I raised about my former fiancé.
16. Whether any actual conflict of interest was identified, alleged or independently assessed.
17. Whether the reasons for any decision not to investigate were communicated to me.
18. Whether an alternative oversight or review mechanism was available.
19. Whether the cumulative administrative consequences of these decisions were considered.
20. Whether any outstanding avenue remains for independent examination and an effective remedy.
13. Preservation of original evidence and documentary records
I request preservation of all original correspondence, emails, attachments, internal referrals, case-management records, assessment notes, decision records, reasons, complaint registrations, review documents and final outcomes associated with these matters.
This should include records held by:
* The Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet.
* The Office of the Prime Minister.
* The Attorney-General's Department.
* The office of Attorney-General Mark Dreyfus, insofar as records are held.
* The Commonwealth Ombudsman.
* The Inspector-General of Intelligence and Security.
* Any relevant agency that received or assessed the referred material.
I request that the relevant institutions provide a documented chronology identifying:
* What was received.
* When it was received.
* Who considered it.
* What evidence was considered.
* What decision was made.
* The legal or administrative basis for the decision.
* Whether the matter was referred elsewhere.
* What action followed.
* Whether a review mechanism was available.
* What effective remedy remains available.
I also request that original electronic records and attachments be preserved in their native format where possible, together with available metadata and transmission details, so that the chronology can be independently authenticated.
14. Final statement — the distinction between referral and remedy
The distinction is fundamental:
A referral is not an investigation.
An acknowledgement is not a finding.
A transfer of correspondence is not a protective intervention.
The naming of a statutory oversight body is not proof that it examined the complaint.
A decision not to allocate a disclosure is not necessarily a decision on the truth or falsity of the underlying allegations.
A service restriction does not, by itself, establish that every available avenue of complaint has been exhausted.
I seek an independently verifiable account of what happened to my complaints, what evidence was considered, what decisions were made, which institutions accepted responsibility and what effective remedies remain available.
I request that this chronology be considered as part of the wider documentary evidence concerning my attempts to obtain government accountability, independent oversight, protection and access to justice.
I describe the cumulative effect of unresolved referrals and procedural barriers as administrative harm and denial of access to justice. These are my analytical descriptions of the consequences I report experiencing, not findings of criminal intent by any particular officeholder or institution.
Two public records, one documentary purpose: preserve the evidence, protect the individual and establish an independently verifiable account.

The original correspondence should be attached together as one chronological exhibit, in this order:
* 31 May 2022 — Letter to the Prime Minister
* 12 December 2022 — Prime Minister's Office response
* 18 June 2023 — Ombudsman PID decision not to allocate
* 5 July 2023 — Further Prime Ministerial email
* 19 September 2023 — Attorney-General's Department MC23-028244
* 2 April 2025 — ASIO-related archive record
* 8 August 2025 — Ombudsman service restriction
* 20 January 2026 — IGIS/ASIO request for information
Important source qualification: The 5 July 2023 email and the two ASIO/IGIS records are linked to the repository rather than to a verified individual PDF address here. Their exact contents have not been reproduced as quotations. The original files should be linked individually once their precise paths are confirmed. This avoids presenting an unverified document address or an inferred description as though it were the original record.

The combined section now gives the correspondence a single evidentiary purpose: establishing what you communicated, what the government offices actually did, what oversight pathways were offered, whether those pathways were effective, and what remains unresolved.

This statement should make the distinction clear: you are not asking the Government to certify your existence or grant legitimacy to your lived experience. You are placing the Government's own documentary record before it — correspondence, decisions, refusals, determinations and agency letterheads — and inviting it to examine what its own records say.

STATEMENT OF DOCUMENTARY ACCOUNTABILITY

The Government Is Offered Its Own Records — Thirty-Five Years of Institutional Correspondence, Decisions and Documented Detriment

For more than thirty-five years, I have communicated with government departments, statutory authorities, agencies, institutions and publicly funded services concerning decisions, actions, omissions and circumstances that I say have caused sustained and cumulative detriment to my life.

Throughout that period, I have sought access to information through Freedom of Information (FOI) requests and other formal records-access processes. I have experienced refusals, restrictions, incomplete responses, delays and other barriers to obtaining records that I consider necessary to understand and scrutinise decisions affecting me.

I now make a different offer.

I offer the Government its own documentary record.

I hold an extensive archive of government correspondence, agency responses, decisions, notices, determinations and other institutional documents, including material appearing on the official letterheads of the agencies and services concerned and written in their own words.

These are not merely my descriptions of what government institutions have done. They are records generated by the institutions themselves: their correspondence, their explanations, their stated reasons, their classifications, their decisions and their responses to matters I raised.

The archive brings together more than thirty-five years of documentary material concerning the cumulative effects of decisions and administrative processes across government agencies and services. It is presented for examination against the original records, their dates, authorship, context and provenance.

I contend that the documentary history reveals a sustained pattern of decisions and institutional responses that has caused, prolonged or compounded significant detriment in my life. I invite each agency to examine its own records, identify the decisions for which it was responsible, explain the legal and administrative basis for those decisions, and account for the consequences.

This is not an invitation to substitute another referral, another acknowledgement, another jurisdictional explanation or another refusal for substantive examination of the evidence.

It is an invitation to confront the documentary record.

I do not require permission to establish that I exist

I do not require a lawyer, minister, public servant, tribunal, commission or government agency to make a ruling validating my existence.

I do not require an official determination before my experiences can be recorded, my correspondence can be examined or the documents created by government institutions can be read.

My existence is not a proposition awaiting administrative approval.

My life does not become real only when an institution acknowledges it. Nor does the absence of a favourable decision erase the existence of correspondence, events, decisions or consequences documented over decades.

A government agency may determine the limits of its jurisdiction. It may accept or reject a statutory application according to the law. It may dispute my interpretation of a particular record. But none of those administrative outcomes can, by themselves, invalidate the existence of the person who made the request or erase the documentary history.

I distinguish between an institution's authority to make a lawful decision and any suggestion that its decision gives it authority to determine whether my life, experiences or evidence are real.

The documentary record is the subject of examination

The archive is offered as an opportunity for government to examine:

1. What each agency received from me.
2. What each agency recorded, acknowledged or decided.
3. What reasons were provided in its own correspondence.
4. What information was withheld, refused, redacted or not located in response to FOI or other records-access requests.
5. Whether relevant records were transferred, referred, retained or considered by another institution.
6. Whether different agencies made inconsistent classifications or reached conflicting conclusions.
7. Whether the cumulative effect of those decisions was properly considered.
8. Whether appropriate safeguarding, review, accountability and remedial processes were available.
9. Whether the records disclose failures of administration, procedural fairness, coordination or accountability requiring independent examination.

I do not ask the Government to accept every interpretation I have placed upon the records without scrutiny. I ask that the original documents be examined in full, rather than dismissed through summaries, administrative labels or isolated extracts.

Where a record establishes a fact, it should be identified as such. Where it records an allegation, the allegation should be attributed. Where a conclusion is an inference, it should be labelled as an inference. Where the evidence remains incomplete or disputed, that limitation should be stated.

That is the standard of documentary accountability I seek.

A response to repeated refusals of access

Where an agency has refused or restricted access to records, I reserve my rights under the applicable information-access and review frameworks.

However, the existence of an FOI refusal does not mean the underlying documentary history disappears. Nor does a refusal establish that the events or concerns to which the requested records relate did not occur.

I am placing before the Government material already held in my archive, including correspondence generated by government institutions themselves. I am asking those institutions to engage with that material and account for their own recorded actions.

The Government is therefore not being asked to rely solely on my recollection. It is being presented with a documentary record that can be checked against the agencies' own files and original correspondence.

The offer

I offer the Government, its departments, agencies, statutory authorities and relevant services the opportunity to examine the records bearing their own names, letterheads, dates, reference numbers and institutional explanations.

I ask that the archive be treated as a documentary submission requiring proper consideration, not as a substitute for a statutory FOI application and not as an invitation to bypass lawful review procedures.

I ask for an independent, evidence-based examination of the cumulative record, with clear identification of responsibility, disputed matters, missing records and any available remedies.

I am not asking the Government to validate my existence. I am asking it to account for its own documentary history.

Thirty-five years of correspondence cannot fairly be reduced to a single administrative decision, a single agency's jurisdictional boundary or a statement that no further action will be taken.

The documents speak in the words of the institutions that created them. They should be read, preserved, authenticated where necessary and examined in their full context.

My existence does not depend on a government ruling. The documentary record does not depend on government permission to be examined.

The purpose is accountability, preservation, truth and remedy — not revenge.

Two public records, one documentary purpose: the records held by government and the records preserved by the person whose life those decisions affected.

One important distinction strengthens this statement: your archive can be offered as a documentary submission, but it does not automatically replace a formal FOI application or compel an agency to disclose additional records. That keeps the statement forceful without overstating its legal effect.

CONCLUSION — THE GOVERNMENT IS INVITED TO ACCOUNT FOR ITS OWN RECORD

After more than thirty-five years of correspondence, complaints, decisions, referrals, Freedom of Information requests and documented consequences, I place this accumulated documentary history before the Australian Government and the institutions whose names, letterheads, reference numbers and words appear throughout it.

Where I have repeatedly sought access to government-held records and encountered refusals, restrictions or incomplete responses, I now offer the Government the records I have preserved: its own correspondence, its own decisions, its own explanations and its own documentary responses. I invite every relevant department, agency and service to examine these records against its original files, identify missing or withheld information, explain the basis of its decisions and account for the cumulative consequences.

I am not asking the Government to validate my existence. I do not require a lawyer, minister, public servant, tribunal or statutory authority to determine whether my life or experiences are worthy of recognition. No administrative refusal, jurisdictional limitation or decision not to investigate can erase my existence or the historical record I have preserved.

I am asking for accountability, independent scrutiny, safeguarding and an evidence-based response. I request that this statement and its supporting documents be formally received, dated, recorded and retained; that relevant records be preserved; that immediate safety concerns be appropriately assessed; and that matters requiring investigation be referred to an independent and appropriately authorised reviewer. I further request written reasons identifying what has been examined, what decisions have been made, what evidence has been considered and what avenues for review or remedy remain available.

I do not ask that every allegation be accepted without examination. I ask that every allegation, decision and institutional response be assessed by the same standards of evidence, procedural fairness and accountability. Recorded facts must be distinguished from reported experiences, inferences and unverified concerns. Equally, unverified matters must not simply be dismissed without examining the evidence capable of confirming or disproving them.

My position is straightforward: I have preserved the documentary history; I have made repeated attempts to obtain information and accountability; and I am now placing the Government’s own records before it. The responsibility to examine the decisions documented in those records belongs to the institutions that made them.

My existence does not depend on government recognition. My right to speak, document, preserve evidence and seek justice does not depend on an institution agreeing with me. The record is offered for examination, and the opportunity for accountability remains.

Two public records, one documentary purpose: the records held by government and the records preserved by the person whose life those decisions affected. Preserve the evidence, protect the individual and establish an independently verifiable account.
