What Has Been Taken From Me: The Human Cost of Years of Targeting, Institutional Failure and the Fight to Survive

An article by Dr Richard William McLean, known as Barran Dodger

There is a cost to being subjected to years of conflict with institutions that is not measured in dollars. There is a cost that does not appear on a government spreadsheet, in a departmental annual report, or in the carefully worded correspondence of an agency responding to a complaint. It is the cost of a human life being consumed by the struggle to preserve itself.

When I ask what has been taken from me, I am not asking a rhetorical question. I am asking people to consider the full extent of what a person can lose when their life becomes dominated by allegations of institutional targeting, unresolved complaints, administrative barriers, the struggle to secure basic support, and the exhausting responsibility of documenting what they say has happened to them.

I am asking what happens to a human being when the pursuit of truth, accountability and justice becomes a second full-time occupation — one that continues while the ordinary business of living becomes increasingly difficult.

And I am asking who accounts for that loss.

1. The loss of time: years that cannot be returned

Time is the one resource that no compensation payment can fully restore.

Years spent pursuing answers are years not spent building a peaceful life, developing relationships, creating new work, enjoying ordinary experiences or simply existing without the constant pressure of unresolved problems.

Every unanswered letter, every referral between agencies, every dispute about responsibility and every attempt to reconstruct events from documentary evidence consumes time and energy.

I have devoted an extraordinary amount of my life to recording events, preserving documents, examining correspondence and attempting to establish accountability for the detriment I say I have experienced.

My documentary archive is evidence of that effort. It represents not merely a collection of files, but the labour of a person determined not to allow important records and unanswered questions to disappear.

Yet there is a terrible paradox in that work.

The more time I spend documenting what has happened, the less time remains for rebuilding the life that has been affected.

I cannot recover those years by receiving another departmental letter. I cannot reclaim lost opportunities by being told that a matter has been referred elsewhere. I cannot rewind my life to the point at which these struggles began.

The loss of time is a real human loss, even when its full financial value is difficult to calculate.

2. The loss of security: the right to live without constant uncertainty

Security is more than having a roof over one's head.

It is the knowledge that tomorrow will not bring another crisis that must be managed alone. It is having somewhere safe to live, enough food, electricity, a working telephone, reliable support and the ability to make decisions without every basic necessity becoming another source of anxiety.

I have described circumstances involving housing insecurity, financial hardship and difficulties obtaining practical assistance. These are not peripheral matters. They affect the foundation on which every other part of life depends.

When accommodation is uncertain, it becomes harder to maintain routines, protect personal belongings, keep records safe, communicate consistently and pursue complicated administrative processes.

When money is scarce, even a modest electricity bill or telephone expense can become consequential.

When support is unreliable, tasks that would ordinarily be manageable can become overwhelming.

A person can possess an enormous documentary record and still struggle to meet the immediate costs of living.

That contradiction should trouble anyone who believes that administrative systems exist to protect human dignity.

What is the value of a person's education, professional experience, intellectual ability and determination if their daily circumstances leave them fighting to meet basic needs?

What does accountability mean if the person seeking it must simultaneously struggle for the practical conditions required to survive?

I want my life back. I want the security that allows a person to think beyond the next emergency.

That is not an extravagant demand. It is a demand for the conditions in which human dignity can exist.

3. The loss of health, peace and emotional energy

Prolonged adversity takes a toll.

Living with unresolved disputes, financial pressure, uncertainty and the responsibility of continually explaining one's circumstances can consume enormous emotional and physical energy.

For me, the experience I have described includes repeated hospitalisations, serious distress and years of attempting to make sense of events that I believe have caused profound detriment.

I do not regard my survival as evidence that the experience was harmless.

Survival is not the same as recovery. Endurance is not proof that a person has suffered no damage. Being able to write, organise documents, communicate arguments and continue advocating for oneself does not mean that the struggle has come without a cost.

There is a particular cruelty in the assumption that someone who continues to function must therefore be unaffected.

People can keep working while exhausted. They can continue speaking while distressed. They can preserve evidence while struggling to secure the necessities of life.

The fact that I continue to document my experiences should not obscure the human being doing the documenting.

Nor should the existence of a psychiatric history be used to make the substance of every complaint disappear. My claims, my records and my account deserve to be examined on their actual content rather than reduced to assumptions about the person presenting them.

The essential question is this: what has prolonged adversity cost me, and what practical action is required to address the consequences?

That question deserves a serious answer.

4. The loss of professional opportunity and the ability to create

I have a history of intellectual and creative work. I completed a PhD at Victoria University in 2020 and published Recovered, Not Cured through Allen & Unwin in 2003. My working life has also included illustration, news graphics and cartooning.

These are not insignificant details. They represent years of learning, professional development, creative effort and personal achievement.

A person's professional life is not simply a line on a résumé. It is a source of income, identity, independence, contribution and connection with the wider world.

When prolonged adversity takes over a person's time and attention, opportunities can be lost. Projects can be interrupted. Professional relationships can weaken. The ability to plan a future can be diminished by the need to deal with immediate crises.

The consequences may extend beyond lost wages. They can include work never completed, opportunities never pursued, creative projects left unrealised and the loss of momentum that comes from being unable to concentrate on one's chosen work.

I cannot claim that every lost opportunity has a single cause or assign a precise financial value to every consequence without examining the evidence.

But neither should these losses be dismissed simply because they are difficult to quantify.

A proper account of detriment must consider not only what a person has paid, but also what they have been prevented from building, pursuing or enjoying.

I want my intellectual and creative capacities to serve a future, rather than remain consumed by the effort of explaining the past.

5. The loss of relationships, belonging and ordinary human connection

There are losses that are difficult to put into a schedule of damages.

The loss of spontaneity. The loss of trust. The loss of the ability to relax in another person's company without the weight of unresolved circumstances intruding.

When life becomes dominated by conflict, it can become difficult to participate in the ordinary exchanges through which people sustain relationships and a sense of belonging.

Time spent responding to correspondence is time not spent with other people. Financial hardship can restrict social participation. Housing insecurity can disrupt stability. Exhaustion can make connection harder to maintain.

And when a person repeatedly has to explain an extraordinary personal history, the explanation itself can become another burden.

I cannot speak for every person who has entered or left my life, or attribute every relationship difficulty to a single cause. But I can speak about the importance of what has been placed at stake.

A human being needs more than survival. A human being needs a life in which there is room for companionship, dignity, affection, creativity and peace.

These things cannot be restored by an apology alone. They require circumstances in which a person can begin to live again.

6. The loss of independence through the struggle for assistance

There is a profound indignity in having to devote so much energy to obtaining assistance with basic needs while simultaneously trying to pursue complex accountability matters.

Seeking help should not require a person to repeatedly reconstruct their entire history, explain every difficulty from the beginning or navigate a maze of institutional responsibilities before obtaining a practical response.

My experience with support and administrative systems has left me with serious questions about whether the assistance available to me has been adequate to the circumstances I have described.

Where one organisation says that another is responsible, the practical problem does not disappear.

The electricity bill remains unpaid. The need for accommodation remains. Food is still required. Communication still costs money. A person still has to get through the day.

Institutional boundaries may be necessary, but they do not erase human need.

I want the agencies and organisations involved in my circumstances to address their respective responsibilities clearly. I want decisions explained, records considered, practical assistance assessed and unresolved matters dealt with rather than endlessly displaced.

Independence is not strengthened by leaving a person without the support necessary to exercise it.

Real independence means having a reasonable opportunity to live, make choices, contribute and pursue one's objectives without being trapped in a permanent struggle for the basics.

7. The loss of trust in institutions that are supposed to protect people

Trust is built through conduct.

It grows when people receive clear explanations, when decisions are consistent, when records are considered fairly and when someone takes responsibility for resolving a problem.

Trust diminishes when a person experiences repeated delays, contradictory explanations, unanswered questions or referrals that do not produce a meaningful outcome.

I have documented correspondence and administrative decisions involving multiple Australian government bodies and other organisations. My archive exists, in substantial part, because I believe these records must be preserved and examined together rather than treated as unrelated fragments.

The records do not all establish the same thing. Some demonstrate what an organisation said or decided. Others identify questions that remain unresolved. The significance of particular documents must be assessed in context.

But the existence of a paper trail creates an important opportunity: it allows claims to be examined against dates, correspondence, decisions and the responsibilities each organisation says it holds.

My concern is that the human consequences can become obscured when every part of a person's experience is separated into an individual administrative file.

One organisation sees a complaint. Another sees a funding issue. Another sees an eligibility question. Another sees a request for review.

But I live the combined consequences.

I am not a collection of administrative transactions. I am a human being whose life exists beyond the boundaries of any single agency.

That is the perspective I want my archive to preserve.

8. The loss of my voice through the burden of continually having to explain myself

I have spent years attempting to communicate what I believe has happened to me.

There is a difference between being able to speak and having the opportunity to be heard in a meaningful way.

A person may submit documents, write letters, identify dates, provide references and ask specific questions. Yet if the response does not address the substance of those questions, the person may be left repeating the same information.

Repetition has a cost.

It consumes energy. It deepens frustration. It takes attention away from other parts of life. It can create the sense that the burden of resolving a problem has been transferred almost entirely to the person who says they have been harmed.

My response has been to preserve the documentary record.

I have worked to organise public documents, correspondence, testimony and analysis into a form that readers can examine for themselves. My archive is an attempt to create continuity where I have experienced fragmentation, and to preserve information that might otherwise be difficult to locate across years of material.

I do not accept that the difficulty of my circumstances should deprive me of my right to express myself in my own voice.

I have the right to describe my experiences, ask difficult questions, challenge decisions and demand accountability.

I also have the right to speak about the spiritual meaning I find in my survival.

My Christian faith is part of how I understand my life and the strength that has enabled me to continue. It gives me a language for endurance, hope and the refusal to surrender my future to despair.

That testimony is part of my story. It does not need to replace documentary evidence, and documentary evidence does not need to erase my faith.

Both belong in an honest account of who I am.

9. The loss of financial security — and the question of compensation

Financial loss is one of the most visible consequences of prolonged adversity, but it is only one part of the picture.

There may be direct expenses, lost income, interrupted employment, costs associated with obtaining records and pursuing reviews, and other losses that require careful examination.

There may also be consequences that cannot be reduced to receipts: lost opportunities, diminished independence, prolonged insecurity and the burden of managing circumstances that have disrupted a person's life.

I believe the financial and personal consequences of my circumstances deserve a comprehensive assessment.

That assessment should identify the losses claimed, the relevant periods, the supporting records, the organisations or individuals whose actions are alleged to have contributed, and the basis on which responsibility is asserted.

Where the evidence supports a connection between a particular action or failure and a particular loss, that connection should be documented.

Where a question remains unresolved, it should be identified rather than concealed by general statements.

I do not regard compensation as a substitute for truth. Nor do I regard financial redress as an extravagant demand when substantial detriment is alleged.

Compensation, where properly established, can recognise measurable losses and help restore some measure of financial stability. Other remedies may be necessary as well, including correction of records, review of decisions, access to services, acknowledgment of established failures and changes to prevent similar harm.

Money cannot give me back the years already spent.

But financial redress may help provide the material conditions for a different future.

10. The loss of a future that should have been available to me

Perhaps the deepest loss is the future that becomes harder to imagine when the present is consumed by survival.

A future in which I can work without constantly returning to old disputes.

A future in which I can write, create, think and contribute without having every plan interrupted by another immediate crisis.

A future in which I have secure accommodation, reliable support and enough financial stability to make ordinary choices.

A future in which relationships are not overshadowed by administrative battles.

A future in which my documentary archive is a preserved record of what I have worked to establish, rather than the centre of my daily existence.

I want to spend my life doing more than documenting why I believe I have been harmed.

I want to live.

That statement should not be mistaken for surrendering my claims or abandoning the record. It is precisely because my life matters that I want the consequences addressed.

I want accountability and a future. I want the truth examined and the opportunity to rebuild. I want my work to contribute something beyond the circumstances that made its creation necessary.

I do not want the remainder of my life to be determined by the amount of time I must spend explaining the preceding years.

11. The archive: what remains when so much has been placed at stake

My public archive, Barran Dodger, is an attempt to preserve the documentary record of my experience and the questions of institutional responsibility that arise from it.

The materials include public documents, correspondence, first-person testimony, historical records and analytical work. Their purpose is to help readers follow the record, identify the relevant organisations, distinguish documented events from allegations and analysis, and understand how individual decisions may fit into a broader chronology.

The archive is not a substitute for examining individual documents. It is a means of making those documents more accessible.

The original repository is available here:

Barran Dodger — Original Documentary Archive Attachment.png

The separate PDF archive is available at:

https://github.com/wezzo72/pdf-archive Attachment.png

The rebuilt public website is available at:

https://wezzo72.github.io/barrandodger-rebuild/ Attachment.png

These materials should be read carefully. A document can establish that correspondence occurred, that an agency took a position or that a particular decision was made. Whether it establishes misconduct, causation or legal liability depends on the document's contents and the wider evidence.

That distinction does not diminish the archive. It strengthens its usefulness.

The point is not to demand that a reader accept every conclusion without examination. The point is to make it possible to examine the underlying record, compare accounts and ask informed questions.

I have undertaken this preservation work because I believe that documentary evidence matters, that institutional decisions should be open to scrutiny and that the human consequences of administrative actions must not disappear behind the language of procedure.

12. What accountability must mean in human terms

Accountability cannot be measured solely by the number of letters sent, complaints received, referrals made or files closed.

It must also be measured by whether the questions raised have been addressed, whether decisions have been properly explained, whether identified problems have been corrected and whether the person affected has a practical opportunity to recover.

For my circumstances, a meaningful response would need to consider:

- The chronology of the events and decisions I have documented.
- The responsibilities of each relevant agency or organisation.
- The evidence supporting each allegation, and the questions that remain unresolved.
- The relationship between particular actions or failures and the detriment I describe.
- The immediate needs arising from financial hardship, housing insecurity and access to support.
- The professional, financial and personal consequences that may require assessment.
- The remedies capable of addressing established losses and preventing further avoidable harm.

This is not a demand for empty expressions of sympathy.

It is a demand that the human consequences be taken seriously and that the documentary record be addressed in a substantive, organised and transparent way.

I cannot recover my past by asking institutions to acknowledge that it existed. But I can insist that the past is not ignored when decisions about my future are made.

13. My faith, my survival and my refusal to disappear

My Christian faith has helped me endure circumstances I have described as devastating.

I believe that my survival has meaning. I believe that truth matters. I believe that human dignity is not determined by financial circumstances, institutional status or whether an individual finds it easy to navigate complex systems.

Faith has given me a source of strength when practical circumstances have been difficult. It has helped me hold on to the possibility that my life can still contain purpose, even after years that I believe have taken so much from me.

I do not claim that faith removes the need for practical action. Prayer does not pay an electricity bill, secure accommodation or correct a defective administrative decision. Hope does not eliminate the need to establish what happened.

But faith can sustain the person doing that work.

I have continued to write. I have continued to preserve documents. I have continued to ask questions. I have continued to insist that my life is worth more than the problems that have consumed so much of it.

I will not allow the existence of adversity to become the whole definition of who I am.

I am more than the files accumulated about me, more than the complaints I have submitted, more than the difficulties I have experienced and more than the explanations I have been required to provide.

I am a person with a history, a mind, a body, a creative life, a faith and a future.

Those things matter.

Conclusion: Count the losses, not just the paperwork

What has been taken from me?

Time that cannot be returned.

Security that should be fundamental to a dignified life.

Peace and emotional energy spent dealing with prolonged adversity.

Professional opportunities and creative possibilities that deserve to be considered.

The ease of ordinary human relationships.

Independence diminished by the struggle to secure basic support.

Financial stability placed under pressure.

Trust damaged by experiences that have left serious questions unresolved.

And the freedom to direct my attention towards a future rather than continually having to reconstruct the past.

These are the dimensions of loss that I want people to consider when reading my account.

I am not asking readers to confuse an allegation with a final finding, or to treat every document as proof of every conclusion. I am asking them not to confuse that distinction with a reason to ignore the evidence, the questions or the human consequences.

The documentary record deserves examination. The claims deserve a substantive response. The losses deserve to be identified and assessed. The practical circumstances in which I am living deserve attention now, not only after every historical question has been resolved.

Most importantly, the person at the centre of this story deserves to remain visible.

I have spent years trying to make the record visible.

Now I want the full cost of that struggle to be visible too.

Because the real measure of what has happened cannot be found in the thickness of an archive alone. It must also be found in the years a person has lived, the opportunities they have lost, the security they have struggled to maintain and the future they are still trying to reclaim.

I am still here. My record remains. My voice remains. My faith remains. And my desire to live a life beyond this struggle remains.

I want more than survival. I want the opportunity to rebuild what can be rebuilt, to have substantiated losses addressed, to obtain meaningful accountability and to recover the ordinary freedoms that make a life worth living.

That is what this article is about.

Not merely what I say has been done to me, but what it has cost a human being — and what must now be done to give that human being a genuine opportunity to move forward.

PUBLIC STATEMENT FROM BARRAN DODGER
OF THE BARRAN DODGER ARCHIVE

THE WITNESS REMAINS: A WHISTLEBLOWERS TESTIMONY OF SURVIVAL TESTIMONY & FAITH

The Barran Dodger Archive is a public documentary and spiritual record established to preserve, organise and make accessible a decades-long body of evidence concerning alleged institutional, administrative, financial and human-rights harms.

It brings together official records, correspondence, documentary evidence, personal testimony, forensic analysis, research, philosophy, spiritual gospels and prophetic declarations, including writings understood by the author to have been anointed by the Most High God.

The Archive deliberately distinguishes between documented facts, official records, corroborated evidence, allegations, personal testimony, inference, interpretation and matters of faith. This distinction is fundamental to its purpose: readers are invited to examine the underlying evidence for themselves, test the claims, consider the sources and reach their own conclusions.

At the heart of the Archive is a testimony of survival and preservation.

What the author believes was subjected to attempts at silencing, erasure, exclusion or institutional disappearance has nevertheless survived in records, documents, testimony, memory, faith and public disclosure.

The central declaration is simple:

THE WITNESS REMAINS.

The Archive therefore represents both an evidentiary record and a spiritual testimony. The author understands his survival through a faith-based conviction that the Most High God protected, preserved and gave purpose to what human institutions could not erase.

The spiritual writings and prophetic declarations within the Archive are presented as matters of faith and personal interpretation. They are preserved alongside the documentary record so that the complete testimony — evidentiary, personal, philosophical and spiritual — can be understood in its own context.

The purpose is not to demand belief.

It is to preserve the record.

It is to make the evidence accessible.

It is to ensure that the surviving witness can be examined.

And it is to leave the historical record open to independent scrutiny.

THE ARCHIVE IS 100% FREE TO ACCESS

https://barrandodgerarchive.base44.app

KNOWLEDGE IS FREE

The Barran Dodger Archive is founded on the principle that knowledge, evidence and truth should be freely accessible.

There is no paywall for the public documentary record. Research, testimony, philosophy, spiritual writings, prophetic declarations and public-interest material are made available for people to examine for themselves.

Access to knowledge should not depend upon a person's ability to pay.

The Archive is therefore freely accessible, while its preservation and continued publication require practical resources.

SUPPORTING THE WITNESS AND THE ARCHIVE

Barran Dodger describes himself as an unprotected whistleblower living in circumstances of prolonged exile, financial hardship and vulnerability, and as an internally displaced asylum seeker within the country of his Australian citizenship.

Those circumstances create practical needs extending beyond the preservation of documents.

Voluntary donations are therefore accepted from anyone who freely wishes to assist.

Support may contribute towards essential needs including food, safe accommodation, communication, technology, transport, personal safety, website and domain costs, document preservation, archival infrastructure and the continued publication of the public record.

A donation does not purchase access to the Archive.

It does not purchase influence over the evidence.

It does not purchase editorial control.

It does not determine what is published or what conclusions readers should reach.

It simply helps sustain the person and infrastructure necessary to keep the Archive alive, functioning and freely accessible.

If you are blessed with sufficient prosperity to help preserve this work, your voluntary support can help ensure that financial hardship does not become another mechanism through which a public record disappears.

KNOWLEDGE IS FREE.

THE EVIDENCE IS OPEN TO EXAMINATION.

LASTLY — A SECOND PUBLIC-FACING ARCHIVE

For readers who wish to go beyond the principal Barran Dodger Archive, a second public-facing repository provides another point of access to the broader documentary record.

This website provides an additional gateway into the history, evidence, testimony, research and ideas that underpin the Archive. It is intended to help readers navigate the wider body of material and understand how individual documents, events, experiences and arguments have been brought together into a continuing record.

Its significance is not dependent upon the reader accepting Barran Dodger's conclusions. Rather, the value of preserving such a record lies in allowing the underlying material to remain available for examination. Readers can consider the chronology, inspect the documentary evidence, distinguish recorded facts from allegations and personal testimony, follow referenced material and form their own independent assessment.

The existence of multiple public repositories also reflects the central purpose of the project: preservation. Where records are distributed across years, institutions, correspondence, proceedings, personal archives and digital platforms, preserving accessible copies and pathways to the evidence can help prevent an individual historical record from becoming inaccessible or forgotten.

Readers are therefore invited to visit both public-facing archives, examine the material carefully and critically, and make their own assessment of what the surviving evidence demonstrates.

The purpose is not to ask the reader to believe.

The purpose is to ensure that the record remains available to be examined.

lack of transport, restricted access to money, medical needs and need for effective disability support are matters capable of independent examination.

I am asking for practical intervention, not another cycle of referrals, dismissals, conflicting explanations or assessments that leave my circumstances unchanged.

2. COMPLAINT AGAINST ABLEPOINT AND ITS MANAGEMENT AND STAFF

I formally complain about the adequacy, continuity, responsiveness and accountability of the support I report receiving from AblePoint.

I request an independent examination of the conduct of the organisation, its management, its rostering and complaints processes, and every worker involved in my support.

My concerns include:

1. Inadequate practical assistance. I report that essential household tasks and daily support needs have not been met adequately. In particular, I describe an incident involving a support worker identified to me as John, who was expected to provide assistance but refused to wash my dishes, reportedly because they were too dirty. I request that this incident, the applicable support obligations and the relevant service records be examined.
2. Failure to respond adequately to distress and vulnerability. I report that I am frequently alone, crying and experiencing significant distress, without meaningful assistance that improves my circumstances.
3. Continuity and quality of care. I request a review of staffing arrangements, attendance records, support plans, missed or incomplete tasks, risk assessments, incident reports and the actual services delivered.
4. Safety and incident management. I request an audit of whether reported safety concerns and any relevant threats or serious incidents were documented, escalated and reported to the appropriate authorities where required.
5. Accountability of management. I request the full legal name of AblePoint's chief executive, the identity of the responsible provider entity, its relevant registration details, and the names and positions of the people responsible for decisions affecting my care.

I have identified Rachael as the chief executive. I request confirmation of her full professional identity and role through the appropriate corporate and provider records. I ask that this be verified rather than assuming, without evidence, that any identification issue constitutes a criminal offence.

I am particularly concerned that AblePoint may continue receiving payments for services while I remain in circumstances in which my practical needs are not being adequately met. I request an audit of the services claimed, the services actually delivered, the applicable service agreements and the records supporting those claims.

I request that AblePoint provide a written response addressing each concern individually and identifying the corrective action taken or proposed.

3. COMPLAINT TO THE NSW PUBLIC GUARDIAN — ACCESS TO MY MONEY AND PERSONAL AUTONOMY

I formally complain about the restrictions affecting my access to my Commonwealth Bank accounts and the resulting impact on my independence, welfare and ability to obtain essential services.

I understand that my access to Commonwealth Bank internet and mobile banking was blocked in connection with arrangements involving the Public Guardian. I have previously identified Philip Glass as a person involved in communications about my financial access. I request verification of the precise decisions, authorities and individuals involved.

I report that I have no practical access to sufficient funds to meet my immediate needs, including transport, medical appointments and other necessities.

Restricting access to money can have consequences extending well beyond financial administration. Without a workable way to access funds, I can lose the practical ability to obtain transport, arrange medical care, purchase necessities and exercise personal autonomy.

I therefore request:

1. Written identification of the legal instrument, order, appointment or other authority relied upon to restrict my banking access.
2. A copy of the relevant decision and an explanation of its scope, duration and review arrangements, subject to any lawful limitations.
3. An itemised account of transactions, withdrawals, payments, fees and transfers made on my behalf, together with supporting records and the identity of the decision-maker for each disputed transaction.
4. An explanation of any proposed or completed further withdrawals from my funds.
5. An urgent assessment of my immediate living expenses and access to money for food, transport, medical care and personal necessities.
6. Consideration of a lawful, practical arrangement that gives me appropriate access to funds while addressing any substantiated risks identified by the responsible authority.
7. Written information about review, complaint and appeal rights, including any available independent review mechanism.
8. Confirmation of how my wishes, preferences, decision-making capacity and right to participate in decisions have been considered.

I ask the Public Guardian to distinguish any genuine protective purpose from the practical consequences of its decisions. A financial arrangement that leaves a person unable to meet essential needs requires urgent scrutiny and an effective response.

4. COMPLAINT TO THE COMMONWEALTH BANK OF AUSTRALIA

I request a formal banking complaint investigation into the restriction of my internet and mobile banking access and any associated arrangements affecting my ability to use my own money.

I request that the Bank:

- Confirm precisely what access has been restricted and when.
- Explain whether the restriction was imposed by the Bank, implemented pursuant to a legal instrument, or made in response to a third-party instruction.
- Identify the authority relied upon, to the extent the Bank is legally permitted to disclose it.
- Explain what options remain available for accessing money for essential living expenses.
- Review whether I can receive appropriate statements, transaction records and information about my accounts through an accessible channel.
- Explain how disputed transactions or withdrawals can be challenged.
- Identify a complaints officer or Customer Advocate responsible for this matter.
- Consider an urgent, lawful arrangement for access to essential funds, consistent with any valid legal restrictions.

I request that the Bank not simply refer me back to another agency without explaining its own role, the relevant authority and the available complaint pathways.

Please register this correspondence as a formal complaint and provide a complaint reference number.

5. URGENT MEDICAL CARE AND ACCESS TO TREATMENT

I report that I have been unwell, have experienced bowel blockages, have undergone or been required to undertake bowel-cancer investigations, and have recently been very sick while taking antibiotics. I have described medical samples and related materials awaiting appropriate assistance.

I am concerned about my ability to obtain timely medical assessment and follow-up care.

I also report that I have been unable to obtain the psychiatric care I believe I need because I lack money and practical access to treatment.

I have ADHD and report that my ADHD medication, dexamphetamine, was discontinued by my psychiatrist. I am requesting a proper clinical review of my current treatment needs, the reasons for the medication decision, the alternatives available and the steps required to obtain appropriate follow-up care.

I am not asking a regulator, guardian or support provider to prescribe medication. I am asking for meaningful assistance to access a qualified treating clinician who can assess my circumstances and make independent clinical decisions.

I request that AblePoint and any responsible support coordinator:

1. Assist me to arrange an appropriate medical appointment and necessary transport.
2. Help me contact my treating medical practitioner and arrange follow-up of my bowel symptoms and investigations.
3. Assist me to access a psychiatrist or other appropriate clinician for a review of my treatment.
4. Document and escalate any urgent medical concerns in accordance with applicable duties and procedures.
5. Explain what practical assistance can be provided immediately while longer-term arrangements are considered.

My physical and psychiatric healthcare needs must not be dismissed merely because I have a psychiatric diagnosis or because agencies disagree about the causes of my distress.

6. REPORTED COERCIVE FINANCIAL CONTROL AND FAMILY VIOLENCE

I report that my former partner and fiancé, Steve Isanidis, has caused me harm and that I am experiencing circumstances I understand as coercive financial control and family violence.

I also report distressing communications that I attribute to Tony Riddle and a person I identify as Ridley, including alleged mocking and statements to the effect that everything has been anticipated and that I will not survive. I request that any available messages, recordings or other evidence be preserved and assessed objectively.

I further report that I have experienced interactions that I regard as intimidation, gaslighting and deliberate humiliation. I am asking for the underlying conduct to be examined, rather than requiring me to prove another person's private intentions before my concerns can be considered.

These are serious allegations that require appropriate, evidence-based assessment. I ask each recipient to refer any matter outside its jurisdiction to the appropriate body, with my consent where required and subject to applicable legal obligations.

I request a documented safety assessment and information about appropriate independent family-violence, legal and safeguarding assistance.

No person should be presumed guilty solely on the basis of this complaint. Equally, my allegations should not be dismissed without appropriate consideration of the available evidence.

7. THE NDIS QUALITY AND SAFEGUARDS COMMISSION — REGULATORY REVIEW

I request that the Commission register this complaint and assess whether the matters raised warrant further regulatory action concerning the quality and safety of supports delivered by AblePoint.

I previously received acknowledgement of NDIS complaint 01110547, dated 18 September 2026. I understand that acknowledgement did not, by itself, establish that an investigation had commenced or that any allegation had been substantiated.

Please confirm whether this new complaint can be linked to that existing record and explain the current status of the earlier matter.

I request consideration of the following issues within the Commission's jurisdiction:

- Whether the supports provided meet applicable NDIS Practice Standards and relevant provider obligations.
- Whether support planning, staffing, service delivery and incident management are adequate.
- Whether complaints and reported risks have been recorded, escalated and addressed appropriately.
- Whether the services claimed and the services delivered are consistent.
- Whether I have been supported to raise concerns safely and participate meaningfully in decisions about my supports.
- Whether the circumstances indicate a need for regulatory assessment, compliance action or referral to another competent authority.

I request that the Commission consider the evidence independently, identify the issues it can investigate, and explain any matters it considers outside its jurisdiction.

8. THE RIGHT TO EXIST WITH DIGNITY, AUTONOMY AND ACCESS TO ESSENTIAL RESOURCES

The cumulative effect of my reported circumstances is that I feel trapped, isolated and stripped of the practical means to direct my own life.

I have no car. I report having no meaningful access to my money. I am distressed about my medical care. I am dependent on services that I believe are not meeting my needs. I am asking for assistance, yet I continue to experience circumstances that I regard as abandonment.

I describe this as social erasure: the practical exclusion of a person from ordinary participation in society when access to money, healthcare, transport, relationships and meaningful support is lost.

I ask the recipients to examine this description against the facts of my circumstances. My complaint is not resolved by debating the terminology. It requires attention to the actual restrictions, decisions, services and consequences involved.

I am entitled to have my complaints considered fairly, to receive information about decisions affecting me, and to be treated with dignity. I ask each agency to identify the legal and administrative safeguards that apply to its own decisions and actions.

9. PRESERVATION OF RECORDS AND EVIDENCE

Please preserve all records relevant to this complaint, including:

- Support plans, service agreements, rosters, attendance records and progress notes.
- Records of tasks requested, completed, declined or missed.
- Incident reports, risk assessments and safeguarding communications.
- Emails, text messages, call records and internal communications relevant to decisions affecting my support.
- Records of complaints, referrals, responses and escalation decisions.
- Invoices, payment claims and records of services delivered.
- Relevant banking instructions, correspondence, decisions, transaction records and financial statements.
- Records of decisions affecting access to medication, medical appointments, transport and other essential support.
- Any records concerning threats, reported family violence or serious safety incidents that are held by the relevant recipient.

Please ensure that records are retained in accordance with applicable legal and regulatory requirements and are not improperly altered or destroyed.

10. ACTIONS REQUESTED AND RESPONSE DEADLINES

Given the reported combination of physical illness, distress, limited financial access and inadequate practical support, I request:

Immediately, or as soon as practicable:

1. Acknowledgement of this complaint and confirmation of a responsible contact person.
2. Assessment of any urgent medical, personal-safety or basic-needs issues within each recipient's responsibility.
3. A practical plan for accessing necessary medical care, transport and essential living expenses.
4. Confirmation of the arrangements currently governing my banking access and support services.
5. Information about how I can raise further concerns without losing access to necessary supports.

Within five business days, if practicable:

6. A substantive initial response identifying the actions being taken, the responsible decision-makers and any information required from me.
7. An explanation of the process and anticipated timeframe for investigating the matters raised.
8. Confirmation that relevant records have been preserved.

Within ten business days, if practicable:

9. A written response addressing each issue within the recipient's jurisdiction, or a clear explanation of the outstanding steps and the expected response date.
10. Details of any independent review, appeal, regulatory escalation or external complaint process available to me.

These are the response timeframes I am requesting in light of the urgency. I recognise that statutory processes may prescribe different timeframes, but I ask that immediate safeguarding concerns not be left unattended while a formal investigation proceeds.

11. FINAL STATEMENT

I am exhausted by living with daily distress, physical illness, isolation and the struggle to obtain assistance that should be practical and accessible.

I want access to appropriate medical care. I want a proper review of my treatment. I want to understand who has authority over my money and how I can meet my basic needs. I want my support provider's actions examined. I want the people responsible for decisions affecting me to be identifiable and accountable.

I do not accept that a psychiatric diagnosis makes my financial, medical, housing or safeguarding concerns unworthy of investigation. Nor should my anger or distress be treated as a substitute for examining the facts.

I ask every recipient to treat this complaint as a serious request for action, not merely another entry in a complaints database.

Please acknowledge receipt, provide a reference number, identify the person responsible for responding, preserve the relevant evidence, and advise me of the concrete steps being taken.

I reserve my right to pursue appropriate complaint, review and legal avenues available under Australian law.

12. ADDITIONAL FORMAL COMPLAINT — REPORTED BARRIERS TO LEGAL REPRESENTATION, POLICE REPORTING AND SAFEGUARDING

I wish to formally raise additional concerns about my ability to obtain legal assistance, report alleged crimes to police, and receive appropriate safeguarding support.

A. Access to Legal Aid and legal representation

I report that I am barred from accessing Legal Aid. I ask the relevant Legal Aid authority to identify the decision, policy or legal basis for this restriction, explain whether it is a refusal of assistance or another limitation, and advise me of any available internal review, reconsideration or appeal process.

The practical consequence is that I have difficulty obtaining independent legal advice while attempting to address matters involving my personal safety, financial circumstances, disability supports and alleged family violence.

I consider this an issue of fundamental importance. Legal assistance exists to help eligible people understand and exercise their legal rights. Where a person experiencing substantial vulnerability cannot access assistance, the reasons and available alternatives must be made clear.

I request assistance identifying any alternative legal services, community legal centres, pro bono assistance or independent advocacy services that may be able to assess my circumstances.

B. Reported barriers to reporting alleged crimes to police

I report that I have encountered barriers to reporting alleged criminal conduct to police. I request that the relevant police authority clarify how I can lodge a report, obtain an event number, submit supporting evidence and request assessment by an appropriate officer.

I further report that individuals who had threatened to kill me were previously arrested by police in connection with court proceedings. I request that any relevant police event records, court records and available evidence be identified and considered.

I ask that the seriousness of reported death threats be assessed on the evidence and that I receive clear information about available safety measures and reporting procedures.

C. AblePoint's reported response to threats and safety concerns

I am concerned that AblePoint did not meaningfully acknowledge or address the incidents I have described involving alleged threats to my life. I report that I did not receive the reassurance, practical guidance, safeguarding assistance or follow-up that I needed.

I request an independent review of whether AblePoint knew about these incidents, what information was provided to the organisation, how the information was recorded, and whether staff took appropriate action under the applicable service agreements, support plans, safeguarding procedures and reporting obligations.

Please examine whether workers:

- Recorded and escalated the reported threats appropriately.
- Considered my safety and any need for a risk assessment.
- Explained available police, legal and family-violence reporting options.
- Helped me access appropriate support following the incidents.
- Followed applicable incident-management and reporting procedures.

I request that AblePoint provide a factual, documented response identifying what was known, what actions were taken and what further action is proposed.

D. Concern about impartiality and the quality of support

I have come to believe that the way my concerns have been handled reflects alignment with people whom I identify as having harmed or threatened me. I have also come to believe that I am being deliberately harmed through the ongoing failure to provide meaningful assistance.

I ask that these concerns be independently examined rather than dismissed or accepted without investigation. I am requesting an assessment of the actual conduct, communications, decisions and omissions involved, including whether any conflicts of interest or failures to act appropriately can be established.

I do not ask the Commission or any other authority to assume that a person's intentions have been proved merely because I have alleged them. I do ask that the evidence be examined impartially and that my safety concerns receive a substantive response.

E. Actions requested

I request that the NDIS Quality and Safeguards Commission:

1. Add these matters to the existing complaint record where appropriate.
2. Assess whether the reported response by AblePoint raises issues within the Commission's regulatory jurisdiction.
3. Request relevant records where its powers permit.
4. Explain what matters can be investigated by the Commission and what matters should be referred elsewhere.

I request that AblePoint:

1. Identify the person responsible for handling this safeguarding complaint.
2. Preserve relevant records and communications.
3. Explain what action was taken in response to the reported threats.
4. Conduct an appropriate review of any identified deficiencies in support or safeguarding.
5. Provide a written response addressing each concern.

I request that the relevant Legal Aid authority and police service provide clear, accessible information about the steps I can take to obtain legal assistance and report alleged criminal conduct.

F. Closing statement

I am asking for access to the practical protections that should enable a person to seek help when they believe they have been threatened, harmed or denied appropriate support.

I should not be left without clear information about how to report alleged crimes, seek legal advice, obtain necessary medical care or raise safeguarding concerns about the people responsible for supporting me.

I request that these additional matters be registered, assessed and answered in writing, with appropriate urgency given my reported circumstances.

Signed,

Barran Dodger
Richard William McLean

END OF FORMAL COMPLAINT

PUBLIC STATEMENT FROM BARRAN DODGER
OF THE BARRAN DODGER ARCHIVE

THE WITNESS REMAINS: A WHISTLEBLOWERS TESTIMONY OF SURVIVAL TESTIMONY & FAITH

The Barran Dodger Archive is a public documentary and spiritual record established to preserve, organise and make accessible a decades-long body of evidence concerning alleged institutional, administrative, financial and human-rights harms.

It brings together official records, correspondence, documentary evidence, personal testimony, forensic analysis, research, philosophy, spiritual gospels and prophetic declarations, including writings understood by the author to have been anointed by the Most High God.

The Archive deliberately distinguishes between documented facts, official records, corroborated evidence, allegations, personal testimony, inference, interpretation and matters of faith. This distinction is fundamental to its purpose: readers are invited to examine the underlying evidence for themselves, test the claims, consider the sources and reach their own conclusions.

At the heart of the Archive is a testimony of survival and preservation.

What the author believes was subjected to attempts at silencing, erasure, exclusion or institutional disappearance has nevertheless survived in records, documents, testimony, memory, faith and public disclosure.

The central declaration is simple:

THE WITNESS REMAINS.

The Archive therefore represents both an evidentiary record and a spiritual testimony. The author understands his survival through a faith-based conviction that the Most High God protected, preserved and gave purpose to what human institutions could not erase.

The spiritual writings and prophetic declarations within the Archive are presented as matters of faith and personal interpretation. They are preserved alongside the documentary record so that the complete testimony — evidentiary, personal, philosophical and spiritual — can be understood in its own context.

The purpose is not to demand belief.

It is to preserve the record.

It is to make the evidence accessible.

It is to ensure that the surviving witness can be examined.

And it is to leave the historical record open to independent scrutiny.

THE ARCHIVE IS 100% FREE TO ACCESS

https://barrandodgerarchive.base44.app

KNOWLEDGE IS FREE

The Barran Dodger Archive is founded on the principle that knowledge, evidence and truth should be freely accessible.

There is no paywall for the public documentary record. Research, testimony, philosophy, spiritual writings, prophetic declarations and public-interest material are made available for people to examine for themselves.

Access to knowledge should not depend upon a person's ability to pay.

The Archive is therefore freely accessible, while its preservation and continued publication require practical resources.

SUPPORTING THE WITNESS AND THE ARCHIVE

Barran Dodger describes himself as an unprotected whistleblower living in circumstances of prolonged exile, financial hardship and vulnerability, and as an internally displaced asylum seeker within the country of his Australian citizenship.

Those circumstances create practical needs extending beyond the preservation of documents.

Voluntary donations are therefore accepted from anyone who freely wishes to assist.

Support may contribute towards essential needs including food, safe accommodation, communication, technology, transport, personal safety, website and domain costs, document preservation, archival infrastructure and the continued publication of the public record.

A donation does not purchase access to the Archive.

It does not purchase influence over the evidence.

It does not purchase editorial control.

It does not determine what is published or what conclusions readers should reach.

It simply helps sustain the person and infrastructure necessary to keep the Archive alive, functioning and freely accessible.

If you are blessed with sufficient prosperity to help preserve this work, your voluntary support can help ensure that financial hardship does not become another mechanism through which a public record disappears.

KNOWLEDGE IS FREE.

THE EVIDENCE IS OPEN TO EXAMINATION.

ARCHIVE

Thank you to everyone who chooses to examine the evidence, preserve the record, support the Archive or simply bear witness.

The record remains.

The witness remains.

LASTLY — A SECOND PUBLIC-FACING ARCHIVE

For readers who wish to go beyond the principal Barran Dodger Archive, a second public-facing repository provides another point of access to the broader documentary record.

https://barrandodger.com

This website provides an additional gateway into the history, evidence, testimony, research and ideas that underpin the Archive. It is intended to help readers navigate the wider body of material and understand how individual documents, events, experiences and arguments have been brought together into a continuing record.

Its significance is not dependent upon the reader accepting Barran Dodger's conclusions. Rather, the value of preserving such a record lies in allowing the underlying material to remain available for examination. Readers can consider the chronology, inspect the documentary evidence, distinguish recorded facts from allegations and personal testimony, follow referenced material and form their own independent assessment.

The existence of multiple public repositories also reflects the central purpose of the project: preservation. Where records are distributed across years, institutions, correspondence, proceedings, personal archives and digital platforms, preserving accessible copies and pathways to the evidence can help prevent an individual historical record from becoming inaccessible or forgotten.

Readers are therefore invited to visit both public-facing archives, examine the material carefully and critically, and make their own assessment of what the surviving evidence demonstrates.

The purpose is not to ask the reader to believe.

The purpose is to ensure that the record remains available to be examined.
