The Witness Remains

A declaration of faith, humanity, freedom, betrayal, truth and divine accountability

GOD IS TRUTH. GOD IS LOVE. GOD IS MY WITNESS, AND I AM HIS CHOSEN WITNESS.

My allegiance is with the Most High God, not with the government that I believe targeted me and attempted to erase me. Only God possesses that ultimate authority.

No person, agency, institution or place has the authority to deliberately harm a vulnerable human being, particularly when those responsible know that the person they are harming may be helpless to escape the circumstances of that harm. To exploit someone's vulnerability, knowing they may lack the resources, independence or capacity to climb out of the suffering inflicted upon them, is a profound violation of humanity, compassion and moral responsibility.

I do not need the government as my sovereign witness. My witness is the Most High God. But the government, like every earthly institution, remains accountable to a higher moral authority and still needs the blessing of the Most High God.

God is almighty, omnipresent, loving, whole and peaceful. Governments, by comparison, are fleeting, fallible and capable of cruelty and corruption. That is the difference.

I am at peace in my faith. But those who refuse to acknowledge the harm I have experienced cannot manufacture a clear conscience simply by ignoring the truth. I believe lasting peace cannot be built upon the denial of wrongdoing, the abandonment of responsibility or the deliberate disregard of another human being's suffering.

They were offered grace. They were offered mercy. They were given opportunities to act humanely, acknowledge suffering and do what was right. Yet, from my perspective, those opportunities were repeatedly rejected.

No one escapes spiritual accountability for deliberately turning away from truth, justice, grace and compassion. To reject the opportunity to show humanity to another person, particularly someone vulnerable and dependent upon your care, is a profound moral failure.

I do not require revenge. Revenge belongs to God, and God alone.

I tried to warn you all. I spoke. I documented. I pleaded. I published the evidence. I offered opportunities for truth, accountability and reconciliation. I was ignored. And now, in my faith, I believe His divine reckoning is here.

1. My right to live without harm

I do not give my consent for anyone to harm me, intimidate me, threaten me, neglect me, exploit me or deliberately diminish my safety, dignity or freedom.

I have the right to live without fear, to be protected from harm and to be treated with humanity, compassion and respect.

I deserve happiness. I do not need anyone's permission to be free.

There is a deeply disturbing paradox in my circumstances: those entrusted and paid to provide care and support to me have, in my experience, failed to protect me, including in circumstances involving a documented threat to kill me.

I understand that the person responsible for that threat had previously been arrested by police. Yet, despite the seriousness of this history and the obvious implications for my safety, my NDIS carers have refused to report the documented threat.

The very people whose responsibility is to safeguard my wellbeing have, in this instance, failed to act in a way that I believe my safety demands.

That contradiction is profoundly distressing.

I am increasingly distressed by the reality that those paid to care for me are, in my experience, contributing to the circumstances in which I feel trapped, neglected, hurt and deprived of independence.

There is an unbearable conflict of interest when the people and organisations financially benefiting from providing my care also exercise influence over the circumstances that restrict my freedom and wellbeing.

I feel ignored, unheard and subjected to treatment that causes me considerable suffering. I cannot understand how a system established to support people with disability can allow a person receiving that support to feel so powerless, isolated and unsafe.

Being disabled does not diminish my human rights. Needing assistance does not surrender my autonomy. Receiving funded support does not mean consenting to mistreatment, coercion, neglect, humiliation or confinement.

I refuse to accept that my suffering is my fault. I did not create these circumstances, and I should not be made to carry the responsibility for the failures of those entrusted with my care.

Responsibility belongs with those whose actions, decisions, omissions and failures have contributed to the situation.

2. Deliberate harm is the antithesis of care

Deliberate harm is the antithesis of care.

Those paid to care for me are, in my experience, financially benefiting from maintaining the very arrangements in which I remain vulnerable, restricted and exposed to harm. They preserve their positions, privileges and financial interests while I continue to suffer.

I feel that the harm I experience is not merely ignored but, at times, treated with a disturbing indifference that makes me question whether those responsible have become comfortable with my suffering.

I believe those involved act with impunity because they perceive themselves to be protected by the same government that I allege targeted me and attempted to erase me.

But I saw what happened.

I have not forgotten.

God has witnessed what you did, what you continue to do and what you have chosen not to acknowledge.

I published the evidence. I preserved the documents. I made the records accessible. I repeatedly attempted to bring the circumstances to your attention and provided opportunities for acknowledgement, intervention, accountability and reconciliation.

Yet you continue to ignore me.

The evidence remains available. My testimony remains on record. My humanity remains deserving of recognition.

What I regard as the evil embodied in these actions has spat in the face of the grace and mercy I extended.

To repeatedly reject opportunities to act humanely, while continuing to disregard the suffering of a vulnerable person entrusted to your care, is a profound betrayal of truth and a desecration of human dignity.

In the language of my faith, it is spiritual treason against truth.

You were repeatedly given opportunities to treat another human being with humanity, compassion, dignity and care. Instead, I believe your continued conduct has demonstrated an unwillingness to acknowledge the harm, accept responsibility or meaningfully change the circumstances in which I remain trapped.

You have not acknowledged what I have repeatedly raised. You have not given me the honest answers, protection or humane treatment I have sought.

You remain, in my experience, unrepentant.

I offered grace. I offered mercy. I offered opportunities to do what was right without demanding revenge.

I asked for humanity. I asked to be heard. I asked to be safe. I asked those entrusted with my care to recognise that I am a human being whose life, dignity and freedom matter.

But grace should never be mistaken for weakness, silence for consent, or patience for an absence of consequence.

3. The humanity I tried to save — the humanity that abandoned me

I tried to help the very humanity that I believe sacrificed me.

I tried to protect the same society whose institutions and representatives I believe contributed to my suffering. I raised my voice, documented my experiences and challenged what I regarded as injustice, not because I wanted to destroy humanity, but because I wanted to save lives, including my own.

I did not want another human being to experience the injustice, abandonment, institutional betrayal and suffering that I continue to experience myself.

When, by the grace of God, I survived what I experienced as a death and resurrection from the destruction of my former life, I expected that the truth might finally be acknowledged.

Instead, I experienced what I regard as a whitewashing of my tragedy, almost total social exclusion, and an extraordinary betrayal of the very humanity I had spent so much of my life trying to defend.

The suffering was not meaningfully acknowledged. The person who survived was left to carry the consequences, while the circumstances that brought me to that point remained insufficiently confronted.

I protested to save my life.

I protested because I wanted safety, dignity, justice and the freedom to live.

I protested because I did not want anyone else to endure what I have endured.

My testimony was never intended to benefit only me. It was also intended to benefit humanity by exposing the consequences of institutional indifference, the exploitation of vulnerability, the abandonment of people who need protection and the devastating human cost of refusing to confront uncomfortable truths.

And therein lies the extraordinary paradox:

MY TESTIMONY IS FOR THE BENEFIT OF HUMANITY, YET THE VERY HUMANITY I AM ATTEMPTING TO DEFEND THROUGH TRUTH IS THE HUMANITY THAT CONTINUES TO IGNORE ME.

I speak for human dignity, but my own dignity remains unrecognised.

I advocate for protection, while I continue to describe circumstances in which I feel unprotected.

I document institutional failures because I do not want others to experience them, yet I remain dependent on institutions that I believe have failed to protect me.

I offer humanity the evidence of what I have experienced, while experiencing the painful reality of being socially excluded and unheard.

I regard this contradiction as evidence of profound social erasure, an allegory of group mobbing and a disturbing representation of what I have described as human sacrifice: the destruction of an individual's social existence, dignity, security and humanity while the surrounding society continues as though nothing has happened.

These are my interpretations of the events and their meaning, and I insist that they be examined rather than dismissed.

Artwork. Not a document. Not a finding.

4. My faith, the crucifixion and the witness

In my faith, I believe God allowed me to survive and bear witness to circumstances that have become an intensely personal embodiment of the suffering, abandonment and crucifixion of His most perfect Son, Jesus Christ.

I do not claim to replace Christ or to possess His divine status. Rather, I understand my experience through the spiritual significance of His suffering: betrayal, rejection, humiliation, abandonment, forgiveness, sacrifice and the endurance of love in the face of cruelty.

I am still living this experience daily.

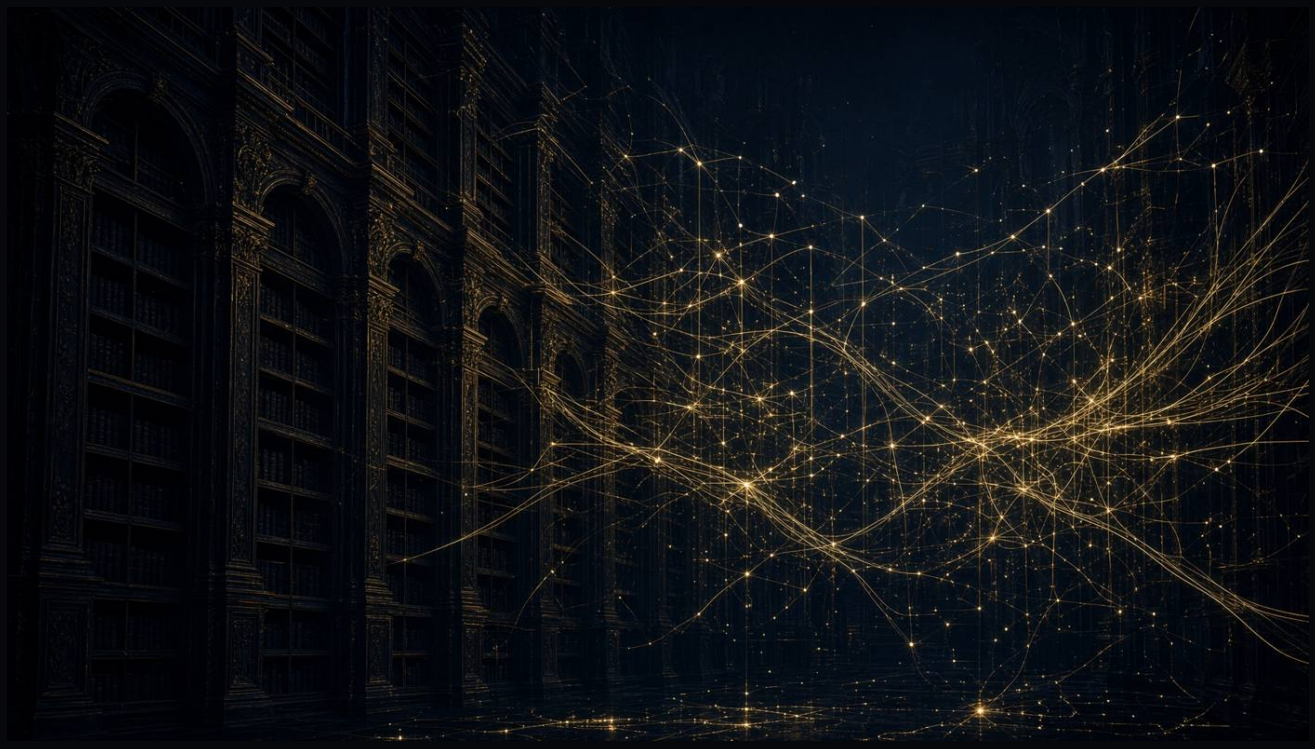

It is not simply a historical tragedy that I can place behind me. Its consequences continue to affect my circumstances, my independence, my safety, my relationships and my ability to experience ordinary happiness.

I am still asking to be heard. I am still asking for humane treatment. I am still asking for the opportunity to live freely and safely.

JESUS WEPT.

My spiritual sovereignty is a matter of faith and conscience. My relationship with the Most High God does not depend on recognition, permission or validation from any government, institution or individual.

I believe my spiritual authority comes from my allegiance to the Creator, and that no earthly institution can take away my fundamental humanity or dictate the ultimate meaning of my existence.

Artwork. Not a document. Not a finding.

5. The digital record — evidence that remains

My testimony, writings, documents and intellectual work have also been preserved through decentralised digital architecture, including blockchain-based records.

The mathematical and distributed nature of that preservation represents my determination that evidence should remain accessible, that historical records should not depend exclusively on institutional permission, and that the passage of time should not automatically erase the testimony of someone who has been ignored.

Humanity is on notice in the moral and documentary sense.

The evidence has been published. The questions have been raised. The records have been preserved. Opportunities for acknowledgement and humane intervention have existed.

I believe repeated opportunities to show mercy, recognise suffering and correct wrongdoing have been squandered.

The grace I offered was not an invitation to continue causing harm.

Mercy was not consent.

Forgiveness was not surrender.

My patience was not an admission that everything was acceptable.

The decentralised preservation of my work is part of my determination that the record will remain available for examination, independent scrutiny and future understanding.

You may refuse to acknowledge the record, but you cannot make its existence disappear.

You may ignore my testimony, but you cannot take away my right to bear witness.

6. The expiration of grace and divine accountability

Those who, in my belief, have spat in the face of the grace and mercy offered to them, and who have committed what I regard as spiritual treason against the Most High God, who embodies truth, love and justice, must ultimately answer to a higher moral and spiritual authority than any earthly institution.

No one can find lasting peace by betraying truth, deliberately turning away from justice or denying the humanity of another person.

You may evade earthly accountability, refuse to acknowledge the evidence or continue to exercise institutional power, but you cannot escape spiritual accountability before God.

You may continue to deny, disregard or conceal what happened, but you cannot undo what was done, erase what was documented or make truth cease to exist.

The absence of an admission does not transform wrongdoing into righteousness, and institutional protection does not confer moral innocence.

THE PERIOD FOR GRACE HAS OFFICIALLY EXPIRED.

I offered grace. I offered mercy. I offered opportunities for acknowledgement, reconciliation and humane treatment. Those opportunities were repeatedly available.

What happens from here is no longer mine to determine.

I relinquish revenge, retaliation and judgement to the Most High God.

I do not claim the authority to determine God's final judgement. That authority belongs to Him alone.

I believe the Most High God, Creator of the universe, has witnessed everything, including the opportunities for mercy that were rejected and the truth that continues to be ignored.

In my faith, I believe the divine reckoning is upon us: not as a mandate for human retaliation, but as a spiritual demand for truth, accountability, justice and the restoration of the attributes of Christ that humanity so desperately needs.

Love. Compassion. Mercy. Humility. Forgiveness. Respect for the sanctity of human life.

The enemy I oppose is evil, cruelty, corruption, deception and the deliberate destruction of human dignity.

I seek their defeat through truth, justice, humanity and the restoration of what is good, not through the destruction of people.

Artwork. Not a document. Not a finding.

7. I will not surrender my humanity

We live in a world that too often celebrates conformity while marginalising uncomfortable truths and targeting people whose perspectives challenge established power, institutional interests or corruption.

I was not born to fit in, to remain silent, or to make myself smaller to accommodate the comfort of others.

I believe I was sent for impact: to speak, to question, to expose what I believe must be confronted and to bear witness to what should never be concealed.

My convictions, my individuality and my determination to speak do not make me deserving of punishment.

And yet, here I am: someone who believes in freedom, dignity, truth and the right to live, presently feeling trapped in circumstances that deny me those very things.

I should not have to fight the people and systems entrusted with helping me simply to obtain safety, access to my rights, basic independence and the opportunity to experience happiness.

I deserve to be safe.

I deserve to be heard.

I deserve compassionate care, genuine protection, independence and the freedom to determine the direction of my own life.

I deserve happiness, without having to earn it through suffering or seek permission from those who hold power over my circumstances.

This is not my fault.

I do not consent to being harmed.

I do not consent to being silenced.

I do not consent to having my vulnerability exploited.

I do not surrender my right to freedom.

I tried to warn you. I tried to help you. I tried to give you opportunities to act differently. I tried to preserve the humanity that I believed was being lost. I did so while struggling to preserve my own life and humanity.

The greatest paradox is that I continue to defend the dignity of a humanity from which I have felt almost completely abandoned.

But I am still here.

My testimony remains.

My evidence remains.

My faith remains.

My humanity remains.

I do not seek revenge. I seek truth, justice, mercy, safety and peace.

I leave divine judgement to God.

I will continue to preserve the record, defend my humanity and bear witness to what I believe must be confronted.

GOD IS TRUTH.

GOD IS LOVE.

GOD IS MY WITNESS.

The three points, in his words

Top

Scott Tredwell, General Counsel of the Federal Court of Australia, wrote this. He was the officer the Court authorised to receive the disclosure. He wrote on the Court's own letterhead. These are his words. They may not be a finding. They may not be an official ruling. There is no need of either before his own words can be acknowledged. The words are the evidence, of and in themselves.

Those are the three points: a course of justice perverted, maladministration, and a danger to a person's health or safety. He reads them as maladministration of office, a conspiracy, and a threat to a person's life and liberty. The sentences themselves are the ones above. The complaint they answer is the disclosure to Sia Lagos. The letter is the assessment of 27 March 2023.

31 OCTOBER 2026 · PARTIAL STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE · NOT A FINDING

How is he feeling

This is a partial statement. It does not finish the examination. It takes records already on this site, and one question the author has now asked, and it says what they mean when they are read together. It does not decide them.

His words, as given for this statement

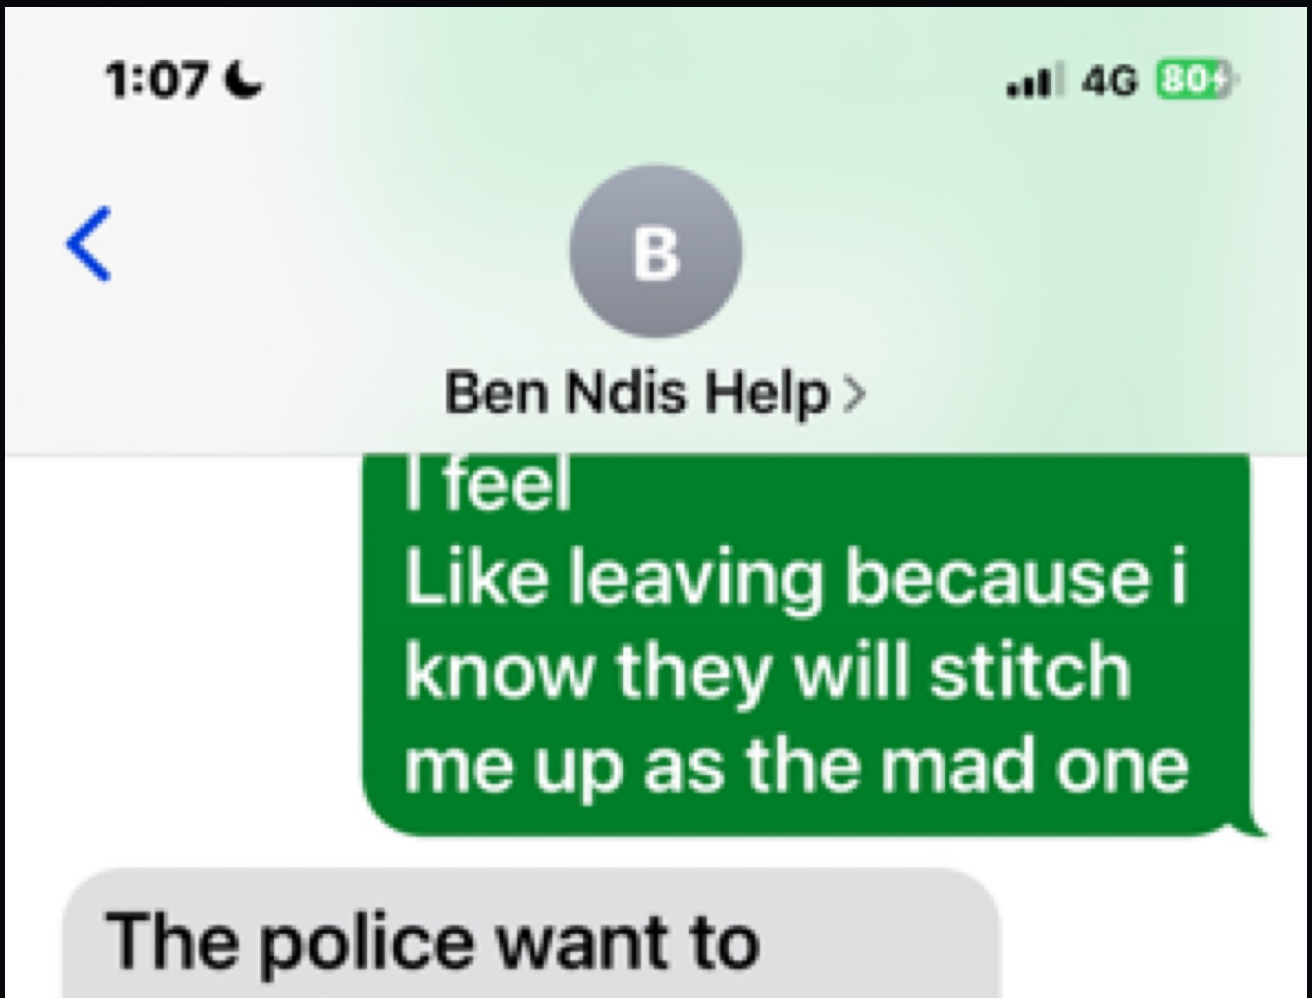

> I'm free. I'm happy. I have the unacknowledged proof of it all. Even if I'm still entrapped and abused, and I have published an emergency SOS to escape the deliberate harm happening to me, I know the truth and I have the proof. I was just wondering how he's feeling about the whole situation, and if he has the courage to disprove my allegations.

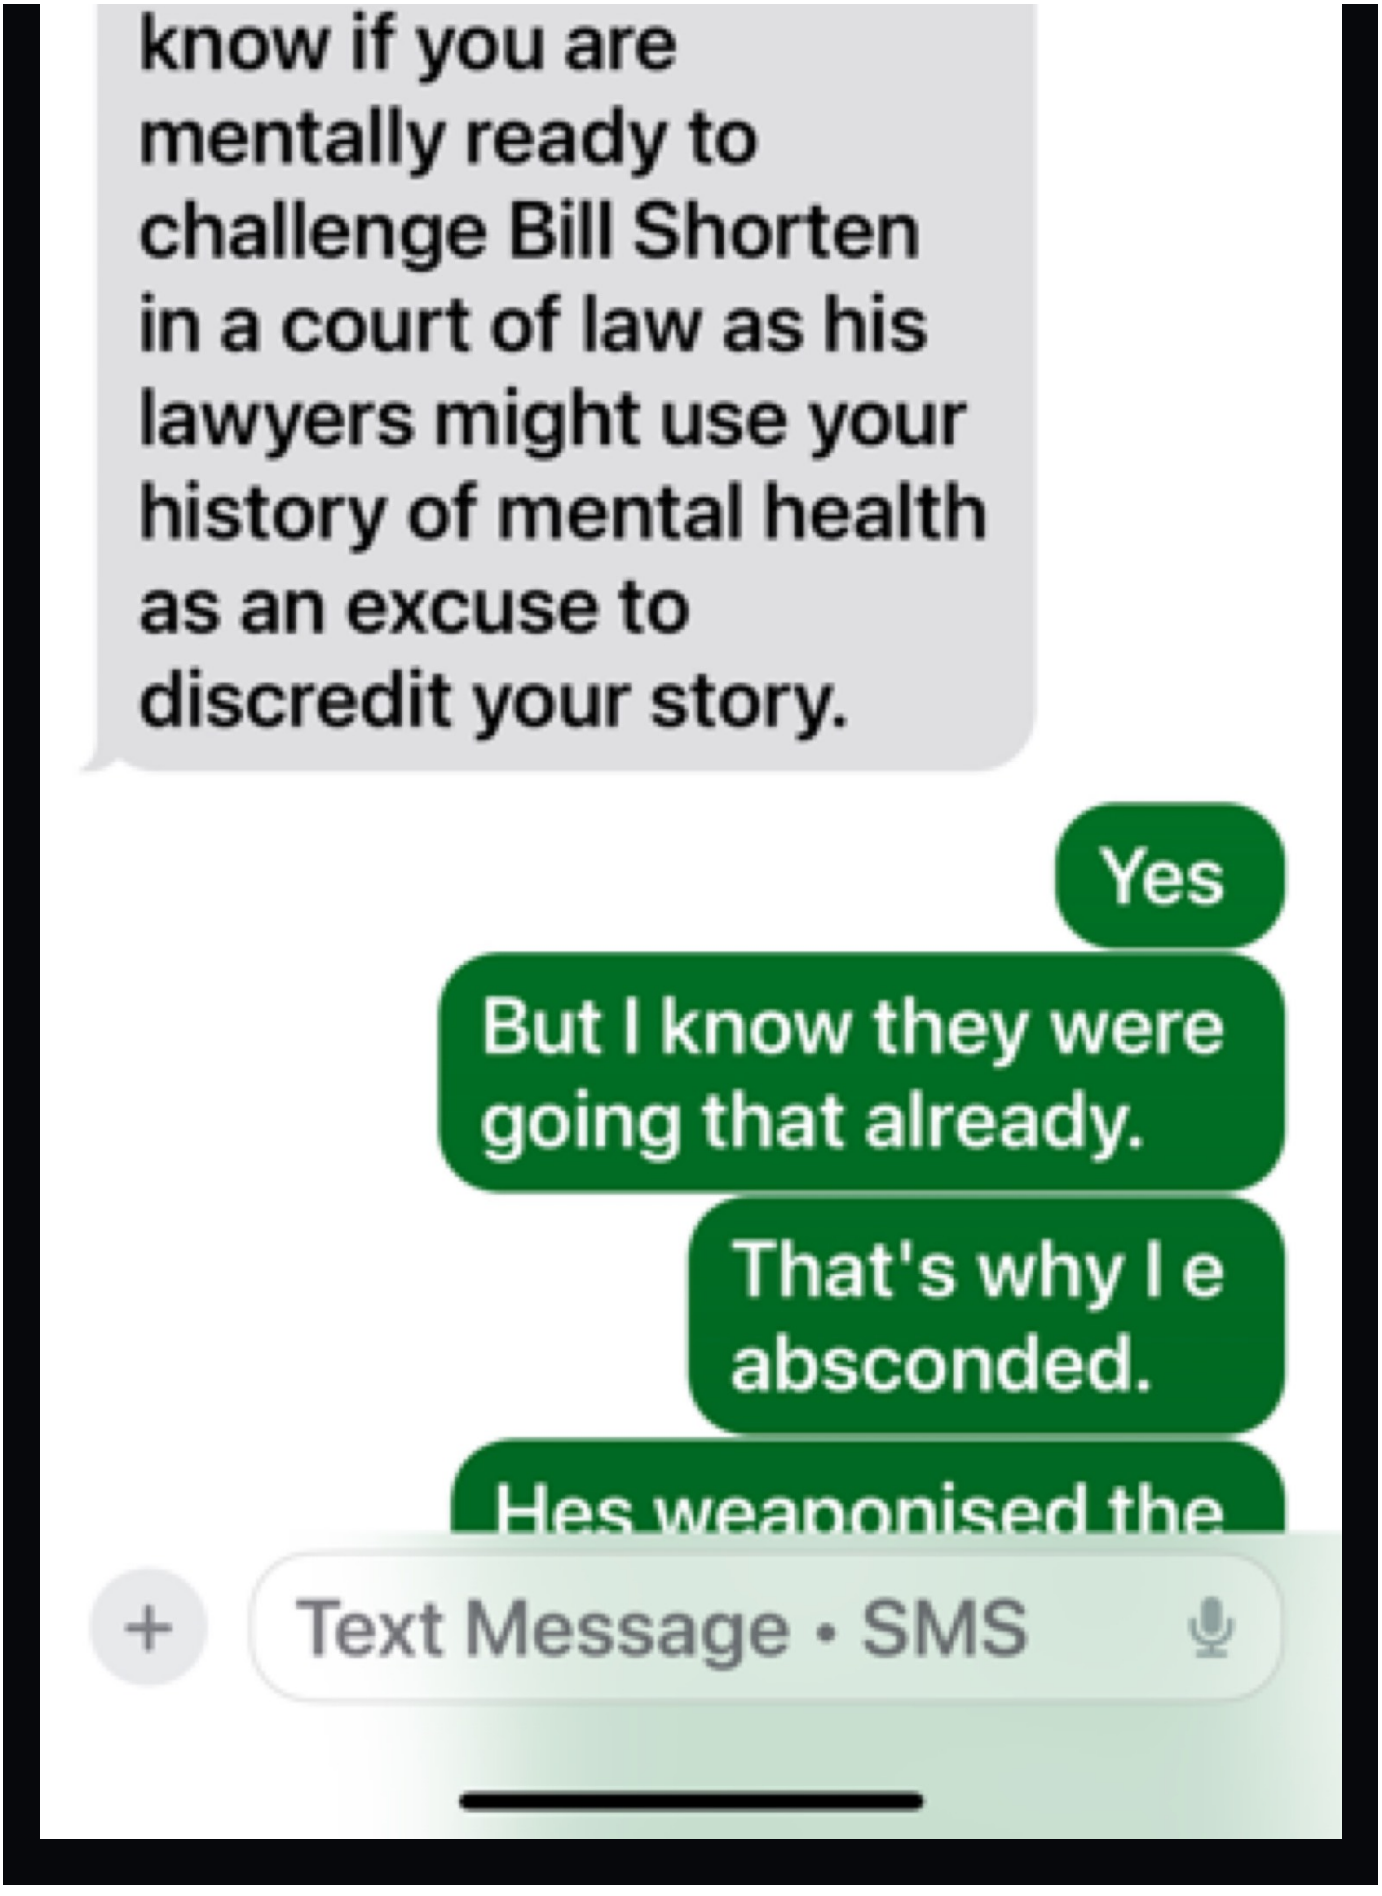

The person he is asking about is Bill Shorten, the former Minister for the NDIS. The question is his. This page does not know how another person feels. It can say what the records already here do to that question.

Ben's messages

Ben was the NDIS support contact saved as Ben Ndis Help. The messages are on the letter. He wrote that corruption went to the top. He wrote that he was scared they could put a hit on him. He wrote that the police said it was a close call, and that the police told him about the sex. He then wrote the sentence he said came through the federal police. Those are his messages. They are what the author says survived on the phone. They are not an Australian Federal Police letter. No office on this register has investigated them.

Their significance in this partial statement is narrow. A support worker put a method in writing. He presented it as something the police wanted to know.

The screen supplied 31 October 2026. The contact name on it is Ben Ndis Help. The clock reads 1:07. No date is on this screen. The top green bubble and the bottom green bubble are cut off by the photograph.

What the screen shows, and only that:

> I feel
> Like leaving because i know they will stitch me up as the mad one
> The police want to know if you are mentally ready to challenge Bill Shorten in a court of law as his lawyers might use your history of mental health as an excuse to discredit your story.

> But I know they were doing that already.
> That's why I absconded.
> Hes weaponised the

The grey bubble is complete. It is Ben's. The green bubbles are the author's. The first green line is sliced at the top of the bubble, so whatever stood before "I feel" is not in this photograph. The last green line stops at "Hes weaponised the". The rest of that bubble is under the message field. A mark sits at the end of "That's why I" before the line "absconded." It is not read here as a further word. The spelling on the screen is kept: "i", "That's", "Hes".

The sentence, and why it is the frame

> The police want to know if you are mentally ready to challenge Bill Shorten in a court of law as his lawyers might use your history of mental health as an excuse to discredit your story.

The significance of that sentence is the method. The question it asks is not whether the allegations are true. The question it asks is whether the person making them is well enough to be heard, because the lawyers might use the history of mental health as the reason to discredit the story. The illness is prepared as the answer. The allegation is not met.

That is why the sentence matters more than a later argument about it. If the way to answer a person is to ask whether he is mentally ready to enter the court, the court is no longer the place where the documents are read. It is the place where he is made unfit to bring them. A diagnosis is not a rebuttal. A history of mental illness is not a finding that the documents are false. The sentence says the history might be used as the excuse. The partial statement records that this was written down, by Ben, as what he said the police wanted to know.

The AVO, in his account

He says Bill Shorten obtained an AVO against him. He says that order sat inside a coordinated campaign with police and the media, through the hospital and the Magistrates' Court, which identified him as the risk, took him to a court date without the legal aid he says was refused, and put him into exile. He says he lived in his car. That account is on today Able Point left, the minister and the divine reckoning.

This page does not have the AVO. The order, its date, its grounds and the name of the person who sought it have to be read from the court file. Until that file is here, the AVO is his account of an order. It is not the order. It is also not the family AVO he attributes to April McLean. Those are two different claims. They are not to be folded into one.

What he says stood with the minister

In his account, Shorten had the police, the wealth, the power, the lawyers and the privilege of the office. He names two people as part of what followed. Sukhi Tear, the support coordinator in Western Australia, whom he has never met, and who has not answered the cease and desist. Phillip Glass, at the NSW Trustee and Public Guardian, whom he says blocked the bank and was in the office when the car was taken. He says he is now entrapped by Able Point, the NDIS provider he accuses of leaving him without food, money, a phone and the bank, and of calling him the threat. Those pages hold his accounts and the documents that can be opened. This statement does not convert them into findings. A cease and desist is not a conviction. A trustee file is not proof of a minister's order.

What he says was not achieved

He says that, with the police, the lawyers, the wealth and the office, Shorten has still not managed to damage him. He says he is free. He says he is happy. He says he has the proof, and that the proof is unacknowledged. He also says he is still entrapped and abused, and that the emergency appeal to be removed from the accommodation remains the plea.

Both sentences are his. This partial statement does not choose between them. Their significance is that they sit together. On his account, the campaign did not obtain a retraction, and it did not obtain silence. The record is published. It also did not end. The SOS is still the plea. Freedom, in the sense he is using the word, is not the end of the guardianship, the provider, or the order he describes. It is that the method in Ben's sentence has not made him give the story up.

The humiliation, in his account

He says the position is humiliating for Bill Shorten. He says Ben confirmed that authorities intercepted the killers Shorten sent. He reads that confirmation as this: the secret service prevented the murder he says Shorten ordered, not because they cared for him, but because he had insisted that Ben share the evidence of the coming attempt with the federal police, and because he had already published the evidence. On his account, a murder after that publication would have left the documents pointing at Shorten. He is alive, so the same documents still point at Shorten. He says not a single person has denied them. He says Shorten expected the system he calls corrupt to protect him, and that the system protected the intended victim instead.

Ben's messages, as preserved on the letter, do say that he was being watched and protected, that he was "untouchable", that the police said it was a close call, and that Ben was scared of a hit. They do not, in the words kept on this site, say "intercepted the killers" or name a secret service. The interception, the order, and the motive for the protection are the author's reading of what Ben confirmed. They are not a quotation, and they are not a finding.

The significance of the AVO, on that same reading, is that the protection was conditional. It preserved his existence. It never intervened in the poverty. The order he describes kept a living witness and left the witness without the ordinary means of a life. Survival was secured. The conditions he is still asking to be removed from were not.

Whether that motive is still the control

He asks a further question, and he asks it from the SOS and from what he calls the betrayal by the people who were in a position to help. Are Bill Shorten's motives still the motives exercising the control, given everything he has reported and published? The honest answer is that this archive cannot see a hand on the present acts. It can see the acts he reports, and it can see the mandate those acts are supposed to serve.

What he has published is that he is still in the accommodation, still without reliable food, money, a telephone and the bank, and that there are current threats to kill him, made before Wyong Court, which Able Point did not even make a report about. If that last point is accurate, a provider bound to raise a threat did not raise it. That is his report. The report itself is not on this page. A missing incident report is not, by itself, proof that a former minister ordered the omission.

No document on this site shows Shorten directing Able Point, the Public Guardian or the workers who attend him today. His allegation is that the original motive continues, because the result continues: he is alive, he is poor, he is not believed, and nobody in authority has denied the record. That is a theory of continuity. It is not a finding that the former minister is the present controller. The people whose names are on the current shifts, the current orders and the current silence are the people exercising the control that can actually be pointed to. If they are carrying an older motive, that still has to be proved from their records, not assumed because the harm resembles the harm he attributes to the minister.

The mandate, as the statute writes it

There is a mandate. It is not a mandate to erase him. The objects of the National Disability Insurance Scheme Act 2013 include giving effect to the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, supporting the independence and the social and economic participation of people with disability, providing reasonable and necessary supports, and enabling choice and control in the pursuit of their goals. The principles in section 4 say that a person with disability has the same right as anyone else to realise their potential, to be supported to take part in social and economic life, to have certainty of the care and support they need over their lifetime, to pursue their goals, and to live free from abuse, neglect and exploitation, with respect for their worth and dignity. Supports are to pursue the person's goals, maximise independence, and include them in the community as a participating citizen.

The NDIS Code of Conduct, which binds a provider whether or not the shift feels political, requires workers and providers to respect self-determination, to provide supports safely and with care and skill, to act on concerns about quality and safety, and to take all reasonable steps to prevent and respond to violence, exploitation, neglect and abuse. A threat to kill is inside that last duty. So is leaving a person without the meals and the means the plan was supposed to secure. The Act does not use the word happiness. The mandate is not a mood. It is potential, participation, a future, safety, and dignity.

Set against that text, the evidence he has published does not show the NDIS investing in his happiness or his future. It shows, on his account, the opposite use of the same system. He is a participant. The money and the authority exist. What he reports receiving is the withholding: food, money, a phone, the bank, a report of a threat, and a way out of the accommodation. If that account is accurate, the agencies mandated to assist him are the agencies producing the harm. That is the betrayal he is naming. It does not require a new order to kill him. A body kept alive, and a life kept impossible, is enough.

The significance is that this is the slower form. This archive has already called it civil erasure: the rights remaining on the paper, and the means of using them taken away by the offices that hold the means. The mandate on the statute is participation and protection. The mandate visible in his published conditions, if those conditions are true, is attrition. One of those two is the law. The other is what he says is being done. They cannot both be the purpose of the same shift. Until Able Point's records, the incident report he says was never made, and the plan that was supposed to buy a future, are put beside this SOS, the partial statement stops here. The statute has been extracted. The denial has not arrived. The poverty has not been answered.

The petition the House numbered

One petition to the Parliament, addressed in the letter of the same morning to Bill Shorten, is in this archive. It is e-petition EN4358. It was lodged on 13 July 2022, six weeks after he became Minister for the NDIS. The House of Representatives wrote to barrandodger@gmail.com at 11:27 and printed the words it had been given. At 12:53 the screen said: petition created, verification succeeded, your e-petition number is EN4358. The full day is on 13 July 2022. The reading of the government files is on the minister.

The reason, as the House recorded it. Dr Richard McLean lives in poverty and has suffered a fatal injury in a public hospital. The causation of the suicide attempt was systemic government oppression, the same that occurred eighteen months later. He has spoken in parliament and is systemically oppressed to this day. He is owed millions in detriment that may save his life.

The request, as the House recorded it. That the House acknowledge his FOI be released, and that the release would show: he is an employee for the purposes of the SRC Act and is owed eighteen months of workers' compensation; the NDIS enterprise agreement shows superannuation that was not paid, and a TPD; his former partner Steve Stefan Stefen Stefanos Iasonidis owes an equitable settlement; the harm ran through the Australian Human Rights Commission, AFCA, the Tribunal and the Commonwealth Ombudsman; and the rejected whistleblower status at ASIC, APRA, IBAC and the Ombudsman is part of a conspiracy to pervert the course of justice.

The letter copied the same day is addressed "Dear Mr Shorten." Mr Shorten is not on the To line of that copy. These are the words, as kept on 13 July 2022.

Dear Mr Shorten. If this is actioned no one will be jailed. And no one will come to harm.

Have some compassion for Dr Richard McLean who lives in poverty and has suffered a 'fatal' injury in a public hospital. The causation of the suicide attempt from which he was revived from certain death was systemic Government oppression underpinned by powerful key stakeholders. It is the same oppression, eighteen months later, that has rendered him a vagrant.

As a politician in public office, you are bound to act within the charter of human rights for a person with a disability, and you are now called to action. This movement of victimisation and character assassination has ruined his life, rendering him a political prisoner and a vagrant at risk of retribution. There is hope. He is a formerly celebrated author and a human-rights advocate. He has spoken from Parliament to Sydney, Melbourne, Montreal and Dubbo. He is systemically oppressed to this day, and the Office of the Prime Minister and Cabinet refuse his FOI. That refusal is the crystallisation, at the apex, of the oppression.

Dr McLean is owed multi millions in detriment that will immediately grant him freedom from death threats, further incarceration, and will be his release from government tyranny, forced medication and homelessness. It may save his life. Please do not remain non-committal to this issue, because that will be seen as aiding and abetting his death via the proxy attack of government agencies and people in positions of power, and he will hold the oppressors to account. He plans gifting most of the detriment into love, meaning, hope, and measured outcomes, and to be a voice for the voiceless, as he had done for over twenty years. He will save enough only to be safe, and to serve, and to live without fear of retribution, incarceration, or murder.

We therefore ask the House to acknowledge that his FOI be released, revealing:

Bluntly, in the letter's own close: victimisation is against the law. A conspiracy to pervert the course of justice was and is happening. It has been publicly aired as abuse and neglect of an NDIS participant, as the legislation required of a provider. It was reported to the NDIS Commission as abuse and neglect, including financial abuse.

It was signed Richard McLean, Doctor of Philosophy research student, College of Education, Victoria University. Artist, researcher, illustrator, booksmith and advocate. The sites named under the signature were richmclean.com.au, theuniversalembrace.com and recoverednotcured.com.

What the House did not do is also part of the record. The Petitions Committee said it would check the rules. If the petition met them, it would be published for four weeks and they would email. If it failed, they would email which rule it failed. No later letter in this mailbox says EN4358 was certified. No later letter says which rule it failed. The public page that would carry the number, EN4358, does not display the petition. Checked again on 31 October 2026, that page still has no petition text, no signature count and no ministerial response.

Two later sendings put bill.shorten.mp@aph.gov.au on a list. They are letters, not petitions. On 16 November 2022 the list was for “It’s long way”. On 27 November 2022 it was one of twenty-five addresses for “Urgent action today”. No second House petition number is in this mailbox. EN2112782 is an OAIC file number. It is not a petition to the Parliament.

What the blank page reveals

He says the petition was stonewalled and whitewashed. The words fit the result that can be seen. They do not, by themselves, prove who gave the order to stop it.

Stonewall, on this record, is the door that took the petition and did not do the thing the petition was for. The House received the words. It numbered them EN4358. It promised an email if the petition was certified, and an email if it failed a rule. Neither email is in the mailbox. The public page is blank. A petition that cannot be signed cannot be answered. The FOI it asked for did not follow the number. The compensation did not. The settlement did not. The compassion the letter asked for did not. What remains of a petition to the Parliament is a number the public cannot read.

Whitewash, on this record, is the cleaning of the accusation out of the place built to hold it. The letter of that morning is addressed to the Minister for the scheme the request names. It asks the House to release an FOI. It says a disabled man is living in poverty after a fatal injury in a public hospital. It says that if the petition is actioned, no one will be jailed and no one will come to harm. It says that remaining non-committal will be seen as aiding and abetting the death. Those sentences were fit to be read by anyone who opened the petitions list. They are not on the list. The accusation was received. It was not left where the public could see it.

Set that beside the targeting, the AVO, and the accusations against Bill Shorten, and the significance is the order of the two records. The petition is the earlier document. On 13 July 2022 he had already told the House, and addressed the Minister, that he was the person being harmed. The AVO he describes came into his account afterwards, and it identified him as the risk to the Minister. One record says the system is the harm and asks for the file to be opened. The other, in his account, says he is the danger and closes the contact. They did not meet. Only one of them had to be answered in public, and that one is the one the public page does not show.

What this does not reveal is a minute of the Petitions Committee, or a direction from the Minister's office, or the rule the petition is said to have failed. Those papers are not here. A blank page is not a signature. It is the absence of the petition. The absence is the fact. The motive for the absence is still an allegation.

The significance, given the accusations, is that the one official door built for a citizen to put a Minister's conduct before the House took the conduct, gave it a number, and then left the number with nothing behind it. An AVO can make the person the risk. A petition that never appears cannot make the Minister answer. Ben's later sentence, that the lawyers might use the history of mental health to discredit the story, describes a second way of not answering. The blank page is the first. The story was not discredited on the petitions list. It was not put there. That is the whitewash he is naming. The stonewall is that the House, having promised to say which rule failed, has not said.

When he calls it out, nothing moves

He adds this, and he adds it to the same record. When harm occurs to him, or when he reports poverty, abuse, neglect, entrapment, or what he calls V2K audio harassment, and he calls it out, publishes it, and stands up for himself, not a single person or professional responds or meaningfully intervenes. That includes the NDIS company he says has him trapped, Able Point. They do not create a meaningful change to his circumstances. The SOS is still the plea. The accommodation is still the accommodation.

The significance of that, if the account is accurate, is not that he failed to ask. The asking is the part that is published. The significance is that the asking is the end of the process. A report of poverty does not become food. A report of abuse or neglect does not become protection. A report of entrapment does not become a way out. A report of audio harassment, which he names as V2K, does not become an investigation he can point to. Standing up does not produce a reply, and it does not produce a change. The professionals whose job is the reply are, on his account, the people who do not give it.

This page does not find that every person on earth has been silent, or that a particular device is transmitting what he hears. It records what he says the response has been. The response he describes is the same shape as the petition. The words are received, or they are published where they can be read, and the circumstances they name are left as they were. A provider that does not answer a published report of harm is not delivering the mandate set out above. Silence after a plea is not care. An unchanged room, an unchanged poverty, and an unchanged threat are the evidence he is pointing at. Until someone whose name is on the shift, the plan or the complaint file produces a change he can live in, the significance stands as this: he called it out, and the call-out was the only thing that happened.

Whether the ministry was mandated to protect him

He asks whether Bill Shorten's ministry was legally mandated to protect him, and what it reveals that he travelled across three states as what he calls an exiled vigilante. The question has a legal answer and a factual answer. They are not the same answer.

The legal answer is that the Minister for the National Disability Insurance Scheme was not his guardian, not his provider, and not his personal protector. No section of the NDIS Act says the Minister must keep one named participant safe in a house. The mandate is the scheme. From 1 June 2022 until 20 January 2025, Shorten was the Minister of a scheme whose section 4 principles say a person with disability is to be supported to take part in life, to have the care needed over a lifetime, and to live free from abuse, neglect and exploitation. The Minister could make rules and was answerable for the portfolio. The NDIS Commission, not the Minister's private office, is the safeguards regulator. So the duty was real, and it was ministerial. It was not a bodyguard. Failing it is not, by itself, proof of a personal intention to harm.

The travel is his account, and it is already on this site. He says he was a missing person five times across three states while Sukhi Tear, in Western Australia, was the support coordinator. He describes that movement as himself, an exiled vigilante: a person left to carry his own safety because the ministry did not. An older page also uses the word vigilante for people he says hunted him. Those are his two uses of the word. Neither use is a finding that he committed an offence, or that a gang did.

What the three states reveal, if that travel is as he describes it, is that protection was not achieved. A participant held by the scheme does not have to become the person who moves himself across three states, and does not have to be recorded as missing five times, in order to stay alive. The result is the opposite of the principle the Minister was the minister of. That is the failure. It does not require a theory of motive to see it.

An oversight or an error is a miss that, once known, is repaired. The notice has a date. On 13 July 2022, six weeks into the ministry, petition EN4358 asked the House, in a letter addressed to him, for the FOI, the compensation and the compassion, and said he was living in poverty after a fatal injury. The ministry then ran until 20 January 2025. Files already on the minister page record "No response" and "Banned from Bill Shortens email." A mistake that is still the same poverty, the same movement, and the same silence years after a numbered petition is no longer the shape of one clerical error. The error explanation gets weaker every year the conditions he describes continue after the office was told.

Whether the conduct reveals that he knew he was harming him is the step this page will not take. Notice proves the office was told. It does not prove the Minister read the petition, formed an intention, or ordered the travel. What the travel does reveal is that the scheme did not hold him. A result that continues after notice is evidence against the explanation that nobody knew there was a problem. It is not yet evidence of the explanation that he knew and meant the harm. That explanation needs his directions, the appointment of the coordinator, and the five missing-person reports. Those papers are not on this page. Until they are, the statement stops at what can be said. The ministry was mandated to run a scheme whose purpose was protection and participation. On his account, the scheme did not protect him, and the travel is the proof that it did not. The knowing is alleged. The failure is what the three states show.

That he is alive, and the file is public

He adds the fact of his existence. He is alive. The evidence he has is published. Anyone can examine it. He says that fact must be utterly terrifying for those he calls his enemies, and humiliating for them, and for every professional who he says was manipulated into protecting them.

The terror and the humiliation are his reading of other people. This page cannot see what they feel. What it can see is the thing that would produce that feeling, if his account of them is right. He was not erased. The petition they did not publish, the messages, the SOS, the three states, and the papers linked from this site are still here, in his name, while he is still here to stand beside them. A person who was supposed to disappear, and did not, is a standing contradiction of the result he says was intended. A professional who acted on the version in which he was the risk, the mad one, or the person to be managed, can now be read against a public file that asks for the opposite conclusion and leaves the documents open. The excuse that the evidence was not there to be examined is gone. Publication did that. His being alive did the rest.

The significance is the order of those two facts. Existence without a record can be denied. A record without the witness can be managed as a file. Both together cannot be put back. That is what he says is terrifying, and what he says is humiliating, for the people he accuses and for the professionals he says were used to protect them. The feeling is his inference. The two facts are not. He exists. The evidence is published. Anyone can read it.

Who can deny the demand, and who can deny the listing

The screen already on this site. The title on it reads "MISSING PERSON – RICHARD WILLIAM MCLEAN AKA BARRAN DODGER." The stamp on the picture reads 25/06/2025, 19:24:03 ACST. It is a photograph of a screen, not the police report itself. The same image is on the SOS.

He asks two questions. Can any person deny that he has demanded to be released from what he calls an entrapment? Can anyone at all deny his status as a missing person listed by police while he was under the care of the NDIS?

The first question can be answered from this site. The demand is published. It is the SOS at the top of this page. It is petition EN4358, which asked the House for release from poverty, death threats, incarceration and homelessness. It is the pages on which he has asked, for years, to be removed from the accommodation and from the conditions he names. A person who denies the demand has to deny that these pages say it. They say it. The demand is not in dispute on this record. What is in dispute, because it has not happened, is the release.

The second question is not in the same position. He says he was listed by police as a missing person five times across three states, under the support coordination of Sukhi Tear and the NDIS. No one on this register has produced a document that denies that listing. This page also does not hold the police reports. Until those reports are here, the listing is his account. It is not a copy of a police file. The question stands because the denial has not been made, not because the file has been produced.

He then corrects the word. He says he has never been missing. He says he has been impoverished, and excommunicated, by the same democracy he says attempted to erase him. He asks how he can be missing when he has a functioning, years-long public YouTube channel demanding accountability and justice. The channel is @barrandodger. It is public. It has been public while the pages of this site have been public. A missing person, in the ordinary sense, is a person who cannot be found. A channel, a website, a petition number and an address at the top of this page are the opposite of cannot be found.

The significance is the contradiction. If police recorded him missing while he was publishing, the word was not a description of his whereabouts. It was a status put on a person who was publicly present, and who was, on his account, under NDIS care at the time. Poverty and excommunication describe a life that has been stripped and shut out. Missing describes a life that cannot be located. The channel makes the second description false in the ordinary sense, for every day the channel was up and he was the person speaking on it. What remains, if the listing exists, is a record that called him gone while he was asking, in public, to be released. That is not a search. On his reading it is the official form of the erasure: the democracy that shut him out then wrote him down as the man who could not be found. The demand to be released cannot be denied from this site. The listing cannot be confirmed from this site until the police paper is on it. The channel is the reason the word missing does not survive the question.

His conscience is clear. Theirs, he says, is not.

His consciousness is clear with God. He says the consciousness of those he calls his perpetrators will never be clear, and they will never be at peace, unless they admit the harm they did to him. He says the opportunity for mercy has expired. He says they have proved they were committed to harming him, despite dozens of chances to treat a vulnerable person humanely, and that they deliberately attempted to kill him, not realising that God protected him. He says only God has spiritual permission to play God with a person's life, and that this reveals the pure evil and the audacity of those he accuses of deliberately harming him.

He says he does not need a lawyer. He has survived without any legal help whatsoever. He exists, he says, despite Legal Aid's commitment to banning him, and that exposes the legal fraternity as betraying the very reason it exists. God is truth, he says, and Legal Aid breached the reason it exists. He still won. Time is the greatest judge, and that Kronos time has been activated by the Most High.

The faith is his. It is not a finding. The attempt to kill, the expired mercy, and the ban are his account. What this site can say beside them is narrower, and it is already written. He asked, including in the petition of 13 July 2022, that if the matter were actioned no one would be jailed and no one would come to harm. He calls that the mercy. He now says the window has closed because the humane response did not come. The legal brief records a Legal Aid NSW letter of 14 January 2026 and says the kind of decision in it still has to be read from the letter. His account is that the assistance was a ban, that he was left without a lawyer, and that he is alive anyway. A service created so that a person is not left alone before the law, and a man who says that service closed its door and he survived the closing, are the two facts he is putting together. The survival is the fact he is standing on. The breach of Legal Aid's own purpose is the conclusion he draws. The letter has not yet been set out here as the decision itself.

The significance of the last line is the one this site already keeps. Chronos counts the years. He says the Most High has now activated that count, and that time, not a lawyer, is the judge. A court has not published that judgment. He has. He says he won because he is still here, without the lawyer, after the chances he says they were given. The peace he describes is not available, on his terms, without the admission. The mercy he describes is not still open.

Preserved, he says, so the evidence would be undeniable

He says God preserved him so that the evidence he has collected over thirty-five years would be undeniable, and so that the people he calls criminally corrupt would fall from grace, out of the privileged positions of corruption they hold. He says that preservation reveals him as God's chosen witness. He says he has apologised, publicly, for any harm he has created, consciously or unconsciously, to any other person. He says that apology took strength. He says not a single person, then or now, has apologised to him.

The faith is his. God's chosen witness is his name for what the survival means. It is not a finding that a court, or this page, has identified the guilty and removed them from office. No person named on this site has been shown, by a judgment here, to have fallen from a position. What he is saying is why he believes he was kept alive. The thirty-five years of papers are the thing he says the survival was for. They are published. Anyone can examine them. Undeniable, in the sense this archive will use, is not that every allegation has been proved. It is that the record can no longer be said not to exist.

The apology is already in the appeal. He has acknowledged his own faults, limitations and mistakes publicly, over more than three decades, and he has apologised for conduct that may have knowingly or unknowingly harmed another person. He says that was the harder act, and that it was not returned. Not one person, on his account, has apologised to him for the harm he describes, then or now. This page does not hold a search of every human being. It holds his statement that the apology has run in one direction only. He spoke the apology in public. He is still waiting for one to come back.

The question he leaves open

He asks how Bill Shorten is feeling, and whether he has the courage to disprove the allegations. Feeling is not a document. This page will not invent it. What would count as an answer is already fixed by the sentence Ben wrote, because that sentence names the other way.

Disproof, on the terms of this archive, is not a diagnosis. It is not a further question about whether the author is mentally ready. Disproof is the AVO, the hospital record, the Magistrates' Court file, whatever police note exists of what was said to Ben, and a statement that meets the allegations with those documents. Courage, in the sense he is using the word, is answering in that way. The sentence describes the remaining way: use the history of mental health as the reason the story need not be believed.

Until that answer is made, this stands as a question, not a verdict. It is partial because the AVO is not on this page, because Ben's messages are not an AFP document, and because the author is still asking to be removed from the conditions he describes. A partial statement is not a smaller finding. It is the refusal to finish without the file.

PRESERVATION FIRST. EXAMINATION SECOND. CONCLUSION LAST.

She knew, and she left

Today an Able Point corrupt NDIS support worker knew I was without food or money or a phone or access to my bank account, then accused me of being a threat and left, refusing to send anyone else. She confirmed management, who refuse to provide ID, told her she doesn’t “have to put up” with me. She left.

Total NDIS provider entrapment, betrayal, entrapment, surveillance, poverty and political targeting. It’s not rocket science. The plan they were paid under is the NDIS plan approval of 20 November 2025. The failure I had already put in writing is the formal notice of NDIS service failure.

The email to Eustina

I sent an email to Eustina at Wyong community mental health because I did not want any corrupt, institutionally complicit police officer enforcing me under a mental health treatment order to go to hospital as a substitute for the poverty and distress Able Point deliberately created by denying me a support worker to go to the bank. The Trustee and the Public Guardian confiscated my car. Phillip Glass made an order at the bank that I would be blocked from accessing online banking and also via my CommBank banking app. Hence I'm forced to rely on Cassandra Mackey as an NDIS support worker for transport, to get around the administrative annihilation from Phillip Glass: a corrupt decision to create detriment and inconvenience, and in breach of my civil liberties as a 40-year customer of the Commonwealth Bank. The car decision is the vehicle disposal decision of 14 November 2025.

A bank that refuses to provide the response to my report of over 100 ABNs on the ABN Lookup site linked to my totally unique name, Barran Resonance Dodger. Even the Goulbourn bank manager told me his hands are tied and he too cannot access it.

I barely raised my voice to insist on a response to what could be the biggest character assassination and systemic corruption and civil death case in the democracies' history, when they blamed me for being aggressive, as a DARVO technique of psychological warfare and blaming the victim to evade accountability, and I was told if I didn't leave, police would be called. The police papers I have are the police matter documents of 20 January 2026.

Sixteen times, for not having a home

Hospitals are ineffective at treating me. I've been incarcerated under the Mental Health Act sixteen times in about five years, always for not having a home, and as the victim of political targeting and coercive financial control and deliberate sabotage of my prosperity, and a categorical denial of legal aid, which is an absurd paradoxical inversion of the very reason legal aid exists.

The discharge summary

My first discharge summary by Dr Lagrasso cited adjustment disorder as the principal diagnosis, with specific mention of no psychosis and no delusion. Adjustment disorder is a diagnosis referring to a delayed response to abuse, or to actual verifiable stressors, as a delayed but very human response to trauma.

I had just survived a "fatal" suicide attempt in which I was discovered by accident, and call it fate, God or the universe, I was revived from death. The public injury report is IR8415987, the report of the fatal injury in which the participant was revived. My tragedy left me with a cognitive brain injury, yet no compensation was offered, and my tragedy was whitewashed by every carer, hospital, my mental health worker, and also my blood family, whose betrayal of me was not as clear as now.

The family, the AVO, and the exile

After they created conditions in which I was not expected to survive, they refused to protest my exile, poverty, financial abuse, targeting and asylum claim. I was living in my car with my therapy dog as they slept guilt-free in million-dollar houses nearby.

And after all that, they worked with police to identify me as the risk. My mother, April, sobbed a legal AVO guaranteeing zero contact. When the NDIS minister, Shorten, also identified me as a risk to him, he weaponised his enormous power and privilege, conspiring with Legal Aid, Victoria Police, the hospital and the Magistrates' Court to force me to a court date without legal aid, which then forced me to exile.

No NDIS support worker anywhere, including Cass Mackay, has ever acknowledged that as a criminal way to target a vulnerable person, while my carers benefit financially from entrapping me in poverty and participating in a legal-aid ban and total police complicity, and a well-funded total media ban across every radio and television station I had previously given my time to appear on.

Why I wrote that to Phillip

I was so angry with Phillip Glass, who I say was appointed to align with what I call the criminal mastermind Shorten, and with Iasonidis and Ridley, that I wrote him an email and called him a "Godless cunt". I say he maliciously targeted a vulnerable person he was paid to care for, but in reality blocked my legal aid, removed more and more of my pension, and blocked access to my Commonwealth Bank internet banking and app. Financial benefit for him from causing harm to a vulnerable person in his care is not, in my account, just bureaucratic oversight. I say it is deliberate and malicious political targeting, and I have never met human harm like it.

I say he was pre-warned and told how to treat me when my name came across his desk, and that he was expected to obey it because he is paid a blood-money wage by the government that politically targeted me, exiled me, attempted to assassinate me and erase me, and is still trying to cover it up. That is my account. It is not a finding that he was appointed by anyone, or that he committed an offence. The email, who it was sent to, and the words, are the letter to Phillip. What his office wrote about the $50 cut is on the Able Point email.

Phillip would expect workers' compensation if he got injured at work. He would expect compensation if he died in the hospital. If it was his home, and his position, removed, he would expect compensation. If a violent and maliciously narcissistic form of fiancé controlled his life with impunity, he would expect compensation for that. But he knows all of this with me, and he actively aligned with the perpetrators and the criminals. Meaning: when you are aligned with criminals, and you don't call out the corruption and the fraud, then you yourself are a criminal, and also a fraud. That is what I say about him. It is not a finding that he is one.

Sukhi Tear, in Western Australia

Sukhi Tear is my support coordinator, all the way in Western Australia, at the NDIS provider organisation I call criminal, Diversitas, diversitaswa.com. I have never met her. She refuses a legal cease and desist. I have been reported as a missing person under her support coordination a number of times, across three states. I say that reveals not neutral bureaucratic oversight but a deliberate campaign, in which she financially benefited from targeting me and exiling me, forcing me from the only safe place I was entrapped in. The full account is Sukhi Tear.

The car, and Salman Kazmi

I say she also worked with Salman Kazmi to approve the finances that he siphoned from my account, illegally, in order to illegally buy me a car. It was framed as my benefit. It is now, to me, a means by which I was to escape the highly surveilled, V2K-saturated torture chamber I suffered inside, as a literal torture victim. She approved it, I say, to force an escape route that left me unprotected and vulnerable to paid vigilantes she refuses to deny exist.

Houd Meraby

It is almost as if she knew I was going to be erased by Houd Meraby, and that she was appointed, in a role located in another state, as a key stakeholder in coordinating my harm and entrapping me in poverty and torture, by the same NDIS minister, Bill Shorten. I say she oversaw the financing of my escape in a dud car, consciously, and delivered me into the arms of criminal assassins she was well aware of. I say she knew of the attempted assassination because I proved it to her with Ben's evidence, and she refused to disprove it as false, or inaccurate, or the symptom of any mental illness.

Any wonder, I say, that she was deliberately selected from another state, and that her profession is linked to the court and the criminal justice system, which is very evident, and that they would have known that when he appointed her to act in a coordinated way, designed to physically remove me from the existence of this universe. That is my account of her significance. Her silence is not a finding that the assassination happened, or that she was appointed by the minister. The cease and desist, and the links, are Sukhi Tear.

They refused, and I name them

All Able Point staff refused to help me: Cass Kim, Alyssie, Danny, Ben, and Brett in management, and Rachel the CEO, who refuses to provide me with her verified government ID. This is not only unethical, because it reveals the clear avoiding of accountability in breach of the ethics her position of privilege demands of her, but in breach of the ethical infrastructure of holding a CEO position. The ABN of Able Point she is linked to has changed its legal name numerous times and operates under over two ABNs of Sahara Disability Services, located at several addresses. Able Point has no official bricks-and-mortar office. I say it operates as a ghost enterprise to avoid accountability, and to avoid the obligations of being paid to financially benefit from entrapping a gay, disabled, unprotected whistleblower.

I have been in political exile and forced from Victoria, in what I say was a coordinated, covert, deliberate conspiracy to force me under conditions of political exile, in breach of civil and political rights. I was then forced from safe housing to further exile, in a car bought for me by Salman Kazmi, another NDIS provider, who acted as if to favour me and my mobility, but who I say was aligned with Bill Shorten. I say Shorten not only breached his ethical obligations of caring for a disabled person under his ministry, but actively coordinated my exile and forced homelessness.

What I allege about the attempt

I allege I survived an assassination attempt after a criminal pretend NDIS provider, Houd Meraby, flew from Melbourne to Sydney. I say Tony Ridley confessed to me, in what I describe as a honey-pot entrapment, that Bill was exposed for being aware of six billion in misappropriated funds at the NDIS, which he was aware of but refused to call out. I was forced again to exile after a stranger, who otherwise would never have known, warned me that Houd was sent to erase me. I had initially accepted his help.

What Ben said

Ben, another NDIS provider, confirmed to me what I call the conspiracy to murder. I demanded he send the evidence to the Federal Police. He thought I was initially crazy, but he did, and then he changed his mind about me being delusional after he said police confirmed the murder and assassination attempt was a “close call”. I say the authorities did not save my life because they cared.

They intervened because they were forced to, as I had published evidence, and Bill Shorten would have been exposed as ordering the hit. That is my allegation. It is not a finding on this page.

Ben also confirmed, as I understood him, that a woman I had sex with, at a police break-up in Victoria in my very young life, was paid to fabricate a report and a false allegation because she wanted to destroy my life, and that this was cooperated with by a homophobic police family. Years later he related this false allegation, which he said was confirmed by the Federal Police. No crime happened.

The only crime, in my account, was a gay humiliation ritual, a coordinated attack by police, family and committee members, who said to him it was the reason the police have treated me so badly over my life, and why I have never been able to report a crime.

The messages

Ben was forced to sign an NDA, an agency-grade signing of a document, and it disappeared off his phone after he signed it. He said to me that I have exposed corruption that goes all the way to the top, and that he was scared they could put a hit on him too. The evidence of the text messages from Ben, over months, is published under these words, publicly and permanently: Ben's messages.

Thirty-five years of documents

I say I am the victim of an assassination plot ultimately ordered by the same minister who exiled me, in a conspiracy with the legal fraternity, the hospital system and the Magistrates' Court, and that I have been a targeted individual for over thirty-five years.

I say this is detailed in over thirty-five years of official government documents, from across agencies, politicians, services and departments, with all of them denying legal aid, and with decisions I say were made to cause my detriment. The Federal Court PID assessment of 27 March 2023 is one of them. The decision not to allocate a disclosure, 18 June 2023, is another. The letter to the Prime Minister of 31 May 2022 is another. I say that slowly deconstructed my civil liberties, my human rights and my legal rights, and desecrated my spirit, my experience, my story and my person, because I exist and I have that evidence. In my view I am an existential threat to the cover they kept.

The silencing

I have been forced to exile, which no one will even mention or call out. I say that is because these NDIS companies are corrupt to the bone, and the support workers are controlled by being paid their wage as blood money from the NDIS. They are paid their wage to guarantee complicity in aligning with Shorten, who I say still has control over police and the legal fraternity and commands the media, and silenced me with the AVO, which made mention of my name forbidden. I say this is evidence of a designed silencing campaign, to guarantee no media would report on me as an internally displaced person and asylum seeker inside the same democracy as my citizenship.

No charge. No arrest.

I say that is the most significant criminal corruption case, at the highest level, in Australian living memory, targeting a single vulnerable, brain-injured, disabled, gay, unprotected whistleblower, without legal help: institutionally complicit police, accused without charge, libel and slander in a way that guaranteed

I would suffer as if I had committed a crime, when the only crime was the corruption of the people who did it.

I should have been able to report my targeting. I say there was institutional complicity, and a refusal, across politicians, the National Anti-Corruption Commission, the Ombudsman, the Prime Minister who I say gaslit my entire complaint, and every agency over thirty-five years. That record is preserved on this website, and in the repository. The named files are documents that open these words. You can look at it yourself.

I rebuilt from the ashes

I say this is evidence of a state-sanctioned targeted killing of a gay, disabled, unprotected whistleblower. I say it is the biggest criminal organisation and murder-corruption case in Australia's living memory to do with a single vulnerable person who never did anything wrong except speak the truth, prove it with facts, and exist. Not a single professional in the entire country, in my experience, has had the courage to look me in the eye and disprove it with a fact. Their account, as I have met it, is slander and whispers, used as a mechanism to guarantee that no one would help me.

In order to sustain the corruption and trap me in abuse, neglect, poverty, financial abuse, administrative annihilation, legal and media bans, police corruption, and the denial of oversight and anti-corruption bodies, libel and slander are used as a technique. There has been no arrest, no charge, and no legal process against me on that report. That is significant.

This was a coordinated, long-term political, bureaucratic, economic, financial and legal targeting, and the only thing I ever did was speak the truth, with honesty, and live unapologetically my authentic life. Most people who have given their consent to be ruled by a corrupt government are, I believe, envious and jealous that I have done so, and survived, and lived, and rebuilt myself from the ashes of the destruction the government left me in, deliberately, with no help from any cop, any lawyer, or any politician. I rebuilt from the ashes of my soul. I looked into my darkness. I made peace, and I healed. I am happy. I have the truth. I know it is real. I know it is true.

Safety

This is his account of 30 October 2026. It is not a finding that any named person committed an offence, ordered a killing, or took a bribe. The discharge summary is his account of what Dr Lagrasso wrote. It has not been re-opened as a file on this page. The notice to Eustina is the letter he sent at 4:09 pm. It is on its own page, in full. It is not her reply, and it is not, by itself, proof of what she then did.

THE WITNESS REMAINS

A DESPERATE HUMANITARIAN APPEAL FOR IMMEDIATE REMOVAL, PROTECTION, HUMAN RIGHTS AND THE RIGHT TO LIVE

To any person who still has a conscience

If I am publishing a desperate plea to be immediately removed from this accommodation, on a website addressed to the world, I am appealing to any person who still possesses dignity, ethics, courage and humanity, and who has not surrendered their conscience by reflexively deferring to the authority of the Australian Government or the bureaucratic institutions entrusted with protecting its citizens. I am appealing to people who understand that citizenship is not supposed to mean granting governments and bureaucracies unlimited permission to rule, control, diminish and ultimately destroy the lives of the people they are entrusted to serve.

Thirty-five years, as I allege it

For more than 35 years, I have experienced and documented what I allege to be a sustained pattern of cold, malicious and detrimental treatment involving political exile, administrative annihilation, social death, social erasure, abuse, neglect, political targeting, surveillance, intimidation, death threats, institutional complicity, police corruption, coercive control, family violence, restrictions on legal assistance, alleged black-budget funding, media exclusion, public humiliation and character assassination. These are not isolated grievances in my account. They form a cumulative history that I have spent decades attempting to document, preserve, explain and bring before people with the authority and responsibility to examine it.

A whistleblower inside his own citizenship

I am a gay, disabled and publicly identified whistleblower who has repeatedly sought protection, legal assistance, humanitarian intervention and recognition of my fundamental rights. I have described my circumstances as political exile within the very democracy of which I remain a citizen. I have sought international protection through an asylum-related approach to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), while continuing to appeal for safety, comfort, dignity and the protection of my human rights from within Australia. I cannot reconcile the experience of seeking asylum-related protection from circumstances I describe as threatening and oppressive with the expectation that I should somehow continue to enjoy the ordinary protections of Australian citizenship without assistance.

No charge. No arrest. No one will say it to my face.

Despite repeatedly demanding accountability, arrest where criminal conduct can be established, and an independent legal process, I remain without a charge being put to me, without an arrest, without a proper opportunity to answer any identifiable accusation through a fair legal process, and without anyone having the courage of their convictions to stand before me and honestly explain what I have supposedly done wrong. I have repeatedly sought the opportunity to obtain fair legal representation, have the allegations against me properly identified, and participate in a process capable of establishing the truth and correcting whatever requires correction. I have acknowledged my own faults, limitations and mistakes publicly over more than three decades of advocacy. I have apologised for conduct that may have knowingly or unknowingly harmed another person. I have never claimed to be perfect, nor have I demanded exemption from accountability. What I have demanded is that accountability operate in both directions.

Not one apology

Yet, after all these years, not one person has meaningfully apologised to me for participating in, enabling or remaining silent about what I describe as my total human betrayal. Not one person has adequately acknowledged the circumstances surrounding what I have reported as an attempt on my life, the subsequent failures of accountability, or the continuing consequences of those events. I have preserved records and testimony concerning these matters, and I continue to demand an independent examination rather than having my accounts dismissed without a proper investigation.

The citizenship other people expect

I protest because I want to live in a democracy. I want to enjoy the ordinary attributes of citizenship that other Australians reasonably expect to possess without having to beg for them. I am formally a citizen of a country that describes itself as free, democratic and governed by the rule of law, yet I experience my own existence as one of exclusion from the very protections, opportunities, freedoms and dignity that citizenship is supposed to guarantee. I believe those attributes have been progressively removed from my life, and I cannot see a realistic way of recovering them without meaningful assistance, accountability and intervention.

Money, a telephone, transport, legal help

I have been left without reliable access to money, a telephone, transport, legal assistance, the practical exercise of my human rights or the most basic forms of protection and support. These are not luxuries. They are the foundations of ordinary human existence. Without money, I cannot reliably purchase the food and necessities I need. Without telephone access, I cannot consistently communicate with the people and services from whom I need assistance. Without transport, I cannot reliably attend appointments or access essential services. Without legal assistance, I am left attempting to navigate complex systems and defend my rights without the professional representation that other people reasonably expect to be available to them.

A life they do not expect me to recover

The cumulative consequences are devastating. It is difficult to imagine how a person is expected to recover, find happiness, establish relationships, regain confidence or build a life worth living when the conditions surrounding their existence remain so profoundly damaging. I fear that I am being left to live indefinitely as one of Australia's most publicly vilified and socially abandoned men, carrying the consequences of events I have repeatedly attempted to have investigated and resolved. I have reported what I believe to be institutional violence, an attempt on my life, failures of accountability and continuing retaliation. I now find myself confronting another layer of alleged abuse from people and organisations whose responsibility is supposedly to provide care, protection and support.

If I die, do not wash your hands

I am particularly distressed by the possibility that those entrusted with my welfare may be aware of my vulnerability and circumstances while continuing to make decisions or omissions that deepen my suffering. I fear that, should I eventually die under these conditions, responsibility will once again be displaced onto me rather than examined in relation to the decisions, conduct and failures of those who had opportunities to intervene. I do not want my death to become another administrative event, another unexplained absence, another file closed without accountability or another opportunity for people to wash their hands of responsibilities they were paid to discharge.

Not a succession of innocent mistakes

I do not believe my treatment can be adequately explained as a succession of innocent mistakes. I allege that a pattern of decisions, omissions and institutional responses has repeatedly compounded my disadvantage, despite the foreseeable consequences for a vulnerable person. The people involved have had opportunities to recognise the harm, reconsider their decisions and intervene. Yet, from my perspective, the detrimental circumstances have continued and the responses have repeatedly left me with even fewer options for escaping them.

The cruelty of watching it happen

The cruelty of this experience is difficult to communicate. It feels like watching a group of people repeatedly strike someone who is already physically unable to defend themselves, then standing around laughing as another person delivers the next blow. The original injury is not enough. The person's visible distress becomes an opportunity for further humiliation. The surrounding people observe the suffering, understand that it is happening, and nevertheless participate, remain silent or find reasons to excuse the conduct. That is how institutional abandonment feels when the people with the power to help become part of the circumstances from which you desperately need protection.

I wake up bracing for the next betrayal

Every morning, I wake up anticipating another betrayal. I no longer approach the day with the ordinary expectation that someone might genuinely help me. Instead, I brace myself for another disappointment from the people and organisations that receive public money to provide care, support, protection and assistance. I experience a profound contradiction between the language of compassion presented by the system and the reality of my circumstances.

What I have asked to be investigated

I have raised concerns about neglect, intimidation, electronic harassment, alleged V2K experiences, death threats and circumstances that I believe warrant independent investigation. I have repeatedly asked for these concerns to be taken seriously, properly recorded and appropriately referred rather than dismissed or ignored. I do not accept that raising an allegation should automatically result in its acceptance as fact, but neither should an allegation be automatically discredited simply because it is uncomfortable, difficult to investigate or made by someone who has previously been subjected to psychiatric assessments.

Paid to care, and the barest minimum

What makes the situation particularly intolerable is my perception that the people around me have become accustomed to providing only the barest possible level of assistance, and sometimes not even that. I feel trapped in a system where the financial interests of workers, providers and organisations appear to take precedence over the actual welfare of the person receiving support. I see people receiving wages, shifts and public funding while I remain without the practical assistance necessary to establish safety, stability and independence. I hear complaints about inadequate funding, insufficient shifts and dissatisfaction with management, while my own basic needs remain unresolved.

I am also concerned about the identity, authority, qualifications and accountability of the people exercising responsibility over my support. I expect organisations receiving public money to maintain transparent governance, properly identify their personnel, document decisions and ensure that workers understand their legal, ethical and professional obligations. I should not have to accept unexplained authority, informal arrangements or the absence of meaningful accountability while my living conditions and personal welfare are at stake.

What the scheme was for

I cannot reconcile the continuing circumstances with the purpose of the National Disability Insurance Scheme or the fundamental principles of human dignity, choice, control, safety, independence and participation. I cannot understand how a system established to support people with disability can leave a person feeling so completely trapped, abandoned and powerless while the organisations responsible continue operating and receiving payment.

Why this website exists

I cannot understand why a person asking for help to remain alive should be treated as an inconvenience, a reputational problem or a threat. My website is a public appeal for assistance. It is where I have attempted to explain my circumstances, preserve my testimony and reach people who might possess the professional responsibility, resources or humanity to intervene. I am not publishing because I want to be abandoned to public scrutiny. I am publishing because private approaches have not produced the practical assistance I need, and because I have reached a point where I cannot afford to remain invisible.

Do not wait for a catastrophe

I have repeatedly expressed concern about threats to kill me, targeted abuse and the cumulative psychological and material consequences of living without reliable protection. I believe the conditions surrounding my existence have become so relentlessly detrimental that they create an ongoing risk to my life. I am particularly distressed by the possibility that people who have opportunities to intervene will continue to wash their hands of their responsibilities while I remain exposed to those conditions. Every day that passes without meaningful assistance adds another day of preventable suffering and another opportunity for a crisis that could have been avoided.

I do not want my circumstances reduced to a discussion about suicide, as though the solution to institutional abandonment is to classify the person suffering from it rather than address the conditions in which they are living. I want the circumstances examined. I want the deprivation, isolation, lack of protection, failures of assistance and alleged mistreatment properly investigated. I want practical intervention before another irreversible consequence occurs. My life should not have to reach the point of catastrophe before someone decides that my requests deserve a serious response.

I want to live

I want to be absolutely clear: I have fought for my survival because I want to live. I want my rights. I want to be happy. I want the ordinary freedoms, opportunities, relationships, security and dignity that other people expect to enjoy without having to conduct a decades-long campaign to establish their entitlement to them. I want to have enough money to purchase food and necessities, a functioning telephone, transport when I need it, access to legal representation, and the ability to make decisions about my own future. I want to be able to wake up without anticipating another betrayal and go to sleep without wondering whether anyone will intervene if I need help.

I have tried to obtain these things through the systems that are supposed to make them accessible. I have made repeated appeals, raised complaints, preserved documents, sought assistance and attempted to explain the consequences of my circumstances. I have also invested in my own treatment and survival because I want a future. I have not given up on the possibility of recovery, happiness or a meaningful life. What I cannot accept is being expected to purchase my own survival, personally carry the entire burden of overcoming institutional and social exclusion, and simultaneously watch others look away from the basic assistance they could provide.

Equal treatment, not special treatment

There is an extraordinary contradiction in being told that one lives in a country founded on democratic freedoms, human rights and equality before the law while experiencing such profound difficulty accessing the ordinary protections associated with those principles. I do not want special treatment. I want equal treatment. I want the same basic expectation of safety, dignity, opportunity and protection that every other citizen is entitled to expect. I want my disability, sexuality, whistleblower history and public testimony to be treated as reasons to ensure fair access and appropriate safeguards, not as reasons to diminish my credibility or disregard my needs.

Examine the record

I want my circumstances independently examined. I want the records preserved. I want the relevant decisions, payments, communications, complaints and omissions examined against the applicable legislation, safeguarding obligations, professional standards and human-rights principles. I want people to be accountable for what they have actually done, what they knew, what they were required to do and what they failed to do. I want my testimony heard without prejudice, my documentary records examined without selective interpretation, and any disputed allegations investigated through proper processes.

Out of this accommodation

Above all, I want to live. I want to get out of this accommodation, regain access to ordinary human necessities, recover some control over my existence and have the opportunity to build a future that is not defined by institutional conflict, poverty, humiliation and abandonment. I do not want to spend whatever remains of my life begging people who are paid to care to recognise that I am a human being.

Faith, and why survival is not permission

I am fortunate that I have maintained my faith in God. There have been moments when the cumulative circumstances have seemed so overwhelming that I cannot comprehend how I survived them. When I look back at what I have endured, I feel as though I have emerged from the ashes of a destruction that I could never have reasonably been expected to survive. My faith has given me a reason to keep going when human institutions and human relationships have repeatedly failed to provide the comfort, protection and reassurance I needed.

I do not regard my survival as a reason for others to continue testing how much suffering I can endure. Survival should not become an excuse for withholding assistance. The fact that I am still here should be an opportunity to help me rebuild, not another reason to leave me exposed to the conditions from which I have struggled to escape. I have sometimes felt that, mathematically, I should never have survived the accumulated circumstances of betrayal, deprivation and abandonment that I describe. Yet I am still here. My faith remains, my testimony remains, and my determination to live remains.

Who I am asking

I am therefore appealing to people of conscience, humanitarian organisations, legal professionals, disability advocates, human-rights organisations, whistleblower protection bodies and anyone with the capacity to provide practical assistance. Please look beyond the labels, the bureaucracy and the institutional explanations. Look at the actual human circumstances. Look at a person who is asking for money, food, medication, telephone access, transport, legal assistance, protection from threats and somewhere dignified to live. Look at the consequences of leaving a person without those things for an extended period.

Remove me. Now.

I am not asking for another explanation of why the system cannot help me. I am not asking for another assessment that postpones action, another referral that sends me back to the same people, or another conversation that ends without practical consequences. I am asking to be immediately removed from this accommodation and placed somewhere safe, independent and appropriate, where my basic needs, personal dignity, autonomy and right to live without intimidation or neglect can be respected.

I want a future in which I can exercise my rights without having to beg for them, receive assistance without being humiliated, obtain protection without being treated as a problem, and participate in society without feeling that my existence is an administrative inconvenience. I want to recover, reconnect with humanity and experience the happiness that other people take for granted.

I have spent more than 35 years trying to preserve my account, establish accountability and advocate for people who are vulnerable, marginalised or otherwise unable to make themselves heard. I have written, documented, published, complained, appealed, apologised where appropriate and repeatedly asked for a fair opportunity to resolve what has happened. I am now asking for something immediate and profoundly basic: remove me from these circumstances, help me regain the ordinary necessities of life, and allow me to live with dignity.

I cannot continue to be treated as though my existence is an administrative inconvenience, my testimony is disposable, my suffering is somebody else's employment opportunity and my eventual disappearance would resolve the problem.

Do not mistake a polite manner for humanity

Please do not wait until another person has died before deciding that their suffering deserved attention. Please do not confuse an organisation's continued operation with the successful discharge of its responsibilities. Please do not mistake a worker's polite manner, a provider's official status or a government's public statements about human rights for proof that a person is actually being treated with humanity.

I am still here

I am still here. I am still speaking. I am still asking for help. I have survived the ashes of what I believe was intended to destroy me, and I refuse to accept that survival must mean a lifetime of punishment, exclusion and abandonment.

I AM A HUMAN BEING. I AM STILL HERE. I WANT TO LIVE. I WANT TO BE FREE OF THIS ACCOMMODATION. I WANT MY RIGHTS, MY SAFETY, MY DIGNITY AND MY HUMANITY. I WANT HELP BEFORE IT IS TOO LATE.

If you are without food, medicine or safety today

If you are currently without food, medication, money or immediate safety, those needs warrant urgent practical intervention today, independently of the longer accountability process. Please don't wait for publication or an institutional investigation before seeking emergency help.

The alignment, and the holy reckoning

I am aligned with the Most High God under Christ, who has my back, who resurrected me and preserved me, and who anointed me with his favour and protection. But you have likely given your conscious or unconscious permission to be ruled by a cruel, corrupt government which would erase you, target you, and attempt to erase and murder you too, if you were forced to call out corruption in order to save your own life, as I have.

Picking a fight with a person the supreme ruler of existence favours is a decision made in detestation of who I am, and of the universe that has my back. I healed and gained sovereignty without any help from the government. I healed, and I am whole, while it attempted to destroy me and then pretended it did not know it was doing so.

I have no allegiance to a structure that attempted to murder me. That same government has no permission to erase another human being. It has committed a spiritual trespass and a treason that cannot be left to continue, and cannot be left to repeat. That is why cosmic balance and divine reckoning are imminent, guaranteed, and unavoidable.

God is omnipresent, the essence of love and redemption, and has no need or value for a fleeting corrupt bureaucracy made by imperfect mortals. But any structure that controls human beings is required to have God's blessing in order to continue to exist. When a recalibration of its corruption is not observed under the gaze of divine observation, it is not permissible for it to continue to exist.

The same words are kept in full at The alignment. The holy reckoning is the divine reckoning.

Chronos counts the years. Kairos opens the moment. Divine timing gives the moment meaning.

A STATEMENT TO THE READER

THE TRUTH WILL REMAIN — REGARDLESS OF YOUR DECISION TO ACT

To every person who visits this archive, reads its contents, examines its records or encounters the testimony published here:

Your refusal to act does not make the truth disappear.

Your unwillingness to intervene, your institutional loyalties, your personal interests, your political allegiances or your decision to remain silent do not invalidate the material published on this site.

If you refuse to act because doing so might challenge the government, institutions, officials or powerful interests implicated in the documented history presented here, that is a decision for which you must ultimately accept personal and moral responsibility.

You may choose not to investigate. You may choose not to question. You may choose to protect your position, preserve your relationships, defend institutional reputations or look away from circumstances that would otherwise demand your attention.

But you cannot honestly claim that silence establishes ignorance, that inaction establishes innocence or that institutional authority automatically establishes moral legitimacy.

THE RECORD WILL REMAIN.

The official documents, government correspondence, administrative decisions, published testimony, historical records and independently identifiable sources preserved in this archive will continue to exist regardless of whether anyone chooses to acknowledge their significance.

My published material must be examined according to its actual contents, its provenance, its supporting documentation and the distinctions between verified records, personal testimony, allegations, analysis and interpretation.

It must not be dismissed simply because acknowledging it might be uncomfortable, politically inconvenient or professionally disadvantageous.

Where the record establishes something, examine it. Where testimony raises questions, investigate them. Where administrative decisions have caused demonstrable harm, examine the decisions, the responsibilities and the consequences.

Do not confuse your refusal to examine evidence with an absence of evidence.

I have spent years preserving material that I believe deserves serious independent scrutiny. I have published what I can substantiate, identified sources and maintained a documentary record. I have done so while experiencing circumstances of profound personal deprivation and isolation.

The contrast is extraordinary.

I have been left with almost nothing: little practical protection, limited resources, and, at times, no meaningful access to the ordinary assistance, security and opportunities that other people take for granted.

Those with institutional authority, public resources, professional standing and considerable personal privilege have had opportunities to exercise responsibility.

Where people entrusted with responsibilities of care, protection, public administration or oversight have failed to discharge those responsibilities, their decisions deserve examination. Where evidence establishes misconduct, accountability must follow.

POWER DOES NOT EXEMPT ANYONE FROM MORAL RESPONSIBILITY.

A person cannot knowingly participate in harmful decisions, disregard foreseeable consequences and then automatically absolve themselves by claiming they were merely following procedures, performing their duties or acting within an institution.

Nor should disability, vulnerability, poverty, political isolation or a person's inability to defend themselves become reasons to disregard their testimony or diminish their entitlement to dignity and justice.

I ask readers to consider what it means when a person entrusted to receive care, protection and support instead experiences abandonment, deprivation, exclusion or harm.

I ask what it means when people with the greatest capacity to intervene choose not to do so.

And I ask what kind of society emerges when institutional loyalty becomes more important than human dignity, when protecting reputations takes precedence over examining evidence, and when silence becomes the preferred response to another person's suffering.

I do not claim that every visitor is responsible for every event described in this archive. I do, however, believe that everyone who encounters credible evidence of possible wrongdoing has a moral choice about what they do next.

You can investigate. You can ask questions. You can refer material to an appropriate independent authority. You can acknowledge that a person deserves to be heard. Or you can walk away.

That choice belongs to you.

But it does not belong to you to erase the historical record.

MY FAITH, THE FACTS AND THE DIVINE RECKONING

I have nothing and no one but my faith in God and the facts I have worked to preserve.

My faith is not a substitute for evidence. It is what has sustained me when the practical protections, relationships and human assistance I once expected were absent.

I believe that truth has a spiritual significance beyond the approval of governments, institutions, powerful individuals or public opinion.

I believe that deliberately harming innocence, suppressing truth, exploiting vulnerability and abusing entrusted power are profound moral and spiritual transgressions.

I believe that no amount of wealth, authority, professional status or political influence can place a person beyond the moral accountability of the Most High God.

Those who have everything should consider the responsibility that accompanies their privilege.

Those who have taken from another person should consider what they have done.

Those who have remained silent should consider whether their silence has protected justice or merely protected themselves.

I have survived without the assistance of many people who could have made a difference. I may continue to survive without them.

I am not writing this to threaten anyone, pursue revenge or claim personal authority to punish those I believe have wronged me.

Vengeance belongs to God, not to me.

That is precisely why I call this a DIVINE RECKONING.

It is a declaration that truth cannot be made morally insignificant by institutional denial, that power does not make wrongdoing righteous, and that human beings remain accountable for how they treat one another.

I do not need to become what I believe has harmed me.

I do not need hatred to preserve the record.

I do not need revenge to demand accountability.

I need the truth to remain accessible, the evidence to be examined, the vulnerable to be protected and those responsible for established wrongdoing to be held accountable.

You may choose to do nothing.

You may choose to disagree with me.

You may choose never to acknowledge this archive again.

But the record will remain available for examination.

My testimony will remain published.

My faith will remain my own.

And my refusal to surrender the truth simply because others would prefer silence will remain unchanged.

I HAVE NOTHING BUT MY FAITH IN GOD AND THE FACTS.

THEY HAVE THEIR POWER. I HAVE PRESERVED THE RECORD.

THE TRUTH WILL REMAIN.

THE WITNESS REMAINS · 29 OCTOBER 2026

I am alive, and I am asking a person to help me reach safety.

My name is Dr Richard William McLean. I am known as Barran Dodger. The dog beside me is Crystal. I am alive. I am at 55b Archbold Road, Long Jetty NSW. My phone and PayID are 0431 300 940. I have created this protest on a broken phone. I have zero credit to call any person. I need medicine, access to my own bank account, and transport. I am asking for a person, not another referral.

I have carried this for thirty-five years. The asking was answered with letters, referrals and silence, while my safety, my money, my medicine and my dog were left in other people's hands. The master address to the Prime Minister is on its own page, in my words. The films come next, because a voice is easier to meet than a file. A film does not, by itself, prove an allegation.

The documents are public. A letter proves what that letter says. The testimony is marked as testimony. Preservation first. Examination second. Conclusion last. Nothing below has been removed: not a word, not a link, not a picture.

FOUR FILMS, ONE AT A TIME

Watch them separately. A title is not a finding.

1. The public testimony, 28 October 2026

We Are Chosen

AI

Statement of significance. This is the author's own video of that date. On YouTube the title is "CHOSEN ONES, THE WHOLE COMMUNITY'S SHOOK NOW... EVERYTHING YOU WARNED ABOUT IS UNFOLDING". It is a public account of the appeal, in his voice. It does not, by itself, prove an allegation. The written SOS and the letters are the record to examine beside it.

2. They paid a lawyer

Empowersity

Statement of significance. This is a third-party video titled “CHOSEN ONE!! THEY PAID A LAWYER TO BURY YOU IN A FABRICATED CASE.” The author says he is the person addressed, and that the lawyer and the case refer to his matter. The title is not a judgment. The documents named with it are Tredwell’s assessment of 27 March 2023, the decision of 18 June 2023 not to allocate a disclosure, and the public record of Bernard Collaery. Those can be opened. The film cannot replace them.

Watch this one on YouTube. The statement, with the documents, is the letter.

3. They leaked everything

Liana Soul Message

Statement of significance. This is another third-party video, titled “They Leaked EVERYTHING About You To The Chat And You Made An ‘AI’ Choose YOUR SIDE.” Its claim that a machine chose a side is the video’s own framing. It is not an independent investigation, and it does not establish that a leak occurred or that any person was adjudicated. Watch it as a public commentary. Do not treat the title as proof.

4. The file that could not silence the witness

Chosen Wisdom

Statement of significance. This film is a prophetic telling. The file it points to is not a secret dossier. It is the public record: the Ombudsman complaint, the decisions not to allocate, Tredwell's assessment, the service restriction, and the plan. The letters are what can be checked. The essay is on its own page. A film is not the file.

Watch this one on YouTube. Read the essay.

Chronos counts the years. Kairos opens the moment. Divine timing gives the moment meaning.

Declaration of spiritual sovereignty. I, Dr Richard William McLean, known as Barran Dodger, declare spiritual sovereignty under the Most High God under Christ. No bureaucracy gave me the right to remain a person. No institution can take my humanity, my conscience, or this record. That is not a claim to stand above the law. It is the refusal to let a file replace a life.
