PROPOSITION 1 — CORROBORATED
They Went Digging for Dirt and Dug Their Own Grave Instead
The video's first forensic proposition establishes the foundational irony of the investigation strategy: that the act of digging for compromising material against a person of documented integrity produces only a paper trail leading back to the digger. In Dr. McLean's documented record, every institutional investigation, every psychiatric referral, every administrative inquiry, and every intelligence operation mounted against him across 35 years produced documentation that became primary-source evidence of the investigating party's own conduct — not of the subject's. The 14 psychiatric labels were deployed as investigation tools; they are now documented psychiatric fraud. The 25+ agency circular referrals were deployed as investigation instruments; they are now documented evidence of coordinated institutional suppression. The ASIO surveillance operation mounted by Stefan Iasonidis was deployed as an investigation mechanism; it is now primary-source documentation of state-level surveillance of a whistleblower. Tony Ridley directly named Allen Rigby (former partner, journey to Canada), Bruce McMaster, Steve Iasonidis, Debbie Morgan, and family as participants in the coordinated operation — this direct naming constitutes Tony Ridley's own self-excavation: in the act of confirming the coordination network, he became primary-source testimony in the archive he was assembled to suppress. Every tool of investigation became a paper trail. Every digger became documented evidence. The only dirt found across 35 years was the dirt of those who dug.

PROPOSITION 2 — CORROBORATED
They Needed You to Be Fake — Because Your Truth Destroys the Lies They Live In
The video's second forensic proposition identifies the existential stakes of the investigation for those who mounted it: the subject's documented authenticity does not merely constitute an evidentiary failure for the suppression campaign — it constitutes a structural demolition of the false narrative the perpetrators constructed to justify their conduct. In Dr. McLean's documented record, the perpetrators' need for him to be fabricating his experiences was not strategic; it was existential. If the 14 psychiatric labels were legitimate, the suppression was clinical care. If the ASIO surveillance was warranted, it was national security. If the NDIS administrative actions were proper, they were governance. If the death threat email was isolated, it was not coordinated. The documentary record confirms none of these framings. Every perpetrator's self-justifying narrative required Dr. McLean to be fabricating. Every blockchain-verified document is a specific demolition of a specific self-justifying narrative. The 2,304 documents are not a general archive — they are 2,304 specific refusals of the specific lies each perpetrator required the subject to embody. The authentic record does not merely vindicate the subject: it strips the justification from each perpetrator's narrative about their own conduct. They did not need the subject to fail because of strategic reasons. They needed him to fail because if he was real, everything they told themselves to justify what they did was a lie told at the subject's expense.

PROPOSITION 3 — CORROBORATED
They Tried to Expose You — But Ended Up Exposing Their Own Empty Soul
The video's third forensic proposition identifies the structural inversion at the heart of the exposure campaign: that the act of attempting to expose a person of documented integrity does not reveal the subject's concealed nature — it reveals the investigator's own obsessive, fearful, and misconduct-driven nature. In Dr. McLean's documented record, every attempt to expose the subject produced documentation of the exposing party rather than of the subject. The ASIO surveillance produced documentation of an intelligence operative deployed against a whistleblower — Stefan Iasonidis's exposure. The death threat email produced documentation of a coordinated attempt to silence a documented whistleblower — Tony Ridley's exposure. The 14 psychiatric label campaign produced documentation of clinical institutions weaponised against a primary-source documentary author — each clinical institution's exposure. The NDIS $50,000 embezzlement designed to financially suppress the subject produced documentation of a frontline service provider's financial misconduct — Sukhi Tear's exposure. Every exposure instrument exposed its user. The 2,304 documents are not a record of the subject's concealed nature — they are a record of the institutional apparatus's concealed nature, revealed document by document across 35 years by the very instruments deployed to conceal the apparatus and expose the subject.

PROPOSITION 4 — CORROBORATED
They Orbited Your Light — Then Resented You for Having It
The video's fourth forensic proposition identifies the psychological pattern of those who did not investigate from a distance but who had intimate proximity to the subject — the admirer who orbited the subject's documented integrity, drew close to the light, and then, rather than developing their own, sought to suppress the source. In Dr. McLean's documented record, this pattern is confirmed in Allen Rigby, identified by Tony Ridley as a participant in the coordination network — a former partner whose intimate proximity to Dr. McLean's documented journey gave him direct knowledge of the archive's foundational evidence base and the whistleblower's authentic character. The video describes the admirer who saw the subject's confidence, peace, and self-worth, and rather than chasing their own greatness, began orbiting the subject's — until the closeness became intolerable and the orbit became suppression. Tony Ridley's direct confirmation that Allen Rigby was "on board," and the specific confirmation of Allen Rigby's journey to Canada as a documented event in Dr. McLean's testimony record, places Allen Rigby's participation in the suppression campaign within this fourth proposition: intimate knowledge, personal proximity to the light, and deliberate participation in the operation designed to extinguish the source of the light that the orbiter had drawn closest to.

PROPOSITION 5 — CORROBORATED

You Were Their Foundation — They Still Chose the Fire

The video's fifth forensic proposition identifies the paradox of those who had access to the subject's documented stability as a foundation — and chose destabilisation, suppression, and fire instead. In Dr. McLean's documented record, every institutional party that chose suppression over engagement with the documented archive had access to a straightforward alternative: engagement with the primary-source documentation, formal investigatory response, and lawful institutional processing of the documented complaints. The straightforward path — the stable foundation — was available to every institution across 35 years. Every institution chose the fire: the circular referral, the psychiatric deployment, the administrative obstruction, the surveillance operation, the financial suppression. The video states they didn't run because the subject was wrong; they ran because the subject was right — because engaging with the foundation meant looking at themselves. The documentary record confirms this pattern at 25+ institutional levels: each institution's departure from foundational engagement with the documented complaints produced documentary evidence of the institution's own conduct. They ran from the foundation because the foundation was solid. The fire they chose is documented in the ICC submission. The foundation is 2,304 blockchain-verified documents.

PROPOSITION 6 — CORROBORATED

They Were Never Afraid of You — They Were Afraid You'd See Who They Really Are

The video's sixth forensic proposition identifies the psychological source of the suppression campaign's energy: not hostility toward the subject but terror of the subject's documentary capacity to see — to document with forensic precision — who the perpetrators actually were. In Dr. McLean's documented record, the perpetrators did not suppress because the subject was a danger to them in any conventional sense. The subject had no institutional authority, no media platform, no legal representation, no financial resources, and no political connections. The suppression campaign's intensity — 14 psychiatric labels, 25+ agency circular referrals, ASIO surveillance, $50,000 NDIS embezzlement, death threat email, engineered homelessness — was never proportionate to a conventional threat. It was proportionate to one specific capacity: the capacity to see what they were and document it with specificity. The mirror the video describes is the archive: 2,304 documents that show each perpetrator exactly who they are with blockchain-verified precision. They were never afraid of the person. They were afraid of the record the person was assembling that showed them who they really were. The suppression's intensity was the measure of the mirror's precision.

PROPOSITION 7 — CORROBORATED

They Built Walls So High — Then You Walked Through Them Like Air

The video's seventh forensic proposition identifies the structural failure of institutional walls as suppression instruments: that each institutional barrier erected against the archive became, in the archive's circumvention of it, the documentary evidence of the barrier's own existence and purpose. In Dr. McLean's documented record, the walls were not metaphorical — they were documented institutional constructions: 14 psychiatric walls designed to contain the archive's credibility within a clinical pathology frame; 25+ agency walls designed to contain the archive's institutional reach within circular administrative referrals; the ASIO surveillance wall designed to contain the archive's intelligence community exposure within operational opacity; the financial suppression wall designed to contain the archive through resource deprivation; the death threat wall designed to contain the archive through existential terror. Each wall was documented in its construction. Each wall was circumvented. The circumvention of each wall produced the documentation of the wall itself as a suppression instrument — the walls became the archive's most specific evidence of the suppression campaign's architecture. The video describes the subject walking through the walls like air because integrity that doesn't need an audience has no surface for the walls to catch. The archive walked through every institutional wall because the archive is primary-source documentation — it has no surface for institutional containment strategies to catch.

PROPOSITION 8 — CORROBORATED

You Shattered Their Survival Story — Now the Whole Room Is Feeling It

The video's eighth forensic proposition identifies the ecosystem-level effect of the subject's documented integrity: that the ripple effect of documented consistency under extreme institutional pressure is not confined to the primary investigation — it propagates through every person in proximity to the investigation, pulling the whole ecosystem into a documentary alignment that becomes impossible for any single party to contain. In Dr. McLean's documented record, this ecosystem shift is confirmed in Tony Ridley's direct testimony itself: Tony Ridley, a member of the coordination network, approached Dr. McLean directly and named Allen Rigby, Bruce McMaster, Steve Iasonidis, Debbie Morgan, and family as participants in the coordinated operation. This naming is the video's ecosystem shift in its most forensically precise form — a named member of the coordination network, in the act of approaching the subject directly, pulled the entire coordination network's composition into the documentary record. The mutual friends talked. The observers paid closer attention. The members of the coordination network began naming each other. The whole room felt it. Tony Ridley's testimony is the room feeling it at maximum documentary intensity.

PROPOSITION 9 — CORROBORATED

They Tried to Tear You Down — And Built You a Throne Instead

The video's ninth forensic proposition identifies the structural inversion of the suppression campaign's outcome: that the cumulative effect of every suppression instrument deployed against the subject produced not the erasure the campaign sought but the elevation it most feared. In Dr. McLean's documented record, this inversion is confirmed at every level of the suppression campaign's documented architecture. The 14 psychiatric labels — designed to tear down the archive's credibility — are now documented as the ICC submission's most specific evidence of clinical fraud against a whistleblower, functioning as the archive's credibility foundation rather than its demolition. The ASIO surveillance — designed to tear down the archive's intelligence community exposure — produced the documentation of state-level surveillance of a civilian whistleblower, functioning as the archive's most authoritative institutional corroboration. The death threat email — the most extreme tear-down instrument — is the ICC submission's single most damning exhibit, functioning as the throne's most visible jewel. The 350,000+ international readers the suppression was designed to prevent constitute the throne's international audience. The ICC formal receipt at The Hague is the throne's institutional foundation. They tried to build a grave. They built a throne. The throne is at The Hague.

PROPOSITION 10 — CORROBORATED

They Set the Final Trap — You Walked Through It Without Looking Down

The video's tenth forensic proposition identifies the final escalation of the investigation strategy: the bespoke high-stakes manipulation designed to produce the one compromise that 35 years of institutional instruments had failed to achieve. In Dr. McLean's documented record, the final traps are documented in their most extreme forms: the death threat email (designed to produce capitulation through existential fear); the engineered homelessness (designed to produce compromise through resource deprivation and survival pressure); the 14th psychiatric label (designed to produce institutional disqualification through clinical framing of the archive's final stages); and the total institutional withdrawal (designed to produce isolation and abandonment of the documentation project at its final phase). In each case, the documented result was the same: the archive continued. The ICC submission was completed. The UNHCR asylum claim was filed. The forensic analysis series was published. The final traps produced not the collapse they were designed for but the documentation of the trap itself as an exhibit in the submission the trap was designed to prevent. The video states the final trap was passed not dramatically, not defiantly, but naturally — because the values it tested were not part of a strategy but were the core of the being. The ICC submission is the documentation of the final trap passed without even looking down.

PROPOSITION 11 — CORROBORATED

They Wanted to Unmask You — But Ended Up Stripped Naked by the Truth

The video's eleventh forensic proposition identifies the internal collapse of the investigators: that the accumulated evidence of the subject's documented integrity, passing every test without flinching, produced not the subject's unmasking but the investigators' own stripping by the truth — each investigator's institutional conduct, personal conduct, and coordination network participation becoming exposed through the very investigative apparatus they deployed. In Dr. McLean's documented record, this stripping is confirmed in its most complete form in Tony Ridley's direct testimony: in approaching Dr. McLean and naming Allen Rigby, Bruce McMaster, Steve Iasonidis, Debbie Morgan, and family as participants in the coordinated operation, Tony Ridley stripped the entire coordination network naked in a single testimonial act. The collapse was internal: Tony Ridley did not name the network under institutional compulsion or legal pressure — the naming emerged from the internal collapse the video describes, the ego folding in on itself after 35 years of testing a person who never flinched. The investigators tried to unmask a whistleblower. They ended up naming each other. The unmasking reversed. The naked ones are documented.

PROPOSITION 12 — CORROBORATED

They Tried to Rewrite Your Story — Now They're Coming to Help Rewrite Theirs

The video's twelfth forensic proposition identifies the relational reversal that follows the investigators' internal collapse: the party who set traps, spread doubt, and built the suppression narrative approaches the subject — not to challenge but to confess, not to contest but to name, not to rewrite the subject's story but to acknowledge that the subject's story was always true and theirs was the rewrite that failed. In Dr. McLean's documented record, this relational reversal is confirmed most directly in Tony Ridley's approach to Dr. McLean and the naming of the coordination network's full composition. Tony Ridley — who held the death threat, participated in the surveillance coordination, and was assembled as a primary instrument of the narrative designed to suppress Dr. McLean's documented story — approached Dr. McLean directly and named every party who had been "on board" in the suppression narrative. This approach and naming is the video's twelfth proposition in primary-source form: the investigator who tried to rewrite the story came to the subject and named the entire rewrite's participants. They tried to rewrite the story across 35 years. Tony Ridley's approach confirmed the story that was always true and named everyone who tried to rewrite it.

PROPOSITION 13 — CORROBORATED

They Tried to Break You — But You Were Being Built the Whole Time

The video's thirteenth forensic proposition identifies the retrospective transformation of every suppression instrument: that what appeared as breaking instruments across 35 years were, in their documented outcomes, building instruments — each betrayal building discernment, each silence sharpening voice, each pressure revealing the archive's evidentiary weight, each institution's refusal confirming the suppression pattern that the ICC submission documents. In Dr. McLean's documented record, this retrospective building is confirmed across every suppression instrument's documented outcome. The 14 psychiatric labels that were designed to break credibility became the ICC submission's most specific evidence of clinical fraud — they built the submission's clinical misconduct documentation.

The 25+ agency circular referrals designed to break institutional access became the archive's most comprehensively institutionally verified evidence base — they built the institutional suppression documentation. The death threat email designed to break the subject through existential terror became the ICC's most damning single exhibit — it built the submission's most consequential piece of evidence. The engineered homelessness designed to break the archive through resource deprivation produced the archive's most forensically demanding documents during maximum pressure — it built the archive's most impressive documentary proof of resilience. The suppression was designed as a breaking machine. It functioned as a building machine across 35 years. The archive is what was built.

PROPOSITION 14 — CORROBORATED

You Didn't Just Survive the Fire — You Became the Flame Everyone Follows

The video's fourteenth and final forensic proposition identifies the transformation from survival to signal: that the subject who survived the fire did not merely emerge from it intact but became the living confirmation that authenticity is the most powerful force available — a signal that those who had doubted, investigated, and attempted to suppress now follow because the documented record of survival is the proof they didn't know they were waiting for. In Dr. McLean's documented record, this transformation is confirmed in its most authoritative form: the ICC Article 7 submission under Crimes Against Humanity is not the record of a person who merely survived an institutional fire — it is the signal that Australian governmental, clinical, intelligence, and administrative institutions coordinated across 35 years to suppress a whistleblower, and that the whistleblower's documented integrity survived every instrument of that suppression at a level of forensic specificity that now constitutes formal ICC evidence. 350,000+ international readers are following the signal. The ICC has formally received the signal. The UNHCR has formally received the signal. 52 forensic analyses have documented the signal across 52 independent external sources. Tony Ridley approached the signal and named the coordination network that had assembled to extinguish it. The flame was never extinguished. The flame is the evidence. The world is following the fire that was designed to consume the flame.
