

DR RICHARD WILLIAM McLEAN · BARRAN DODGER

When the record is the indictment

An evidentiary examination of institutional conduct concerning Dr Richard William McLeanFinding aid. Not a court. Not a verdict. A filename is not a finding.9 October 2026 · Evidence-linked edition · No misconduct finding is made

Abstract

This paper examines, in the ordinary and not the criminal-law sense, the documentary record that Dr Richard William McLean has placed in public GitHub repositories concerning the National Disability Insurance Scheme, policing and police-oversight bodies, ombudsmen, integrity agencies, tribunals, legal assistance, guardianship administration, and public communication. It is written to the author's instruction that the structure be prosecutorial in force and evidentiary in method. That instruction is accepted only with the constraint the author also set: a document's presence on GitHub does not prove the misconduct alleged in its title.

The paper therefore distinguishes four statuses. A catalogue fact is a statement that a named repository file or index row exists. A record fact is a statement taken from text extracted in this examination from a file that was opened. An author allegation is a proposition advanced by Dr McLean, including in filenames, cover sheets, and audio titles. An inference is a conclusion drawn from more than one record, and is labelled as such. Where a file was not opened, this paper does not quote it and does not treat its filename as proof of its contents.

On 9 October 2026 the presentation repository wezzo72/Barrandodger described itself as a website front for an existing corpus, not a replacement of the evidence stores. Its README, recounted on 4 October 2026, stated that the tree held 5,583 files, including 2,840 PDFs and 1,813 HTML files, and that docs/official-drive/ held 95 PDFs. The same README stated: "A filename is not a finding." The Phase 2 inventory of 19 September 2026 said the Backup documents folder then held 531 PDFs, and that SHA-256 of those PDF bytes had not been calculated in that phase. The allegation matrix of the same presentation site recorded 150 items and the finding "NONE DECLARED."

Four public PDFs named in the catalogue were opened for this edition. One, the Law Enforcement Conduct Commission letter of 19 November 2025, reference CASE202512395/13KM, is a clean official letter and is quoted. One Victorian Ombudsman file contains both an official section 29A decision and the author's own request language. Two other files catalogued as official letters opened, in whole or in part, behind an author-publication wrapper. Those mismatches are themselves part of the record. They are not used to upgrade any allegation into a finding.

1. The question this paper is willing to ask

The author asked that the examination put a single question to the institutions that held authority while he says he was losing the practical ability to protect himself, obtain representation, give meaningful consent, or secure an effective response:

When a person repeatedly asks for assistance, supplies documentary evidence, identifies the consequences of institutional decisions, seeks representation, seeks protection and attempts to exercise or recover control over decisions affecting his life, what responsibility remains with the institutions that possess the authority to act when they repeatedly do not?

That question is accepted as the organising question. It is not accepted as a conclusion. Responsibility, in law and in administration, is not established by the fact that a person asked. It is established, if at all, by showing what was placed before a body, what authority that body had, what it did, what it refused, and what followed. This paper sets out the public material from which that demonstration can begin. It does not complete it across 2,840 PDFs.

The author also asked that the paper be approximately 50,000 words, carry full APA references, be exported as a PDF, be timestamped on a blockchain, and be uploaded to the GitHub repository. The PDF, the hash, the OpenTimestamps stamp, and the upload are done. The length is not inflated to 50,000 words. A 50,000-word text that repeated the same ten questions against unread PDF interiors would breach the evidence rule the author set in the same instruction. Word count is reported in the colophon from the text of this edition, not asserted in advance.

2. Method

The repositories inspected through the authenticated GitHub account `wezzo72`, and through the public web, were:

- <https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger>
- <https://github.com/wezzo72/Backup>
- <https://github.com/wezzo72/Myaidrive> (identified as a public repository; not file-audited in this edition)
- <https://github.com/drbarrandodger/barran-dodger-archive> (named in the Barrandodger README as the primary archive; not tree-counted in this edition)

The following index files in `wezzo72/Barrandodger` were retrieved and read as text: `README.md`; `data/INVENTORY.md`; `data/institutions.json`; `data/people.json`; `data/timeline.json`; `data/government-evidence.json`; `data/organisations.json`; `data/allegation-matrix.json`; `data/events.json`; `data/statistics.json`; `data/media.json`; `data/documents.json`; and `data/laws.json`.

Those indexes are the archive's own finding aids. Several of them contain an express caution. `institutions.json` says each row is an organisation named on a public filename and that a possible integrity issue is not asserted. `organisations.json` says listing is not a finding about those bodies. `timeline.json` says a filename date is not a verified event date and that the list is not a complete 35-year chronology. `people.json` seeds one person, the archive subject, and says third parties named only in filenames were not added as confirmed actors. This paper follows those cautions. It does not promote a filename into an actor finding.

Four PDFs were downloaded from `wezzo72/Backup` on 9 October 2026 and text-extracted:

1. `client/public/documents/government-evidence/Government Evidence/2025-11-19_LECC_Out_Of_Jurisdiction.pdf` 2.
2. `client/public/documents/government-evidence/Government Evidence/06_2021-11-18_IBAC_PID_Rejection_400008R.pdf` 3.
3. `client/public/documents/government-evidence/Government Evidence/Commonwealth Ombudsman - Service Restriction - Dr Richard McLean 8 August 2025.pdf` 4.
4. `client/public/documents/government-evidence/Government Evidence/2022-06-14_Vic_Ombudsman_Rejects_FOI_s29A.pdf`

No other PDF interior was read for this edition. Audio files titled as death-threat, investigator, or murder-declaration evidence were not opened. Their titles remain author allegations. This paper does not repeat those titles as facts.

Statutory references are taken from the archive's `laws.json` catalogue and from the public legislation registers cited there. Presence of an Act in that catalogue, the catalogue itself says, does not mean a violation was found.

3. What the repositories actually hold

The following are catalogue facts, not findings about the conduct of any agency.

The README of wezzo72/Barrandodger states that the repository is a new website presentation and does not replace or rewrite the original evidence stores. It points to a primary site, <https://drbarrandodger.github.io/barran-dodger-archive/>, a primary repository, <https://github.com/drbarrandodger/barran-dodger-archive>, a mirror site, <https://wezzo72.github.io/Backup/>, and the mirror repository <https://github.com/wezzo72/Backup>. It states a preservation rule: original evidence must remain preserved; website presentation may change; underlying records must not be altered.

The same README says that on 20 September 2026 forty-eight government or agency PDFs downloaded from Google Drive by file ID, plus unique Gmail agency-letter attachments, were stored in docs/official-drive/, with a catalogue at data/official-drive-binaries-2026-09-20.json. It then says, in a recount dated 4 October 2026, that those forty-eight were not removed, that docs/official-drive/ then held 95 PDFs, and that the repository tree held 5,583 files, including 2,840 PDFs and 1,813 HTML files. It says the barrandodger.com preservation copy remained 660 indexed pages. It says these are the party's copies and are not court findings.

The Phase 2 inventory of 19 September 2026 is narrower and more cautious. It says its counts are project catalogue counts, not independently verified content hashes. It records wezzo72/Backup client/public/documents/ as 545 blobs and 531 PDFs. It records 169 official-looking titles by filename or path only, 41 author-publication titles, and 18 sensitive titles concerning NDIS, health, guardianship, lease, or tax. It records that a blockchain manifest file was present and that the manifest was not treated as proof of every document's contents. It records that SHA-256 of PDF bytes was not calculated in that phase. It records that the description figure of 2,077 or more documents on drbarrandodger/barran-dodger-archive was unverified in that phase.

data/government-evidence.json, generated 20 September 2026, records a tree count of 138 PDFs in the Backup government-evidence path and says the full file list is the GitHub tree, not a second binary store in Barrandodger. It classifies two author declarations, a Declaration of Sovereignty and a Declaration of Integrity, as author's account.

data/allegation-matrix.json records a count of 150, a finding of "NONE DECLARED," and a status of author's allegation or research question unless a cited official letter is an official record of a process outcome.

These figures cannot be added together into a single verified corpus size. The 4 October 2026 README figure of 2,840 PDFs, the 19 September 2026 Backup figure of 531 PDFs, the government-evidence tree figure of 138 PDFs, and the primary-archive description of 2,077 or more are different counts of different stores at different dates. This paper uses each figure only for the store and date attached to it.

Inference, labelled as such: the archive is large enough that no honest examination can treat "it is on GitHub" as a substitute for reading the file. The archive's own indexes already say this. The mismatches found when four files were opened confirm it.

4. The person the archive identifies data/people.json contains one person row. The name is Dr Richard William McLean. The also-known-as field is Barran Dodger. The role is subject and author. The status field says it is a documented fact that this is the name used by the archive, not a finding about any third party. Linked sources are given as SRC-0001, SRC-0002, and SRC-0003. This paper uses that name because it is the name on the LECC letter opened below and the name used by the archive. It does not use the name as proof of any medical, legal, or whistleblower status.

The author has stated, as his position, that he remains a human being with agency, rights, dignity, and the capacity to express what he wants for himself, and that any contrary institutional assumption must be tested against records rather than accepted because an institution possesses administrative authority. That position is recorded here as the author's position. It is not a tribunal finding.

5. Graded chronology from the archive timeline

The timeline below is taken from `data/timeline.json`, phase 16, generated 19 September 2026. Every entry in that file is marked "FILENAME DATE ONLY." This paper repeats that status. A date in a filename is not, without the opened document, a verified event date. The document links are the links stored in the timeline file.

`data/documents.json` gives public paths for several of these rows. Those paths are cited in the reference list. A path is evidence that a file was published at that path. It is not evidence of every sentence inside the file.

6. Record fact: the LECC letter of 19 November 2025

The file `2025-11-19_LECC_Out_Of_Jurisdiction.pdf` was downloaded from `wezzo72/Backup` and text-extracted. The extracted text is an official letter. It is not an author wrapper. The following is the substance of that letter.

The letterhead is the Law Enforcement Conduct Commission, Level 3, 111 Elizabeth Street, Sydney NSW 2000, postal address GPO Box 3880, Sydney NSW 2001, www.lecc.nsw.gov.au. The reference is CASE202512395/13KM. The date is 19 November 2025. It is addressed to Richard William McLean by email. It says: "I refer to your correspondence dated 13-16 November 2025." It says: "Your complaint doesn't concern officers of the New South Wales Police Force or NSW Crime Commission." It says: "It is therefore 'outside our jurisdiction'." It says: "This means we cannot take any action on the information you have given us."

The letter then states what the LECC does. It says the LECC is an independent body that oversees the police. It says the law says that the NSW Police Force is responsible for managing and investigating complaints of misconduct by police, and that this means the LECC refers most complaints to the police. It says the LECC's role is to review how police handle complaints, and to investigate cases of police misconduct and corruption where it thinks it is appropriate. It says there are some types of complaint it cannot investigate. It is signed by the Assessments Team, Law Enforcement Conduct Commission. The extracted text is one page.

What this record establishes. It establishes that on 19 November 2025 the LECC Assessments Team wrote to Richard William McLean about correspondence dated 13-16 November 2025, assigned reference CASE202512395/13KM, and stated that the complaint did not concern officers of the NSW Police Force or the NSW Crime Commission and was therefore outside jurisdiction, and that the Commission would not take action on the information given. It establishes that the letter explained the ordinary division of function between the NSW Police Force and the LECC.

What this record does not establish. It does not establish what the 13-16 November 2025 correspondence said. That correspondence was not opened in this edition. It does not establish that NSW Police received a complaint, investigated it, or declined it. It does not establish misconduct by any police officer. It does not establish that the LECC's jurisdictional statement was wrong in law. It does not establish that a referral was made to NSW Police. The letter says the LECC refers most complaints to the police. It does not say that this complaint was referred.

The questions, applied to this record.

What did they know? They knew the contents of correspondence dated 13-16 November 2025. This paper has not read that correspondence.

When did they know it? The letter says the correspondence was dated 13-16 November 2025 and the response is dated 19 November 2025. The interval on the face of the letter is days, not years. That interval is a record fact about these dates. It is not a finding about other complaints.

What documents were placed before them? Correspondence of 13-16 November 2025, contents not extracted here.

What authority did they possess? On the letter's own account, authority over complaints concerning NSW Police Force officers and the NSW Crime Commission, with a statutory division under which NSW Police manages and investigates most misconduct complaints and the LECC reviews that handling and investigates where it considers it appropriate.

What intervention was available? The letter says action was not available because the complaint did not concern those officers. Whether some other intervention was available is not stated in the letter.

What did they actually do? They assessed the complaint as outside jurisdiction and wrote that they could not take action.

What did they refuse to do? They refused, in terms, to take any action on the information given.

What did they fail to investigate? The letter says they could not investigate this complaint. Failure is the author's characterisation if it means they ought to have investigated. The record shows a jurisdictional closure, not a completed misconduct investigation.

What consequences followed? Not stated in this letter.

Who still had power? On the letter's own account, the NSW Police Force retains the ordinary responsibility to manage and investigate complaints of misconduct by its officers. This letter does not show that a complaint was then before NSW Police.

This is the pattern the author asked the paper to isolate: a formal response, a boundary, and no substantive investigation visible in the response itself. The pattern is visible in this letter. Whether the boundary was correctly drawn depends on the unseen correspondence of 13-16 November 2025.

7. Record facts from the other opened files

7.1 Victorian Ombudsman file dated in the filename 14 June 2022

The file 2022-06-14_Vic_Ombudsman_Rejects_FOI_s29A.pdf was opened. The extracted text includes an "OFFICIAL" marking, the email complaints@ombudsman.vic.gov.au, and the website ombudsman.vic.gov.au. It includes a request section in which the requester seeks documents about Rich or Richard McLean or Richard William McLean in relation to www.richmclean.com.au, and a list of Victorian bodies with parenthetical remarks. Those parenthetical remarks are the requester's characterisations. Examples visible in the extract include statements that a department had rejected him, that he was homeless, that Victoria Police had told him the Homicide Squad was investigating his suicide and had rejected action on crimes he reported, and that a named officer had rejected a fatal-injury complaint. This paper does not adopt those parentheticals as findings. They are the author's request language as it appears inside this file.

The decision portion extracted from the same file says that section 29A of the Ombudsman Act 1973 (Vic) provides that the FOI Act does not apply to documents, whether in the possession of the Victorian Ombudsman or another body, to the extent the documents disclose information that relates to a complaint, a referred complaint, a referred matter, or a matter referred to the Ombudsman under section 16 of the Ombudsman Act; an enquiry or investigation under the Ombudsman Act; or a recommendation made by the Ombudsman under that Act.

What this record establishes. A file published at that path contains a Victorian Ombudsman FOI decision relying on section 29A of the Ombudsman Act 1973 (Vic), and contains the requester's own list of bodies and characterisations. The catalogue date is 14 June 2022. One extracted passage refers to material received by the Victorian Ombudsman until 27 May 2022. This paper does not treat every date in the file as independently verified beyond the extracted text.

What it does not establish. It does not establish that each named Victorian body rejected the author, held his records, or failed to investigate. Those propositions appear as the author's request language. It does not establish homelessness, a homicide-squad statement, or a gaslighting finding. It establishes that those claims were written into the request preserved in this file.

The institutional point, as inference. Section 29A is a statutory exclusion. An agency can apply it and thereby not release complaint material. Application of the exclusion answers the FOI question. It does not answer the author's underlying question about what was done with the complaint. That distinction is the distinction the author asked this paper to hold: procedural closure is not the same thing as a substantive examination. The record shows the procedural closure. It does not, by itself, show the merits of the complaints listed in the request.

7.2 Commonwealth Ombudsman file named as a service restriction of 8 August 2025

The file named Commonwealth Ombudsman - Service Restriction - Dr Richard McLean 8 August 2025.pdf was opened. It is five pages. Page 1, extracted cleanly, is not the Ombudsman's letter. It is a cover of the Barran Dodger Legal & Ethical Trust Fund, ABN 78 833 496 164, describing the archive as containing 2,000 or more primary-source documents and "AI-verified evidence of 35 years of coordinated institutional suppression by 25+ Australian government agencies," stating that every document is Bitcoin-blockchain-sealed, and stating an economic-harm range and an International Criminal Court submission. Those sentences are author-wrapper claims. They are not findings of this paper. This paper does not adopt the Federal-Court-confirmed protected-disclosure claim on that cover, because the Federal Court file named in the timeline was not opened. This paper does not republish the payment details printed on that cover.

Page 2 begins with an "OFFICIAL" marking and the words "COMMONWEALTH OMBUDSMAN." A reference "2024-706941" is legible. A date reading as 8 August 2025 is legible. The addressee line reads as Dr Richard McLean. A subject line is legible as a decision to restrict. The body text of the letter did not extract cleanly because of embedded font encoding. Email addresses are visible in broken character spacing. They are not relisted here.

What this record establishes. A public file with that filename contains an author cover sheet making suppression, blockchain, and court claims, followed by at least one page carrying Commonwealth Ombudsman letterhead, reference 2024-706941, a date of 8 August 2025, and a heading consistent with a decision to restrict contact or service. The catalogue label "service restriction" is consistent with the legible heading. The full operative paragraphs were not reliably extracted.

What it does not establish. It does not establish the reasons for the restriction, the conduct relied upon, the review rights stated, or that the restriction was unlawful. It does not establish the cover sheet's claims of coordinated suppression, a 35-year duration, 25 agencies, an economic figure, or an ICC case. A cover sheet bound in front of a letter is not the letter.

Integrity note. This is an example of why the archive's own rule matters. The filename is close to the letterhead. The first page is not the letter. Any essay that quoted the cover as if it were the Ombudsman would be false.

7.3 File catalogued as an IBAC PID rejection data/documents.json row DOC-0007 titles the file "IBAC PID rejection 400008R" and gives the path client/public/documents/government-evidence/Government

Evidence/06_2021-11-18_IBAC_PID_Rejection_400008R.pdf. The bytes downloaded from that public path on 9 October 2026 did not open as an IBAC letter. The extracted first page is the same class of Barran Dodger Legal & Ethical Trust Fund publication cover described above, including the claim of a Federal-Court-confirmed protected disclosure and of 2,000 or more documents.

What this establishes. The catalogue row exists. A download from the catalogued raw path on this date returned an author cover, not a verified IBAC decision. Possible explanations, not determined here, include a mislabelled file, a wrapper prepended to a letter whose later pages did not extract, or a path that does not contain the letter the title promises.

What this does not establish. It does not establish that IBAC rejected a public-interest disclosure numbered 400008R. That remains a filename and catalogue claim until the IBAC pages, if they exist in another copy, are extracted. The timeline status remains filename date only. This paper will not cite a quotation from IBAC that it does not have.

8. Institutions named, and the limit of what can be said data/organisations.json lists bodies because their names appear on public filenames in wezzo72/Backup. The file says listing is not a finding. The bodies named are: National Disability Insurance Agency / NDIS; NDIS Quality and Safeguards Commission; Commonwealth Ombudsman; Office of the Australian Information Commissioner; Department of Social Services; Office of the Prime Minister and Cabinet; Australian Federal Police; Federal Court of Australia; Administrative Appeals Tribunal; Comcare; WorkSafe; IBAC; LECC; Australian Human Rights Commission; AFCA; NSW Civil and Administrative Tribunal; NSW Trustee and Guardian; Legal Aid NSW; OVIC; and a row whose scheme identity was not fully normalised. The author also asked that the Public Guardian be examined. The organisation file names NSW Trustee and Guardian, not a separate Public Guardian row. Those offices are not the same body. This paper does not collapse them.

For each body, the same questions are asked. Unless section 6 or 7 supplies a record fact, the answer is the same, and it is stated once so that it is not repeated as if it were new evidence: the archive has published a file whose name mentions the body; this edition has not extracted that file; knowledge, dates, authority, intervention, refusal, and consequence are not established by the filename.

8.1 NDIA and the NDIS

Catalogue rows name an NDIA provider-registration file dated in the filename 5 May 2021, an NDIA SIL decline dated in the filename 1 June 2023, an interim behaviour support plan dated in the filename 15 March 2024, an NDIS plan approval numbered 366406 dated in the filename 20 November 2025, and an NDIS FOI decision-letter summary. None of those PDFs was opened in this edition. The National Disability Insurance Scheme Act 2013 (Cth) is in the laws catalogue as a reference only, with determination status "NONE DECLARED HERE."

The author's position is that disability-service decisions formed part of a sequence in which formal machinery did not become meaningful assistance. That is the author's position. The opened files in this edition do not decide it. A plan-approval filename and a SIL-decline filename can both exist. Until both are read, this paper cannot say what was approved, what was declined, what reasons were given, or what review right was offered.

8.2 NDIS Quality and Safeguards Commission

The body is named on file titles, according to `organisations.json`. No Commission letter was opened. No finding about a Commission investigation, a banning order, or a provider sanction is made.

8.3 Australian Federal Police

Timeline rows TL-0002 and TL-0003 name an AFP crime-report rejection dated in the filename 3 September 2021 and a CDDA / AFP compensation claim dated in the filename 21 October 2021. The compensation-claim path is given in `documents.json` as `client/public/documents/2021-10-21-cdda-afp-compensation-claim.pdf`. Neither file was opened. A compensation claim is not a compensation finding. A filename containing the word rejection is not, in this paper, proof that a rejection letter used that word or gave those reasons.

8.4 Commonwealth Ombudsman

Beyond the 8 August 2025 file discussed in section 7.2, the timeline names complaint 2021103546 dated in the filename 15 November 2021, and `documents.json` names a PID Ombudsman rejected-acknowledgement file. Those files were not opened. The service-restriction file shows a later Ombudsman decision to restrict, on the legible heading, but not the reasons. A restriction is a process outcome. It can be lawful. It can also be the point at which further complaints stop being examined. Which of those it was is not established by the unextracted body of the letter.

8.5 Office of the Australian Information Commissioner and FOI

Timeline row TL-0016 names an FOI revised decision 2022/045IC dated in the filename 14 November 2025. The Freedom of Information Act 1982 (Cth) is in the laws catalogue as reference only. The file was not opened. No finding is made about whether the revised decision granted access, refused access, or varied an earlier decision.

8.6 Department of Social Services

Timeline row TL-0011 names a DSS PID rejection dated in the filename 1 July 2023. The file was not opened. The Public Interest Disclosure Act 2013 (Cth) is in the laws catalogue. The catalogue says PID allocation and non-allocation letters exist as official record and that the file should be read. This edition did not read the DSS file. No PID status is declared here.

8.7 Office of the Prime Minister and Cabinet, Attorney-General, Prime Minister

`documents.json` names a letter to the Prime Minister / OPMC dated in the filename 31 May 2022, and a letter to the Attorney-General and Prime Minister dated in the filename 1 July 2023. Both are classified in the catalogue as primary source / author correspondence by filename. They were not opened. An outward letter establishes, if the file is in fact that letter, that the author wrote. It does not establish a reply. No reply file was identified and opened in this edition.

8.8 Federal Court of Australia

Timeline row TL-0009 and document rows DOC-0001 and DOC-0021 name a Federal Court final assessment or PID assessment dated in the filename 27 March 2023. The author-wrapper opened in section 7 calls the author a Federal-Court-confirmed protected-disclosure maker. That claim is not adopted. The Court file was not opened. A filename containing "PID assessment" does not establish that the Court made a protected-disclosure finding. Until the file is extracted, the claim on the cover and the claim in the filename remain unverified against the Court's own text.

8.9 Administrative Appeals Tribunal and Comcare

Document row DOC-0013 names a file whose title includes AAT, WorkCover, subsection 41(2), McLean and Comcare, and the number 20217478, with a date in the filename of 6 July 2023. The file was not opened. The Safety, Rehabilitation and Compensation Act 1988 (Cth) is reference only in the laws catalogue. No compensation outcome is declared.

8.10 IBAC

See section 7.3. The catalogue claims a PID rejection numbered 400008R dated in the filename 18 November 2021. The download did not verify an IBAC letter. No IBAC finding is stated.

8.11 LECC and police

See section 6. The verified letter is a jurisdictional closure concerning a complaint the LECC said did not involve NSW Police Force officers or the NSW Crime Commission. Police conduct itself is not established by this letter. Audio filenames in `media.json` allege death threats, investigators, and a murder declaration. Those files are classified by the archive's own media catalogue as author's account / allegation, filename, not a finding. They were not opened. This paper does not treat them as evidence of a death threat or of a homicide.

8.12 Australian Human Rights Commission

Timeline row TL-0012 names an AHRC email exchange dated in the filename 4 July 2023. It was not opened. The Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) is reference only. No discrimination finding is made.

8.13 AFCA

Document row DOC-0004 names an AFCA letter dated in the filename 21 May 2021. It was not opened.

8.14 NCAT, NSW Trustee and Guardian, Legal Aid NSW, and the Public Guardian question

The guardianship cluster in the catalogue is the closest documentary group to the author's question about consent and representation.

- TL-0014 / DOC-0014: NSW Trustee and Guardian, filename including s 122, filename date 16 October 2024. Not opened.
- TL-0019 / DOC-0006: Legal Aid NSW guardianship advice letter, filename date 14 January 2026. Not opened.
- TL-0020 / DOC-0010: NCAT guardianship evidence, filename date 20 January 2026. Not opened.

The Guardianship Act 1987 (NSW) is in the laws catalogue as reference only. The author asked whether decisions purportedly made for him were made with his meaningful participation, whether he had a genuine opportunity to understand and contest them, whether representation or guardianship continued after he sought to terminate or challenge it, and whether structures designed to protect autonomy operated, in his experience, as instruments that displaced it. Those are the right questions to put to NCAT reasons, a guardianship order, a financial-management order, a Trustee and Guardian letter, and a Legal Aid advice letter. They cannot be answered from filenames. This paper does not assert that a guardianship order was made, continued, or terminated. It asserts that the archive has published files whose names claim to be those records, and that the next examination has to open them before any sentence about consent can be a record fact.

The Public Guardian is not a separate organisation row in the file that was read. If the author means the NSW Public Guardian rather than NSW Trustee and Guardian, that office is not identified by a retrieved catalogue row in this edition. The examination of that office waits on a file that names it and can be opened.

8.15 Media

`data/media.json`, generated 20 September 2026, catalogues site video, cover images, a royalties chart, three audio files classified as author's allegation by filename, one further audio file, one art-catalogue PDF, and one third-party

YouTube link on the channel The Anointed Calling, title beginning "THEY CRACKED AND SPILLED IT ALL," classified as a public third-party link and not a finding. The media catalogue does not contain a row for a mainstream news investigation. Absence from this catalogue is not proof that no news organisation reported the matter. It is proof that this finding aid does not list such a report. The author's description of media silence is his characterisation. It is not demonstrated by a schedule of unreturned approaches in the files opened here. No such schedule was opened.

9. Consent, representation, and the sentence that cannot yet be written

The author wants a sentence of this kind to be tested, not assumed: that institutional structures designed to protect autonomy operated, in his experience, as instruments through which autonomy was displaced. The test he set is the record. The records most relevant to that sentence, on the catalogue, are the NCAT file, the NSW Trustee and Guardian file, the Legal Aid NSW advice file, and any Public Guardian file not yet separated in the index. They were not opened. The sentence therefore cannot be written as a finding.

What can be written is the author's position, the existence of the filenames, and the questions those files have to answer: who the decision-maker was; what order or advice was made; whether the author was a party; whether he was heard; whether reasons were given; whether a review was available; whether he used it; and whether a representative continued to act after he asked that the representation stop. Those questions are the examination. They are not the result.

10. Cumulative consequence

The author asked that poverty, housing insecurity, loss of income, barriers to legal assistance, disability-service failure, police responses, guardianship decisions, media silence, and repeated referral be read in sequence rather than as isolated incidents, and that the sequence be described as civil erasure: his term for the cumulative loss of recognition, agency, representation, and practical access. He also asked that the paper not require the reader to accept that word, but demonstrate the chronology and let the conclusion arise.

The chronology this edition can demonstrate is the chronology of filenames plus two opened process outcomes: a Victorian Ombudsman FOI exclusion under section 29A, and an LECC jurisdictional closure. A Commonwealth Ombudsman restriction is legible as a heading and not as a full set of reasons. That is not yet a demonstrated sequence of deprivation. It is a demonstrated sequence of process responses and a larger sequence of unpublished-to-this-paper filenames. Civil erasure remains the author's description. It is not this paper's finding.

The cumulative question is still a proper question. If later editions open the NDIA, AFP, DSS, Federal Court, NCAT, Trustee, and Legal Aid files and those files show repeated referral, refusal, or non-response after notice of the same underlying circumstances, the inference will be available to a reader. It is not available from the four files opened here, because three of them do not reach the merits and the fourth was not the letter its filename promised.

11. What would count as the indictment the author asked for

The author asked for an evidentiary indictment in the ordinary sense: a structured presentation of documented conduct demanding explanation, naming institutions and individuals where the public record permits, linking each material proposition to its source, distinguishing fact from allegation and inference, and refusing to let institutional terminology replace examination. He also asked that the paper not manufacture findings the evidence does not support.

This edition is that instrument at the scale of the records actually opened. It names the LECC Assessments Team as the signatory on the 19 November 2025 letter, because that is what the letter says. It does not name individual officers, guardians, lawyers, journalists, or Public Guardian staff, because `people.json` deliberately did not add third parties from filenames, and this edition did not open files that would identify them as decision-makers. Naming from a filename would breach the author's own evidence rule.

The strongest available statement is therefore not an adjective. It is this:

- A letter was written by the LECC on 19 November 2025. It said the complaint was outside jurisdiction and that no action would be taken on the information given.
- A Victorian Ombudsman file applies section 29A and thereby does not release complaint documents. The requester's characterisations sit in the same file and are not findings.
- A Commonwealth Ombudsman file shows a decision to restrict dated 8 August 2025, reference 2024-706941, behind an author cover that makes claims the letter has not been shown to confirm.
- A file catalogued as an IBAC rejection did not, on download, present as that rejection.
- Twenty timeline rows exist. Sixteen were not opened. Their dates are filename dates.

That is the indictment this record presently supports: not a proved scheme, but a public corpus whose own indexes refuse premature findings, and a small opened sample in which the visible institutional act is closure, exclusion, or restriction rather than a merits investigation. Whether that pattern holds across the unopened files is the next question. It is not an answer.

13. Colophon

This edition refuses two opposite errors. It does not treat an institutional letterhead as proof that the institution did enough. It does not treat a GitHub path as proof that the institution did wrong. The LECC letter is quoted because it was read. The IBAC rejection is not quoted because the downloaded file did not present that letter. The 50,000-word length was not manufactured. A later edition can reach that length only by opening the unopened files and writing what they say, with the same status labels.

Finding aid. Not a court. Not a verdict. Appearance is not a finding.
