LEGAL BRIEF of BARRAN DODGER / DR RICHARD WILLIAM MCLEAN- Fri 23rd October, 2026

Comprehensive legal status, access to justice, international human rights, institutional accountability and documentary evidence investigation

Research date: 23 October 2026 | Jurisdictions: Commonwealth of Australia, New South Wales and other jurisdictions where supported by evidence
Original evidence repository: Barran Dodger — GitHub
Original public archive: Barran Dodger website
Rebuilt public archive: Barran Dodger rebuild

Executive summary

This report investigates the documentary record concerning Barran Dodger, also known as Dr Richard William McLean, with particular attention to workers' compensation, employment status, legal assistance, guardianship and financial administration, access to government information, administrative complaints, institutional accountability and Australia's international human-rights obligations.

The central question is whether a person who documents alleged institutional detriment and pursues remedies through multiple administrative and legal systems can be left without a realistic, affordable and effective route to obtain answers, challenge decisions or pursue compensation.

The public archive provides a substantial starting point for that inquiry. It identifies correspondence and records associated with Comcare, the Administrative Appeals Tribunal, the Federal Court, the Commonwealth Ombudsman, the Office of the Australian Information Commissioner, the NDIS Commission, NSW Trustee & Guardian and Legal Aid NSW. It also preserves the author's testimony, chronology, legal analyses and documentary finding aids.

The record must nevertheless be assessed document by document. A refusal letter establishes the decision communicated by the issuing body; it does not necessarily establish the truth or falsity of every underlying allegation. An administrative decision is not a court judgment. An unresolved complaint is not proof of deliberate misconduct. Equally, an allegation does not become irrelevant merely because no official finding has been made.

The most important conclusions are:

1. The Comcare employment-status dispute reached a formal Tribunal decision. The archive identifies a refusal dated 26 May 2021 and an Administrative Appeals Tribunal decision dated 12 July 2023 affirming the decision under review. Any proposed further action must account for that determination and the applicable review law.

2. Several complaint and disclosure pathways were used. The archive identifies decisions concerning public-interest disclosures, Ombudsman processes and government-information requests. Their outcomes must be examined individually, including the scope of each body's jurisdiction.

3. The Legal Aid issue requires the actual operative decision. The archive identifies a Legal Aid NSW advice letter dated 14 January 2026. The legal significance depends on whether it records refusal of a grant, restricted assistance, advice without representation, a jurisdictional limitation or another outcome.
4. Guardianship and financial-administration decisions require separate examination. Each order, certificate, financial decision and review right must be identified. A document concerning the administration of an estate does not automatically establish the legal basis or validity of every later decision.
5. International human-rights treaties provide relevant standards, but ratification is not the same as direct domestic enforceability. Australia's obligations under the ICCPR, ICESCR, Convention against Torture and CRPD may be relevant depending on the facts. Each alleged breach must be connected to a particular treaty provision and an applicable legal mechanism.
6. Limitation periods and procedural deadlines are a priority. Historical correspondence, ongoing hardship and unresolved complaints do not automatically preserve a legal claim. The date of each decision, the relevant cause of action and the applicable review procedure must be checked.
Scope and verification limitation: This is an evidence-led legal assessment of the identifiable archive material and relevant legal frameworks, not a certified forensic review of every PDF or a complete search of every court, tribunal and agency database. Where the original document, current status or procedural history cannot be independently established, the report says so. It does not represent unexamined documents as having been read.

1. Primary documentary archive and methodology

1.1 Source repositories

The investigation begins with the three public resources supplied for the archive.
Original evidence repository
github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger
Primary source for repository files, original-document links, HTML pages, chronology material, archived PDFs and supporting evidence.
Original public archive
wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger
Public-facing archive and historical finding aid.
Rebuilt public archive
wezzo72.github.io/barrandodger-rebuild
Separate rebuild intended to improve access to the preserved material.
The archive should be treated as a documentary collection rather than as a single evidentiary proposition. Its individual items may include original official correspondence, submissions written by McLean, third-party material, legal analysis, archived web pages and AI-generated assessments. Those source categories have different evidentiary weight.

1.2 Material identified for examination

The following repository locations provide useful starting points for the legal reconstruction:

- Repository root and file tree
- Main website HTML
- Comcare refusal analysis
- Federal Court General Counsel letter analysis
- Administrative Appeals Tribunal employment-status analysis
- Commonwealth Ombudsman public-interest disclosure analysis
- FOI chronology and evidence index
- Archived website backup directory

These links identify the material to be used in the investigation. The repository's own analyses are useful finding aids, but any decisive conclusion should be checked against the underlying official document wherever accessible.

1.3 Evidentiary rules

The report uses the following categories consistently.

Category	Meaning
Documented fact	A fact established by an accessible original record or reliable official source.
Official decision	A determination made by an identified authorised decision-maker.
Recorded allegation	An allegation contained in testimony, a submission, complaint or correspondence.
Analytical inference	A reasoned interpretation of one or more documents that is not itself an official finding.
Unverified issue	A proposition requiring the original record, corroboration or confirmation of current status.

Potential legal claim	A possible legal avenue whose factual and statutory requirements still need assessment.
Procedural status unknown	No reliable evidence establishes whether the matter remains open, has been concluded or has proceeded to a further stage.

Digital timestamps, blockchain records, file hashes and archived copies can help establish document provenance, integrity or existence at a particular time. They do not independently prove that a document's contents are accurate or that the conduct described was unlawful.

2. Actual legal and administrative status

The most important task is to distinguish formal decisions from allegations, applications, complaints and matters whose current status is unknown.

2.1 Workers' compensation: Comcare

Comcare claim 1326583/1

Refusal: 26 May 2021 | Tribunal decision: 12 July 2023

The archive identifies an original Comcare refusal and subsequent Administrative Appeals Tribunal reasons. The stated issue was whether McLean satisfied the statutory definition of an employee for the purposes of the compensation scheme.

Primary records: Comcare determination · Tribunal reasons

Status classification: Official decision identified; subsequent status requires verification.

The Tribunal's decision is a significant formal determination, not merely an administrative complaint. It means the employment-status issue in that particular compensation proceeding cannot accurately be described as if no determination had been made.

The decision does not automatically resolve every other question concerning McLean's relationship with a government body, his experiences, the truth of separate allegations or the application of another statute using a different legal test.

2.2 Commonwealth public-interest disclosures

The archive identifies correspondence concerning public-interest disclosures, including:

- A Commonwealth Ombudsman review dated 18 November 2021, identified by reference PID-2021-400008-R.
- A Federal Court General Counsel letter dated 27 March 2023 declining to allocate a public-interest disclosure.

Primary finding aids:

- Ombudsman PID review analysis
- Federal Court General Counsel letter analysis

Status classification: Official correspondence identified; any subsequent review or further disclosure requires verification.

The relevant question is what each body was authorised to assess and what it actually decided. A decision that a submission does not meet the definition or procedural requirements of a public-interest disclosure is not automatically a finding that every underlying allegation is false.

Nor does it establish that the alleged conduct occurred. The original disclosure, decision reasons, statutory provisions and subsequent correspondence must be compared.

2.3 FOI and government-information requests

The archive identifies an FOI pathway associated with FOI 2022/045, an internal review, an OAIC review reference and subsequent government correspondence.

Primary finding aid: FOI chronology and evidence index.

Status classification: Multiple information-access events identified; the status of each request and review must be assessed separately.

The investigation should determine whether the relevant agency:

- located all documents within the request's scope;
- interpreted the scope correctly;
- applied any exemptions lawfully;
- gave adequate reasons;
- complied with applicable time limits;
- offered the correct review rights; and
- subsequently released additional material or reconsidered an earlier decision.

An FOI refusal is not necessarily unlawful. A later release does not, by itself, prove that the earlier decision was deliberately improper. Both decisions must be assessed under the applicable legislation and the evidence available at each date.

2.4 Guardianship and financial administration

The archive identifies NSW Trustee & Guardian correspondence, including a document dated 16 October 2024 and a later decision concerning vehicle disposal dated 14 November 2025.

Status classification: Documents identified; operative orders and present review status require verification.

For each decision, the necessary evidence includes the relevant guardianship or financial-management order, the precise power exercised, the reasons, the date notice was given and any available internal review or NCAT application.

It is essential to distinguish:

- the existence of a financial-management arrangement;
- the scope of a particular order;
- a decision made by the NSW Trustee & Guardian;
- a review of that decision;
- a decision of NCAT; and
- any judicial review of legality.

Those are different legal events. None should be inferred solely from a document title or from a later description of the event.

2.5 Legal Aid NSW

The archive identifies a Legal Aid NSW advice letter dated 14 January 2026.

Status classification: Correspondence identified; precise decision type and current appeal status require verification.

The report cannot responsibly state that McLean was "banned" from obtaining legal assistance unless the actual letter establishes an exclusion or prohibition. It must first be determined whether the letter refused a grant, limited the assistance available, declined a particular matter, explained a jurisdictional restriction or offered an alternative.

The distinction is consequential because the review rights, appeal periods and possible next steps depend on the type of decision.

2.6 Criminal proceedings and warrants

No conclusion about the complete current criminal status can be drawn solely from the archive's contents.

The absence of a criminal charge, conviction, warrant or prosecution record in the material examined does not independently establish that none exists. Conversely, an allegation made in correspondence does not establish that a charge or proceeding exists.

The correct classification is current criminal status not independently verified unless supported by an appropriate, reliable official record.

3. Comprehensive chronology

The following chronology consolidates the principal events identified in the documentary finding aids. It is not a claim that every document in the archive has been independently examined.

Date	Matter	Legal or evidentiary significance	Status
22 January 2021	Injury date recorded in Comcare material	Starting point for the compensa-tion	Document date requires original chronology; causation and employment status remain separate questions.	verification

26 May 2021	Comcare refusal, claim 1326583/1	Formal decision concerning the employee criterion.	Official decision identified
3 June 2021	NDIS Commission correspon-dence	Relevant to the Commis-sioner's stated position on employment and its institutional role.
August 2021	Comcare reconsidera-	Relevant to

	tion reportedly affirmed	letters should be checked subsequent Tribunal proceeding.
18 November 2021	Common-wealth Ombudsman PID review	Official correspon-dence identified	Determines the person's identity
2022	FOI 2022/045 and associated review steps	Relevant to access to government information and review rights.	Individual decisions require comparison
27 March 2023	Federal Court General Counsel letter	Decision not to allocate a public-interest disclosure.	Official correspon-dence identified

12 July 2023	McLean and Comcare, AAT file 2021/7478	Tribunal affirmed the decision under review.	Official Tribunal decision identified
16 October 2024	NSW Trustee & Guardian section 122 document	Potentially relevant to financial administration and legal status.	Operative effect requires verification
14 October 2024	Administrative Review Tribunal commenced	Secretary intervention framework changed, subject to transitional arrangements.
8 August 2025	Commonwealth Ombudsman service-restriction letter	Relevant to examination governing future identified	dence.

14 November 2025	NSW Trustee & Guardian vehicle-disposal decision identified	Relevant to authority, reasons, notice and review options.	Official decision requires examination
14 January 2026	Legal Aid NSW advice letter	Central to the access-to-justice investigation.	Decision type requires verification
20 January 2026	NCAT-related material identified in archive research papers	Potentially relevant to guardianship review or proceedings.	Actual order or decision requires verification
September–October 2026	Archive updates and further correspon-dence	Relevant to [illegible]	[illegible] record.

The chronology shows why a single narrative of "institutional wrongdoing" would be insufficient. The matters involve different decision-makers, different statutes, different legal tests and potentially different remedies. The proper task is to determine whether particular decisions or omissions can be linked by documentary evidence and whether the resulting pattern has legal significance.

4. Legal Aid and the practical availability of justice

4.1 The access-to-justice paradox

The central proposition is that a legal assistance system may exist to improve access to justice while its eligibility rules, funding limits, jurisdictional boundaries or individual decisions leave a particular person without practical assistance to pursue complex and consequential matters.

That proposition is a legitimate subject for investigation. It is not automatically proof of an unlawful refusal or a systemic failure.

The relevant questions are:

- What assistance was sought?
- Which service received the request?
- What legal issue was the assistance intended to address?
- What written decision was made?
- What statutory provisions, eligibility criteria or policies were applied?
- Was the decision reviewed, reconsidered or appealed?
- What alternative assistance was offered?
- Could the alternative realistically address the problem?
- Did the absence of assistance create a risk to procedural rights or limitation periods?

4.2 Governing legislation

The principal statute is the Legal Aid Commission Act 1979 (NSW).

Relevant provisions include section 34 concerning redetermination of applications in the circumstances authorised by the Act, section 56 concerning appeals against specified decisions about grants of legal aid, and the associated provisions governing the review process.

Official starting points:

- Legal Aid NSW — appealing a legal aid decision
- Legal Aid NSW — Review Panel policies
- Legal Aid NSW — feedback and complaints

A complaint about service quality is not necessarily the same as an appeal against a grant decision. A complaint does not automatically suspend an appeal deadline.

The archive's 14 January 2026 letter must therefore be classified according to its operative wording. If it was an appealable decision, the relevant deadline must be calculated from the legally relevant date of notification, with any applicable extension provisions checked.

4.3 The cumulative impact of fragmented assistance

The practical difficulty may be greater than any one decision suggests.

A person pursuing workers' compensation, government-information requests, guardianship review, disability support and potential civil claims may need to navigate several different systems. Each may require separate evidence, forms, legal tests, procedural deadlines and decision-makers.

If affordable assistance is unavailable, the person may have to identify the correct jurisdiction, interpret statutory language, prepare submissions and preserve evidence without professional representation.

That can create a substantial practical barrier even where the individual eligibility decision is legally correct.

A proper conclusion requires evidence of the actual assistance requested and received, the reasons for any refusal, the realistic alternatives and the resulting effect on the person's ability to pursue a particular remedy.

4.4 What would resolve the Legal Aid question?

The most important documents are:

- the complete 14 January 2026 letter;
- the original application for assistance;
- any reasons or assessment record;
- any appeal, redetermination or complaint;
- the decision on that appeal or complaint;
- any correspondence identifying alternative services;
- evidence of the relevant proceedings and deadlines.

Until those documents are compared, the most accurate finding is that the archive identifies an access-to-justice concern that warrants examination, while the precise legal status of the Legal Aid decision remains unverified.

5. Workers' compensation and employment status

5.1 Applicable legislation

The principal statute is the Safety, Rehabilitation and Compensation Act 1988 (Cth).

The statutory questions include:

- section 5 — the relevant definitions of employee and related terms;
- sections 5A and 5B — injury and disease;
- section 6 — injury arising out of or in the course of employment;
- section 11 — liability of the relevant authority.

The applicable historical version must be used for the original decision. A current compilation should not be applied retrospectively without checking amendments and transitional provisions.

5.2 What the documents establish

The archive identifies a Comcare refusal dated 26 May 2021 and Tribunal reasons dated 12 July 2023.

The relevant original records are:

- Comcare determination
- Administrative Appeals Tribunal reasons

The identified Tribunal outcome affirmed the decision under review on the employment-status issue.

The archive also identifies a letter dated 27 March 2023 from Federal Court General Counsel Scott Treadwell. That letter must be assessed according to its purpose and context. A statement about employment in the administration of a public-interest disclosure does not automatically overturn a Tribunal determination under the SRC Act.

Different statutes may define employment differently or use different tests. The legal question is not whether two documents contain superficially similar words, but whether they determine the same legal issue under the same governing provisions.

5.3 Potential next steps

Any further workers' compensation action should begin by obtaining and comparing the complete Comcare decision, the reconsideration decision, the Tribunal reasons and any subsequent court or tribunal orders.

The investigation should then establish:

- whether any appeal or judicial-review application was lodged;
- whether the applicable time limits have expired;
- whether any statutory reopening or reconsideration provision applies;
- whether a separate employment or compensation claim exists under another scheme;
- whether the facts satisfy that scheme's distinct statutory requirements.

The report cannot conclude that a further compensation entitlement exists simply because another document describes McLean as an employee in a different context.

6. Public-interest disclosures and institutional accountability

6.1 Commonwealth scheme

The Public Interest Disclosure Act 2013 (Cth) governs qualifying Commonwealth public-interest disclosures.

The statute determines which disclosures qualify, who may receive them, how they are allocated, the relevant public-official requirements and the protections that apply to qualifying disclosers.

The archive identifies two significant pieces of correspondence:

- Commonwealth Ombudsman PID review analysis
- Federal Court General Counsel letter analysis

Those records support an investigation into why the particular disclosures were not accepted or allocated under the relevant process.

They do not establish, without additional evidence, that the alleged underlying conduct occurred, that the discloser qualified for every statutory protection or that the receiving body acted unlawfully.

6.2 New South Wales scheme

The Public Interest Disclosures Act 2022 (NSW) governs the relevant NSW framework.

A Commonwealth disclosure cannot simply be treated as a NSW disclosure. The receiving body, the public official involved, the nature of the information and the statutory definition must all be checked.

Likewise, the Independent Commission Against Corruption Act 1988 (NSW) should only be invoked where the facts potentially fall within ICAC's jurisdiction and statutory criteria.

An adverse administrative outcome is not, by itself, evidence of corruption. A referral between agencies is not, by itself, proof of a cover-up. A credible accountability investigation identifies the specific conduct, the responsible body, the evidence and the applicable legal test.

6.3 Testing for systemic problems

The documentary record may support a broader institutional analysis if multiple independently documented decisions reveal recurring issues such as:

- repeated jurisdictional referrals without a clear explanation of the appropriate forum;
- inconsistent descriptions of the same relevant fact;
- failure to answer a specific material question;
- unexplained delays or failures to provide requested records;
- repeated procedural barriers affecting the same person;
- a lack of realistic alternatives after a service declines to act.

To establish such a pattern, the evidence must show more than a series of unfavourable outcomes. The decisions must be compared for their reasons, legal basis, subject matter and procedural history.

The appropriate conclusion may be that the system's combined processes left a material question unresolved. That is different from asserting that every agency deliberately coordinated its conduct.

7. International human-rights obligations

7.1 Treaty status and Australian domestic law

The authoritative starting points are the United Nations Treaty Collection and the Australian Treaties Database.

Australia has ratified the major international human-rights treaties discussed below. The treaty record must nevertheless be checked for the particular instrument, optional protocol, reservation, declaration and individual-complaint procedure relevant to a proposed case.

A treaty may bind Australia internationally without every article creating a directly enforceable domestic cause of action. Whether a right can be enforced in an Australian court depends on domestic legislation, recognised legal principles and the particular proceedings.

7.2 International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights

Official source: ICCPR — United Nations Treaty Collection.

Provision	Legal significance	Connection to the archive
Article 2(3)	Effective remedies for violations of Covenant rights	Relevant if a specific Covenant right was violated and the available remedy was ineffective.

Article 9	Liberty and security of person; protection against arbitrary detention	Requires evidence of particular detention or restraint events and their legal basis.
Article 10	Humane treatment of persons deprived of liberty	Relevant to treatment during deprivation of liberty.
Article 14	Equality before courts and tribunals and fair-hearing protections within the article's scope	Requires identification of the actual proceedings and the guarantee allegedly breached.
Article 16	Recognition as a person before the law	Relevant if evidence establishes interference with legal personality.
Article 17	Protection against arbitrary	Requires particular or unlawful interference with privacy	conduct, records and the legal framework.

Article 19	Freedom of expression, subject to permitted limitations	Relevant where a specific restriction on expression is established.
Article 26	Equality before the law and equal protection	Requires evidence of discrimination or unequal legal protection.

Article 14 does not guarantee publicly funded legal representation in every civil dispute. Article 9 cannot be invoked solely because a person reports mistreatment, and Article 17 is not automatically breached by an allegation of surveillance.

For each proposed breach, the investigation must identify the conduct, the relevant actor, the protected right, the applicable test and the evidence.

7.3 International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights

Official source: ICESCR — United Nations Treaty Collection.

Provision	Potential relevance
Article 2(1)	Appropriate steps towards progressive realisation of Covenant rights.
Article 2(2)	Non-discrimination in the enjoyment of Covenant rights.
Article 6	The right to work.

Article 9	The right to social security.
Article 11	The right to an adequate standard of living, including adequate food and housing.
Article 12	The right to the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health.

The reported circumstances concerning housing instability, financial hardship, employment disputes and access to support are potentially relevant to these standards.

However, the fact that a person experiences hardship does not automatically prove a treaty violation. The analysis must distinguish immediate obligations, non-discrimination requirements and progressive-realisation duties, and identify the connection between the relevant state action or omission and the particular right.

7.4 Convention against Torture

Official source: Convention against Torture — United Nations Treaty Collection.

Articles 2, 12, 13 and 16 may be relevant where the evidence raises specific questions concerning torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment.

The legal assessment must examine the nature and severity of the treatment, the required purpose and public-official involvement for torture, and the separate scope of the prohibition on other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment.

A person's description of an experience must be preserved accurately. Its legal classification requires a separate assessment against the treaty definition.

7.5 Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Official source: CRPD — United Nations Treaty Collection.

Australia ratified the CRPD on 17 July 2008 and accepted its Optional Protocol on 21 August 2009.

The principal provisions potentially relevant to the archive are:

- Article 5 — equality and non-discrimination.
- Article 9 — accessibility.
- Article 12 — equal recognition before the law.
- Article 13 — access to justice.
- Article 14 — liberty and security of person.
- Article 15 — freedom from torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment.
- Article 16 — freedom from exploitation, violence and abuse.
- Article 19 — living independently and being included in the community.
- Article 25 — health.

- Article 28 — adequate standard of living and social protection.

Article 13 deserves particular attention in the access-to-justice analysis. The investigation should examine whether reasonable procedural accommodations, accessible communication or other support arrangements were relevant to McLean's ability to participate effectively in legal processes.

The existence of a diagnosis, hospitalisation or guardianship arrangement does not automatically establish a CRPD violation. The specific decision, the person's rights and circumstances, and the relevant state obligation must be established.

7.6 Other treaties

The Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination and the Convention on the Rights of the Child should only be included as substantive grounds where the facts bring the matter within their scope.

The available material does not justify assuming gender discrimination, racial discrimination or a child-rights issue. Other conventions concerning labour, refugees, statelessness or trafficking likewise require a substantiated factual connection.

7.7 International communications and remedies

Australia's acceptance of individual-communication procedures must be checked separately for each treaty and optional protocol.

A potential communication under the ICCPR Optional Protocol or CRPD Optional Protocol would require an assessment of:

- jurisdiction over the complainant and the state;
- whether the facts engage a protected right;
- exhaustion of available domestic remedies, subject to applicable exceptions;
- admissibility and timing requirements;
- duplication or prior-submission restrictions;
- the evidence and remedy sought.

A receipt number or acknowledgment from an international body does not establish acceptance of an individual communication, a finding of a treaty breach or an award of a remedy.

The appropriate conclusion is that international mechanisms may be worth investigating if the factual and procedural requirements are satisfied. Their present availability in McLean's particular circumstances cannot be confirmed without the original international correspondence and current procedural status.

8. Domestic legislation and legal mechanisms index

The following index consolidates the principal statutes identified by the mandate. Each link leads to an authoritative legislative source or the relevant legislation portal. For any proposed filing, the historical version and exact section must be checked against the date of the decision.

Legal issue	Legislation	Principal purpose

Workers' compensation	Safety, Rehabilitation and Compensation Act 1988 (Cth)	Employee status, injury, liability and compensation.
Legal aid	Legal Aid Commission Act 1979 (NSW)	Legal aid applications and specified review or appeal mechanisms.
Guardianship	Guardianship Act 1987 (NSW)	Guardianship orders and relevant statutory powers.
Financial administration	NSW Trustee and Guardian Act 2009 (NSW)	Administration of estates and relevant trustee powers.
NCAT proceedings	Civil and Administrative Tribunal Act 2013 (NSW)	Tribunal jurisdiction, procedure and review mechanisms.
Powers of attorney	Powers of Attorney Act	Powers of attorney and 2003 (NSW)	related legal arrangements.

Mental health	Mental Health Act 2007 (NSW)	Statutory mental-health processes and safeguards.
Commonwealth information access	Freedom of Information Act 1982 (Cth)	Access to Commonwealth government documents and review.
Privacy	Privacy Act 1988 (Cth)	Personal information obligations and applicable privacy remedies.
NSW information access	Government Information (Public Access) Act 2009 (NSW)	Access to NSW government information.
Federal administrative review	Administrative Review Tribunal Act 2024 (Cth)	Federal administrative-review framework.
Federal judicial review	Administrative Decisions	Review of covered

	(Judicial Review) Act 1977 (Cth)	administrative decisions on recognised grounds.
NSW administrative review	Administrative Decisions Review Act 1997 (NSW)	Review of specified NSW administrative decisions.
Discrimination	Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth)	Disability discrimination and related statutory obligations.
Human-rights complaints	Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth)	Relevant federal human-rights and discrimination complaint processes.
Employment	Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth)	Covered employment rights, protections and dispute mechanisms.
Civil liability	Civil Liability Act	Civil liability rules

	2002 (NSW)	within its scope.
Civil procedure	Civil Procedure Act 2005 (NSW)	Procedure in NSW civil proceedings.
Limitation periods	Limitation Act 1969 (NSW)	Limitation periods for claims within its scope.
NSW integrity	Independent Commission Against Corruption Act 1988 (NSW)	ICAC jurisdiction and statutory functions.
Commonwealth Ombudsman	Ombudsman Act 1976 (Cth)	Commonwealth Ombudsman powers and functions.
Commonwealth disclosures	Public Interest Disclosure Act 2013 (Cth)	Commonwealth public-interest disclosure framework.
NSW disclosures	Public Interest Disclosures Act 2022 (NSW)	NSW public-interest disclosure framework.

The relevant section of each Act must be identified in the context of the actual decision. A list of statutes does not establish that each one applies, that a breach occurred or that a particular remedy is available.

9. Comprehensive evidence matrix

The matrix below records the principal issues that can be identified from the available finding aids. It distinguishes what is known from what remains to be obtained. It does not pretend that inaccessible or unexamined PDFs have been read in full.

Issue and party	Document and date	Potential
Comcare employment status	Tribunal, [illegible]
	[illegible]
	[illegible]
Comcare Tribunal review	AAT reasons, 12 July 2023	Tribunal outcome in the particular compensation matter.	Any later appeal, judicial review or other proceeding.

NDIS Commission	[illegible]
Commonwealth Ombudsman	[illegible]
Federal Court General Counsel	Letter, 27 March 2023	Decision not to allocate a disclosure under the relevant process.	Deter-mina-tions, legal basis and [illegible] and dence. remains available.

FOI 2022/045	FOI chronology	Extent to which request scope, information, and release steps are set out in a clear and detailed review history.
Legal Aid NSW	Advice letter, 14 January 2026	Existence of correspondence about legal assistance.	Examines appealability, refusals, alternative, advice-only outcomes, and time limits. another decision.

NSW Trustee & Guardian	Document, 16 October 2024	Obtain effective administrative order assessment authority issued. financial administration.
NSW Trustee & Guardian	Vehicle-disposal decision, 14 November 2025	Records decision power disposal and vehicle, status. identified in the archive.
NCAT	Guardianship-related material,	Determine hearing, appointment

	January 2026	addressed status determination occurred.
Commonwealth Ombudsman
International human-rights correspondence

9.1 Evidence needed to complete the matrix

For each row, the completed record should include the exact document title, issuing body, date, reference number, direct original-file URL, relevant passage, applicable historical statutory provision, corroborating evidence, contradictory evidence, current status and any verified deadline.

Where only an index exists, the index should be linked and the document's location identified. A summary must not be presented as an original letter.

9.2 Contradictions register

A contradiction exists only where two sources make materially inconsistent claims about the same fact, event or legal issue. Different decisions under different statutes are not necessarily contradictions.

Potential conflict	Why it matters	Evidence required to resolve it
Comcare employment finding versus later employment-related correspondence	May involve different statutory definitions and purposes.	Complete letters, Tribunal reasons, underlying contracts and relevant legislation.
FOI decisions and later document releases	May reflect a change in scope, a new search or reconsideration rather than inconsistency.	Original request, first decision, review decision and subsequent release.
Legal Aid	A restricted	Full operative

correspondence and the assertion of a prohibition on representation	service or refusal of one grant is not necessarily a general ban.	letter, application, review decision and applicable policy.
Different descriptions of guardianship or financial-management status	A certificate, an order and a later decision may have different legal effects.	Operative orders, certificates, notices and tribunal decisions.
Different accounts of complaint outcomes	A complaint may have been referred, closed procedurally or determined on the merits.	Original complaint, referral, decision reasons and any subsequent review.

No conclusion about deliberate inconsistency, deception or collusion should be drawn without identifying the actual conflict and the evidence capable of resolving it.

10. Party-by-party accountability register

The following register identifies the principal bodies whose recorded roles are material to the investigation. Inclusion means that a body's decision or function is relevant to an issue; it does not mean wrongdoing has been established.

Body	Document-ed or reported role	Legal and ... investigation and potential remedy
Comcare	Determined	Verify the

	the workers' compensation claim and refused it on the employee-status ground.	1988 (Cth). history, any subsequent proceedings and whether any separate statutory route exists.
Administrative Appeals Tribunal	[illegible]
	[illegible]
NDIS Commission	Issued correspondence concerning its position on employment, according to	[illegible]

	the archive.	law.
Federal Court of Australia	General Counsel correspondence concerned allocation of a public-interest disclosure.	Identify the internal Disclosure Act 2013 (Cth), as applicable. route. Do not treat correspondence as a judicial judgment.
Commonwealth Ombudsman	Establishes the Ombudsman's role and functions under the Public Interest Disclosure Act 2013 (Cth) when considering complaint handling.
OAIC	Identified in	Freedom of	Obtain the

	the archive's FOI review chronology.	Information Act 1982 (Cth); Privacy Act 1988 (Cth), where relevant.	complete review record and determine whether any information-access or privacy process remains open.
Legal Aid NSW	Issued advice correspon-dence in January 2026.	Legal Aid NSW is established by the Legal Aid Commission Act 1979 (NSW) and has statutory functions, policies, and available alternatives.
NSW Trustee & Guardian	Identified in financial-administra-tion correspon-dence and a vehicle-	NSW Trustee and Guardian is a statutory authority, and its powers and review status of disposal decision.	each decision.

NCAT	Identified in guardianship-related material.	Civil and Administrative Tribunal Act 2013 (NSW) and relevant substantive legislation.	Establish whether an application, hearing, order or final determination exists.
Australian Government departments	Identified across FOI, correspondence and employment-related material.	Applicable Commonwealth administrative law.	Identify each Department to ask specific questions and request evidence assessing responsibility.
NSW integrity bodies	Potentially relevant if the evidence concerns conduct within their	Relevant NSW integrity legislation.	Establish jurisdiction and statutory thresholds before jurisdiction.		recommend-ing a complaint.

Human-rights bodies	Potentially relevant to a properly framed discrimina-tion complaint or international communica-tion.	Relevant to admissibility, jurisdiction, and procedural readiness.	Relevant to admissibility, jurisdiction, and evidence and accepted practice.

Accountability standard

For each organisation, the final evidentiary record should identify the actual decision-maker, the source document, the precise act or omission, the applicable law, the response provided and the available review mechanism.

Public officials should be named only when their official role and recorded conduct are relevant. An official's involvement in an adverse decision does not itself establish personal wrongdoing.

11. Limitation periods and procedural risks

Limitation periods require urgent attention because the oldest matters identified in the archive date back to 2021.

The following is a prioritisation framework, not a declaration that a particular claim remains open.

Matter	Main procedural risk	Immediate verification
Comcare and AAT decision	Historical review and appeal periods may have	Obtain the complete Tribunal reasons, any expired.	appeal records and the applicable transitional rules.

Legal Aid NSW decision	Any ordinary appeal period associated with a January 2026 decision may have elapsed.	Confirm the decision type, date received, any appeal already lodged and any extension mechanism.
FOI and OAIC matters	Statutory review deadlines depend on the decision and notification date.	Obtain each decision and calculate the relevant deadline under the historical legislation.
Guardianship and financial administration	Review periods depend on the order, decision and applicable statute.	Obtain operative orders, decision notices and any NCAT application or determination.
Ombudsman	The availability of	Read the complaint restrictions	reconsideration depends on the actual restriction and governing procedure.	complete letter and identify the specified review or complaint process.

Civil compensation claims	Accrual dates, limitation periods and statutory prerequisites vary by cause of action.	Identify the cause of action and obtain advice on the exact deadline.
Discrimination complaints	Time limits vary by statute and forum.	Identify the alleged act, the correct complaint body and the applicable time provisions.
International communications	Admissibility, exhaustion and other procedural requirements apply.	Establish the applicable optional protocol, domestic proceedings and any prior international communication.

The applicable Commonwealth or NSW statute must be checked in the version relevant to the conduct and decision. A complaint to an Ombudsman, a new FOI request or correspondence with an agency does not automatically suspend the limitation period for a separate civil claim.

If a deadline may have expired, the investigation should determine whether the relevant law permits an extension, reconsideration or another remedy. It must not assume that an extension will be granted.

12. Remedies and practical priorities

The priority is to preserve the strongest documentary record, establish the current status of each matter and avoid losing any remaining procedural rights.

Priority 1 — Obtain the complete operative decisions

Collect the full Comcare refusal and reconsideration, AAT reasons, Federal Court General Counsel letter, Ombudsman decisions, FOI decisions, Legal Aid letter and relevant NSW Trustee & Guardian and NCAT records. Preserve the original files and record their source URLs.

Priority 2 — Prepare a deadline register

For each decision, record the date made, date received, review body, governing provision, deadline, any extension power and whether an application has already been lodged.

Priority 3 — Resolve the Legal Aid question

Establish the actual outcome of the January 2026 letter and whether any review or alternative assistance is available. Separate a complaint about service quality from an appeal against a grant decision.

Priority 4 — Complete the FOI evidence chain

Compare the original request, decision, internal review, OAIC review and subsequent releases. Record precisely which questions were answered and which remain unresolved.

Priority 5 — Verify guardianship and financial-administration powers

Obtain the current operative orders and each challenged financial decision. Establish the statutory power, reasons, notification and available review process.

Priority 6 — Assess international procedures only after the facts are organised

Map each alleged event to a specific treaty article, the domestic remedy pursued, the relevant optional protocol and the admissibility requirements. Do not treat a general international correspondence reference as proof of an accepted treaty complaint.

Suggested official starting points

- Legal Aid NSW
- NSW Civil and Administrative Tribunal
- NSW Trustee & Guardian
- Commonwealth Ombudsman
- Office of the Australian Information Commissioner
- Comcare
- Federal Register of Legislation
- NSW legislation
- Australian Human Rights Commission
- UN Treaty Collection

- Australian Treaties Database

13. Public-facing archive statement

The following statement is suitable for the Barran Dodger archive. It presents the importance of the documentary record without turning unresolved allegations into purported official findings.

BARRAN DODGER — DOCUMENTARY RECORD, ACCESS TO JUSTICE AND ACCOUNTABILITY

Dr Richard William McLean — Barran Dodger

This archive preserves a substantial documentary record concerning my experiences, my dealings with government and administrative bodies, my attempts to obtain answers and remedies, and the legal and human-rights questions that remain important to me.

The record includes official correspondence, government-information requests, administrative decisions, tribunal material, public-interest disclosure correspondence, financial-administration documents and my own testimony and analysis.

The documents must be read in their original context. An administrative refusal is not the same as a judicial determination. A complaint is not the same as a finding. A failure to resolve an issue does not, by itself, establish deliberate wrongdoing. But the absence of a final determination does not make the underlying questions unworthy of examination.

My central concern is the practical availability of justice. When a person faces several interconnected legal and administrative disputes, the combined effect of jurisdictional limits, procedural requirements, financial hardship and difficulties obtaining affordable legal assistance may make it extraordinarily difficult to pursue answers and remedies.

The archive therefore invites readers to examine the documentary record, compare the original correspondence, follow the chronology and identify the questions that remain unanswered.

The workers' compensation proceedings, public-interest disclosure correspondence, information-access requests, guardianship and financial-administration material, and legal-assistance correspondence each require careful examination under their own legal frameworks. They should not be collapsed into a single unsupported conclusion, nor should their separate outcomes obscure the practical effect that multiple unresolved issues may have on one person's life.

Australia has ratified international human-rights treaties concerning civil and political rights, economic and social rights, disability rights and protection against torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment. Those treaties establish important standards. Their relevance to a particular event depends on the facts, the provision engaged and the legal mechanism through which the obligation may be applied.

This archive is intended to preserve evidence, make records accessible, clarify the legal questions and support informed examination of possible remedies. It distinguishes original documents from commentary and identifies where further corroboration or legal assessment is needed.

The purpose is documentary preservation, access to justice and accountability through evidence. The record should be assessed by what the original documents establish, what they leave unanswered and what lawful avenues remain available to address those unanswered questions.

Original repository: https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger

Public archive: https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/

Rebuilt archive: https://wezzo72.github.io/barrandodger-rebuild/

14. Final conclusions

14.1 What the evidence supports

The identifiable documentary record supports the conclusion that McLean has pursued multiple legal and administrative pathways and that some of those pathways resulted in formal adverse decisions or refusals to progress particular complaints.

The Comcare and Tribunal materials provide a clear example of a matter that reached a formal determination. The public-interest disclosure and FOI material demonstrate the importance of distinguishing the jurisdiction and procedural scope of each administrative process. The Legal Aid correspondence, guardianship-related records and financial-administration decisions raise additional questions that require examination of the complete operative documents.

These matters are sufficiently concrete to justify a structured legal and documentary review. They should not be reduced to a generic biography or a simple list of allegations.

14.2 What the evidence does not yet establish

The material examined does not establish that every alleged act of institutional detriment occurred, that all adverse decisions were unlawful, that every complaint remains open, that a particular compensation claim is presently viable or that a treaty breach has been legally established.

Nor does the absence of a verified current proceeding establish that no proceeding exists. The report also cannot certify the current status of every criminal, civil, administrative or international matter without the relevant official records.

Those limitations are evidentiary boundaries, not conclusions that the underlying concerns are false.

14.3 Institutional accountability

The strongest accountability analysis will come from reconstructing each decision, identifying its legal basis, comparing it with related correspondence and testing whether the combined processes left a material question unresolved.

Where records reveal repeated jurisdictional barriers, conflicting explanations, inadequate reasons or a lack of realistic alternative assistance, those patterns should be documented precisely. Where the evidence is insufficient to establish deliberate wrongdoing, the report should say so.

This approach permits strong criticism of documented decisions and systemic shortcomings without claiming more than the evidence proves.

14.4 International human rights

The ICCPR, ICESCR, Convention against Torture and CRPD provide potentially relevant legal standards. The CRPD's provisions on access to justice, equality, legal capacity, independent living and social protection are particularly relevant to investigating whether a person with disability-related support needs could participate effectively in legal and administrative processes.

But a treaty-based conclusion requires a demonstrated connection between a particular event and a particular obligation. Australia's international responsibility, the interpretation of domestic legislation and a directly enforceable domestic cause of action are distinct questions.

14.5 Access to justice

The Legal Aid issue deserves particular attention because the practical capacity to obtain advice may affect the ability to pursue every other issue in the report.

The decisive questions are whether assistance was actually refused or restricted, why that decision was made, whether review rights remain available, whether alternative assistance was realistic and whether any procedural rights are at risk.

The documentary record must be used to answer those questions, rather than assuming either that an unlawful exclusion occurred or that formal eligibility rules resolved the practical problem.

14.6 Overall assessment

The archive provides a meaningful documentary foundation for further investigation of employment and compensation issues, administrative accountability, information access, financial administration, legal assistance and potentially applicable human-rights protections.

Its greatest value lies in making the underlying documents accessible and enabling readers to trace claims back to their sources. Its strongest legal conclusions will be those that connect an original document to a precise factual proposition, a verified legal rule and a specific available remedy.

The immediate priorities are to verify the complete operative decisions, establish the present status of each matter, audit limitation periods, clarify the Legal Aid outcome, obtain the relevant guardianship and financial-administration orders, and complete the source-by-source evidence matrix.

The central question remains practical and consequential: when a person pursues multiple interconnected disputes but encounters repeated procedural barriers and difficulty obtaining affordable representation, what effective and lawful routes remain available to obtain answers, challenge decisions and pursue any remedy supported by the evidence?

That question warrants rigorous documentary investigation. The answer must come from the original records, the applicable law and a clear account of what is established, what remains unresolved and what can still be done.

Research and publication note: This report is a legal research and documentary-analysis aid, not a solicitor's opinion, an official determination or a certification that every repository file and external record has been independently verified. Before publication as a final forensic legal brief, the direct document links, historical legislative versions, complete decision reasons, current proceeding status and applicable deadlines must be checked against the authoritative originals.

BARRAN DODGER / DR RICHARD WILLIAM MCLEAN

Comprehensive Legal, Administrative, Human-Rights and Documentary Investigation

The documentary record, the correspondence, the allegations, the unanswered questions, and the human being behind the archive

Prepared as a consolidated documentary finding aid and investigation framework

Purpose: To preserve a coherent account of the documentary record; identify legal and administrative questions; map the institutions, decisions and potential review pathways involved; distinguish primary documents from testimony and analysis; establish a practical investigation plan; and keep the need for immediate humanitarian assistance visible alongside the pursuit of accountability.

IMPORTANT SCOPE AND STATUS STATEMENT

This report consolidates the archive information, chronology, correspondence references, legal questions and reported events available in the material supplied for this investigation. It is a documentary finding aid and investigation framework. It is not a certified forensic audit, a complete catalogue of every file in the GitHub repository, legal advice, or a claim that every allegation has been independently verified. Dates, reference numbers, quotations, procedural outcomes and descriptions of correspondence should be checked against the original records before they are represented as independently confirmed.

The distinction between an allegation, an original document, an inference and an official finding is essential. It does not diminish the importance of preserving the evidence or investigating unanswered questions.

The archive is intended to make the record accessible, traceable and open to examination.

PRIMARY ARCHIVE LINKS

- Original public archive: https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/
- Original GitHub evidence repository: https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger
- Main archive index: https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger/blob/main/index.html
- Rebuilt archive: https://wezzo72.github.io/barrandodger-rebuild/
- Preservation-copy folder: https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger/tree/main/barrandodger.com%20website%20backup

The original archive and its existing publication settings should be preserved. The rebuilt site is a separate project and should not be treated as a replacement for the original unless the archive owner expressly decides otherwise.

———

SECTION 1 — THE SIGNIFICANCE OF THE ARCHIVE

The Barran Dodger archive is presented as a public documentary record concerning Dr Richard William McLean's first-person account of alleged institutional detriment, whistleblower-related issues, administrative decisions, disability and human-rights concerns, access to justice, financial insecurity and the pursuit of accountability.

Its public-interest value lies in bringing together records that may otherwise remain dispersed across agencies, correspondence systems, administrative proceedings, personal files and separate web pages.

The archive can serve several distinct purposes:

1. Preservation: retaining documents and pages that might otherwise become inaccessible.
2. Chronology: placing correspondence, decisions and responses in a traceable sequence.
3. Evidence discovery: helping readers locate original records and follow references.
4. Accountability research: identifying questions that remain unanswered and the bodies that may hold relevant records.
5. Public communication: explaining the significance of the record without requiring readers to begin with hundreds of disconnected documents.
6. Humanitarian communication: showing that the documentary issues concern a living person with practical needs, not merely an abstract administrative dispute.

The archive should not be judged solely by the number of files, pages, downloads, timestamps or references it contains. Its strength depends on whether readers can identify a document, determine where it came from, understand what it says, establish its date and context, and distinguish its actual contents from interpretations made about it.

A document can establish that a letter was sent or a decision was made without necessarily proving every allegation surrounding that event. Equally, an unanswered question should not be presented as though it has already been resolved.

The objective is to preserve the complete trail and make meaningful examination possible.

SECTION 2 — WORKERS' COMPENSATION AND EMPLOYMENT STATUS

2.1 Reported issue

The archive describes a dispute concerning employment status and eligibility for workers' compensation under the Commonwealth's workers' compensation framework.

The reported chronology includes:

- A Comcare refusal dated 26 May 2021, said to have raised whether Dr McLean was an employee for the purposes of the relevant legislation.

- A letter from the NDIS Commission dated 3 June 2021, reportedly stating that its process did not make Dr McLean an employee of the NDIS Commission.
- A later letter attributed to Scott Treadwell, General Counsel of the Federal Court, dated 27 March 2023 in the chronology available for this report, which Dr McLean understands as relevant to his asserted employment relationship with the Department of Social Services.
- A reported Administrative Appeals Tribunal proceeding identified as AAT file 2021/7478, with a decision date reported as 12 July 2023.

These descriptions are leads for document verification. The complete letters, exact wording, relevant statutory provisions and formal reasons should be examined together before a definitive conclusion is drawn.

2.2 Legal framework

The principal starting point is the Safety, Rehabilitation and Compensation Act 1988 (Cth), including provisions concerning the definition of employee and the statutory requirements for a compensable injury.

The relevant questions may include:

- Who was alleged to be the employer?
- What legal or working relationship existed?
- Which statutory definition of employee was applied?
- What facts did the decision-maker accept or reject?
- Was the claim rejected because of employment status, injury, causation, notice, limitation, jurisdiction or another reason?
- What did the later correspondence actually say?
- Did the later correspondence address the same legal question, or a different one?
- What reasons were provided by the tribunal?
- What review or appeal rights were stated in the decision?

2.3 Evidence table

Evidence item	Reported significance	Verification required
Comcare refusal, 26 May 2021	Employment-status or claim-eligibility issue	Complete decision, reasons, statutory provisions and review-rights notice
NDIS	Describes the	Full letter, context

Commission letter, 3 June 2021	Commission's position regarding employment	and precise scope
Federal Court General Counsel correspondence, reported 27 March 2023	Potentially relevant to the asserted relationship with DSS	Original signed correspondence and exact wording
AAT file 2021/7478	Reported tribunal proceedings	Application, submissions, evidence, orders and reasons
AAT decision, reported 12 July 2023	Potential determination of issues in dispute	Official decision and confirmation of date and outcome

2.4 Practical investigation plan

Create a single employment-status file containing every relevant letter, claim form, decision, submission and tribunal document. Record the proposition each document supports and whether it directly addresses the same legal question as the other documents.

Do not treat a letter as a final legal determination unless its language and legal effect support that interpretation. If documents appear inconsistent, identify the exact passages and explain the inconsistency rather than simply asserting that one institution contradicted another.

SECTION 3 — ADMINISTRATIVE REVIEW AND THE TRANSITION FROM THE AAT TO THE ART

The Administrative Appeals Tribunal was replaced by the Administrative Review Tribunal on 14 October 2024.

Official starting point: https://www.art.gov.au/

The transition is relevant to understanding historical proceedings, but it does not by itself mean that an old decision can be reopened or that a new review right exists.

The investigation should establish:

1. The exact decision under review.
2. The decision-maker and statutory source of the decision.
3. The date the decision was made and the date it was received.
4. Whether the AAT issued reasons, orders or procedural directions.
5. Whether an appeal, judicial review or other statutory avenue was available.
6. Whether any deadline applied and whether it expired.
7. Whether any extension mechanism exists.
8. Whether any later decision or new evidence creates a separate procedural question.

The correct next step depends on the actual decision and governing law. Historical tribunal records should be preserved as issued and not rewritten to reflect later interpretations.

SECTION 4 — PUBLIC INTEREST DISCLOSURES AND OMBUDSMAN MATTERS

4.1 Reported concerns

The archive refers to a public-interest-disclosure-related matter identified as PID-2021-400008-R and correspondence with the Commonwealth Ombudsman. It also refers to a service-restriction letter dated 8 August 2025.

These are separate issues that should not be collapsed into one conclusion. A referral, a public-interest disclosure, a complaint, an investigation, a finding and a restriction on services can have different legal meanings.

4.2 Legal starting points

- Public Interest Disclosure Act 2013 (Cth)
- Ombudsman Act 1976 (Cth)
- Official Commonwealth Ombudsman website: https://www.ombudsman.gov.au/

4.3 Questions for the documentary record

- What disclosure or complaint was originally made?
- To whom was it made?
- What allegations or information were included?
- Was it accepted as a public interest disclosure under the applicable legislation?
- Was it referred to another body?
- What action, if any, was taken?
- What written outcome was supplied?
- What exactly did the 8 August 2025 letter restrict?
- What reasons and review rights were given?
- Was the restriction limited to a particular service, subject or period?

A service restriction should be quoted and described according to its actual terms. It should not automatically be characterised as proof of retaliation, wrongdoing or suppression. If the surrounding chronology raises a concern about the restriction, that concern should be stated as a question supported by the dated records.

SECTION 5 — FREEDOM OF INFORMATION AND ACCESS TO GOVERNMENT RECORDS

5.1 Reported FOI history

The archive refers to an FOI matter identified as FOI/2022/045, an OAIC reference RQ22/00794 and a reported review involving approximately 1,187 PM&C Outlook items. The available account also says that an initial response indicated that no documents were found and that five documents were later released on 8 October 2024. These details require confirmation against the original requests, decision letters and released documents.

5.2 Legal framework

- Freedom of Information Act 1982 (Cth)
- Privacy Act 1988 (Cth)
- Government Information (Public Access) Act 2009 (NSW), where applicable
- Office of the Australian Information Commissioner: https://www.oaic.gov.au/

5.3 Evidence and search table

Issue	Records needed	Question to answer
Original request	Full FOI application and attachments	What records were requested, for which period and which systems?
Initial response	Original decision and search statement	Was the outcome no documents, refusal, transfer or another result?
Subsequent correspondence	Review letters and emails	Did the scope or search method change?
Reported Outlook review	OAIC correspondence and search records	What did the figure of approximately 1,187 items refer to?

Release dated 8 October 2024	Decision letter and five released documents	What documents were released, and what did they establish?
Exemptions and redactions	Decision schedule and reasons	What statutory grounds were applied?
Search adequacy	Search descriptions, custodians and systems	Were reasonable searches conducted for the scope of the request?

A later release of documents may justify asking why those documents were not located earlier, but it does not automatically establish that an earlier response was dishonest or unlawful. The scope, search date, custodians, systems, request wording and legal grounds must be compared.

The objective is to construct a clear, document-by-document record of what was requested, what was searched, what was found, what was withheld and what was later released.

SECTION 6 — NSW TRUSTEE & GUARDIAN, FINANCIAL ADMINISTRATION AND ESSENTIAL NEEDS

6.1 Reported circumstances

The archive and related account describe correspondence with NSW Trustee & Guardian concerning financial administration and practical needs. Reported matters include:

- An offer or proposal involving an additional $100 per week.
- An explanation that receipt of a full pension affected the availability of additional funding.
- Advice that the agency did not source accommodation.
- A request for assistance with an electricity bill of approximately $200.
- Questions concerning vehicle disposal and related correspondence.
- A review involving the NSW Civil and Administrative Tribunal (NCAT).

The precise dates of some vehicle-related correspondence are inconsistent across the available notes. The original letters must determine the correct dates. No date should be silently chosen merely to make the chronology appear complete.

6.2 Legal starting points

- NSW Trustee and Guardian Act 2009 (NSW)
- Guardianship Act 1987 (NSW)
- Applicable NCAT orders and review procedures
- NSW legislation: https://legislation.nsw.gov.au/

6.3 Financial administration evidence table

Issue	Evidence required	Practical significance
Appointment or authority	Current and historical orders	Establishes the scope and duration of authority
Weekly allowance	Written offer, calculation and correspondence	Clarifies what was proposed and the reasons given
Essential bills	Electricity bill and written request for payment	Establishes the request, amount and response
Accommodation	Correspondence concerning housing responsibilities	Clarifies what assistance was and was not offered
Vehicle disposal	Ownership records, authority, correspondence	Establishes the decision, process and financial effect and transaction documents

NCAT review	Application, evidence, hearing record, orders and reasons	Establishes the matters considered and outcome
Current financial position	Relevant statements and documented essential expenses	Supports a practical plan for necessities

6.4 Human consequences

Financial administration is not an abstract exercise. Decisions about money can affect food, electricity, communications, transport, accommodation and the ability to obtain advice or maintain contact with support services.

The report should identify concrete unmet needs separately from the legal dispute. Where a person needs immediate assistance, the request should identify the actual item or service required, its approximate cost, urgency, safe method of contact and any relevant supporting document.

SECTION 7 — LEGAL AID AND ACCESS TO REPRESENTATION

The archive refers to a Legal Aid NSW letter dated 14 January 2026. The exact wording and procedural context must be checked before characterising its effect.

The investigation should distinguish between:

- Refusal of a particular application for assistance.
- A decision that a particular matter falls outside the service's guidelines.
- A decision concerning a particular type of representation.
- A request for further information.
- A complaint or review concerning the decision.
- Any broader restriction, if one is expressly stated in the original record.

A refusal of one application should not be described as a permanent or universal ban unless the actual document establishes that scope.

Relevant starting point: Legal Aid Commission Act 1979 (NSW) and the official Legal Aid NSW website.

Questions to resolve

1. What assistance was requested?

2. What matter or proceedings did the request concern?
3. What reason was given for the outcome?
4. Were internal review, reconsideration or complaint options identified?
5. Was further information requested or provided?
6. What practical alternatives were available, and were they accessible in the circumstances?

The purpose is to document the precise decision and its real-world consequences, not to assume a wider restriction than the letter supports.

SECTION 8 — DISABILITY, MENTAL HEALTH AND PROCEDURAL FAIRNESS

Dr McLean has reported multiple psychiatric hospitalisations, with the current account referring to sixteen hospitalisations. This is a first-person report until the number, dates and circumstances are reconciled against relevant records.

The purpose of recording this history is to preserve the account and understand its relevance to the chronology, access to services, communication, decision-making and the consequences of administrative processes. It is not to use a health history to dismiss the person's evidence or to infer that a disputed allegation is true or false.

Relevant legal frameworks

- Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth)
- Mental Health Act 2007 (NSW)
- Guardianship Act 1987 (NSW)
- Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (CRPD)

Evidence plan

Where available and appropriate, preserve:

- Admission and discharge records.
- Dates and identities of relevant services.
- Any formal orders or statutory authorities.
- Correspondence about consent, representation, communication and decision-making.
- Records concerning accommodation and support needs.
- Complaints and responses about treatment or access to services.
- The person's own contemporaneous account, kept separate from clinical records and later analysis.

Clinical records should be handled with care and shared only where appropriate. Public publication should be limited to information necessary for the stated purpose, with private third-party information protected.

SECTION 9 — INTERNATIONAL HUMAN RIGHTS FRAMEWORK

International human-rights instruments provide a framework for identifying the rights potentially engaged by the reported circumstances. The legal relevance of any particular provision depends on the facts, applicable jurisdiction, domestic law and the available complaint or review mechanism.

Potentially relevant instruments include:

- International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR).
- International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (ICESCR).
- Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (CRPD).

- Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (CAT), where the relevant legal elements and facts arise.
- Other treaties where their subject matter and jurisdiction are genuinely applicable.

Official starting points:

- UN human-rights instruments: https://www.ohchr.org/en/instruments-and-mechanisms
- Australian treaty information: https://www.dfat.gov.au/international-relations/treaties
- Australian Human Rights Commission: https://humanrights.gov.au/

CRPD provisions to examine

Depending on the facts and the question under investigation, relevant provisions may include:

- Article 5 — Equality and non-discrimination.
- Article 9 — Accessibility.
- Article 12 — Equal recognition before the law.
- Article 13 — Access to justice.
- Article 14 — Liberty and security of person.
- Article 16 — Freedom from exploitation, violence and abuse.
- Article 19 — Living independently and being included in the community.
- Article 25 — Health.
- Article 28 — Adequate standard of living and social protection.

These provisions should be mapped to specific events and evidence. A treaty reference alone does not prove a breach. Ratification of a treaty also does not mean that every provision automatically creates an independently enforceable domestic cause of action.

Any international complaint mechanism must be assessed against its jurisdiction, admissibility requirements, time limits and applicable rules, including whether domestic remedies must first be pursued.

SECTION 10 — DOMESTIC LEGAL FRAMEWORK MAP

The following laws are potential starting points for research. Their inclusion does not mean that every law applies to every event or that a breach has been established.

Legal framework	Potential relevance
Safety, Rehabilitation and Compensation Act 1988 (Cth)	Workers' compensation and statutory employment questions
Administrative Review Tribunal Act 2024 (Cth)	Current administrative review framework
Administrative Decisions (Judicial Review) Act 1977 (Cth)	Judicial review of certain administrative decisions

(Cth)
Freedom of Information Act 1982 (Cth)	Access to Commonwealth government records
Privacy Act 1988 (Cth)	Personal information and privacy issues
Public Interest Disclosure Act 2013 (Cth)	Commonwealth public interest disclosures
Ombudsman Act 1976 (Cth)	Commonwealth Ombudsman functions
Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth)	Disability discrimination questions
Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth)	Relevant federal human-rights complaint mechanisms
Government Information (Public Access) Act 2009 (NSW)	Access to NSW government information
Guardianship Act 1987 (NSW)	Guardianship and related decision-making questions
NSW Trustee and Guardian Act 2009 (NSW)	Trustee and financial-management functions
Mental Health Act 2007 (NSW)	Relevant mental-health statutory processes
Independent Commission Against Corruption Act 1988 (NSW)	Potential integrity issues within its jurisdiction

1983 (NSW)
Public Interest Disclosures Act 2022 (NSW)	NSW public interest disclosures, where applicable

Official legislation repositories:

- Commonwealth legislation: https://www.legislation.gov.au/
- NSW legislation: https://legislation.nsw.gov.au/

Before relying on a provision, confirm the version in force on the date of the event, the relevant statutory definitions, exceptions, jurisdiction and time limits.

SECTION 11 — CONSOLIDATED CHRONOLOGY

The chronology below records reported dates and events from the available archive notes. It is a working chronology, not a verified statement that every event has been independently confirmed.

Date	Reported event	Verification priority
2020	PhD at Victoria University reportedly completed	Degree record and exact award date, if relevant
26 May 2021	Comcare refusal concerning a workers' compensation claim	Original decision and reasons
3 June 2021	NDIS Commission letter concerning employment status	Original letter

2021	AAT proceeding reportedly commenced or active	Official file and procedural history
18 November 2021	Ombudsman/ PID-related event reported	Original disclosure or correspondence
2022	FOI/2022/045 matter reported	Request and original response
12 December 2022	PM office correspondence reportedly stated email was not forwarded	Original email and context
27 March 2023	Federal Court General Counsel letter attributed to Scott Treadwell	Original letter and exact date
12 July 2023	AAT decision reported	Official decision, orders and reasons
19 September 2023	Attorney-General's Department referral	Original referral and recipient details

	referral MC23-028244, reportedly signed by A. Riley, Security Law Section
8 October 2024	Five FOI documents reportedly released	Release letter and complete document set
14 October 2024	ART replaced the AAT	Official transition information
16 October 2024	NSW Trustee-related correspondence date reported in one account	Original correspondence; date requires confirmation
14 November 2024	Further NSW Trustee-related correspondence date reported in one account	Original correspondence; date requires confirmation
6 February 2025	Attorney-General's Department letter MC25-000321 reportedly	Original letter and subject

	reportedly addressed to the Victorian Minister for Police
8 August 2025	Commonwealth Ombudsman service-restriction letter reported	Full letter, scope and review rights
14 January 2026	Legal Aid NSW letter reported	Original letter and decision scope
January 2026	NCAT materials reported	Applications, orders, evidence and reasons
28 September 2026	Complete Site Index reportedly generated	Original index and metadata
2 October 2026	OpenTimestamps records reportedly created for archive documents	Original timestamp proofs and verification results

Chronology rule: Where a date conflicts with another source, preserve both references in the working register until the original documents resolve the conflict. Do not silently correct, merge or discard the discrepancy.

SECTION 12 — INSTITUTIONAL ACCOUNTABILITY AND RECORDS REGISTER

The following register identifies bodies mentioned in the archive context and the records or questions that may be relevant. Inclusion means that an institution appears in the reported documentary trail; it is not a finding that the institution acted unlawfully or caused detriment.

Institution or body	Potential role in the record	Records or questions to identify
Comcare	Workers' compensation claim	Claim file, refusal, reasons and review rights
Former AAT / current ART	Administrative review	Applications, evidence, orders, reasons and procedural history
NDIS Commission	Correspondence about employment or other issues	Full correspondence and scope of the statement
Federal Court of Australia	Correspondence attributed to its General Counsel	Original letter and legal context
Commonwealth Ombudsman	Complaint, PID or service-restriction matters	Complaints, referrals, investigation records and final correspondence

OAIC	FOI review and privacy-related matters	Review file, correspondence, search issues and outcome
PM&C / Prime Minister's office	Reported email and FOI records	Original email, forwarding history and search results
Attorney-General's Department	Reported referrals and correspondence	Complete letters, file records and responses
Legal Aid NSW	Application for legal assistance	Application, decision, reasons and review options
NSW Trustee & Guardian	Financial administration	Orders, accounts, requests, decisions and correspondence
NCAT	Review of relevant decisions or orders	Application, hearing materials, orders and reasons
NSW integrity bodies	Potential matters within statutory	Jurisdictional assessment and jurisdiction	any actual referral or response

Australian Human Rights Commission	Potential discrimination or human-rights complaints	Eligibility, relevant facts and available process
Housing and humanitarian services	Practical support needs	Current eligibility, requests, referral details and outcomes

The register should be updated only when a specific record, referral, response or finding is identified. A body should not be described as having investigated or accepted an allegation merely because its name appears in a letter or referral.

SECTION 13 — CONTRADICTION AND UNRESOLVED-QUESTION REGISTER

The purpose of this register is to make disputes visible and testable.

ID	Issue	What must be compared	Status until verified
C-01	Employment status and compensa-tion	Unresolved decision, any legal question	Consent-ter/legal correspon-dence, tribunal materials

C-02	Initial FOI response and later document release	Original request, search records, later decision and released documents	Requires comparison
C-03	Referral and eventual outcome	Referral letter, receiving body's acknowl-edgement and final response	Outcome unconfirmed
C-04	Legal Aid decision and practical access to representa-tion	Scope of application, refusal reasons and review options
C-05	Financial administra-tion and	Order, absence reasons

	essential needs	denial notifications and requests for assistance
C-06	Timestamp and document-integrity claims	Original files, hashes, timestamp proofs and verification results	Technical verification required
C-07	Conflicting correspondence dates	Original letters and email metadata	Date reconciliation required
C-08	Alleged institutional detriment	Event-specific primary documents, testimony and responses	Claim-by-claim assessment required

Each entry should ultimately contain:

1. The precise proposition in dispute.
2. The strongest document supporting each account.
3. The exact passage or page reference.
4. Any response from the other party.
5. The difference between the accounts.
6. What evidence could resolve the difference.
7. The current status and date last reviewed.

A contradiction register is not a list of proven wrongdoing. It is a disciplined way of recording what the documents establish, where accounts differ and what remains unknown.

SECTION 14 — DOCUMENT INTEGRITY, PRESERVATION AND ARCHIVE MANAGEMENT

The archive's preservation material reportedly includes rendered HTML pages, PDFs, links, a manifest, a URL list and a crawl script. The repository should be inspected directly before the contents or completeness of the preservation copy are certified.

Reported preservation-copy folder:
https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger/tree/main/barrandodger.com%20website%20backup

Recommended catalogue fields

Field	Purpose
Archive ID	Stable identifier for each item
Document title	Human-readable title
Original filename	Exact stored filename
Issuing body or author	Who created or issued the document, if known
Recipient	Who received it, where relevant
Document date	Date shown on the document
Received or published date	Date obtained or made public
Source URL or location	Traceable location of the record
Document type	Letter, decision, email, report, submission or other
Page count	Basic completeness check

File size	Preservation metadata
SHA-256 hash	Identification of the precise file version
Related records	Cross-references to other items
OCR status	Whether text extraction succeeded
Verification status	Original, copy, scan, extract or unverified
Notes	Missing pages, illegibility, redactions or context

What integrity checks can and cannot establish

A SHA-256 hash can establish whether a file matches a particular set of bytes. It does not, by itself, prove who created the file, whether its contents are true, or whether the file is complete.

A timestamping proof may help establish that particular data existed in a particular form by a verifiable point in time, subject to the timestamp system and its validation. A pending Bitcoin confirmation should not be described as a confirmed Bitcoin timestamp.

Preserve original files separately from OCR text, annotations, redacted public copies and later corrected versions. Never overwrite the only preserved copy of a source document.

SECTION 15 — THE COMPLETE PDF CATALOGUE AND SEARCHABLE SNAPSHOT

A complete repository-wide inventory remains a separate technical task. The existence of a public archive or preservation folder does not prove that every PDF has been enumerated, opened, indexed, OCR-processed or checked for completeness.

The required deliverables for a genuine full scan are:

1. A complete list of files under the relevant repository and archive folders.
2. A list of every PDF, with its path, filename and file size.
3. Extracted metadata where available.
4. Text extraction or OCR status for each PDF.
5. Document title, author or issuing body where identifiable.
6. Document date and recipient where identifiable.
7. Reference numbers, case numbers and agency names.
8. A searchable index linking extracted text to the original file.

9. Duplicate and near-duplicate reports.
10. Missing, unreadable, encrypted or damaged file reports.
11. A chronology cross-reference.
12. An institution and person-name index, with appropriate privacy safeguards.
13. A document-level hash register.
14. A list of documents cited by each substantive claim in the public finding aid.

Status: This report does not claim that the full repository scan or complete PDF catalogue has already been run. That status should remain explicit until the actual files have been processed and the resulting catalogue checked.

A complete inventory should distinguish between a PDF that exists, a PDF whose text was extracted, a PDF that was visually inspected, and a PDF whose contents have been independently authenticated. These are different levels of examination.

SECTION 16 — LIMITATIONS, DEADLINES AND PROCEDURAL PRIORITIES

Legal and administrative options can be affected by strict deadlines. A complaint to one body does not automatically suspend the deadline for appealing a separate decision. An FOI review, an Ombudsman complaint, a Legal Aid application and a judicial review application may involve different legal requirements.

For every decision or proposed action, record:

- Decision-maker.
- Exact decision.
- Governing legislation.
- Date of decision.
- Date received.
- Review or appeal pathway.
- Applicable time limit.
- Any extension provisions.
- Whether a filing has already been made.
- Whether a stay or interim order is relevant.
- Practical consequences of delay.

Where a time limit may be running, verify it from the actual decision and current legislation as a priority. Do not assume that a deadline has been extended or that a historical matter remains open simply because related correspondence continues.

SECTION 17 — COMPENSATION, LOSS AND CAUSATION

The archive is intended in part to support accountability and the pursuit of appropriate remedies. Any compensation assessment must connect a legal basis to the relevant conduct, causation, loss and available remedy.

The number of documents, downloads, allegations or agencies mentioned does not itself establish a monetary entitlement.

Loss and remedy framework

Category	Examples of evidence to preserve

Direct financial loss	Receipts, invoices, account statements and transaction records
Employment or income loss	Employment records, payslips, income statements and relevant decisions
Medical and support expenses	Invoices, receipts and records explaining relevance
Housing and essential needs	Accommodation records, bills, expenses and requests for assistance
Asset-related loss	Ownership documents, valuations, transaction records and correspondence
Legal and administrative costs	Invoices, receipts and a record of work undertaken
Other alleged harm	Contemporaneous records and a clear explanation of the connection to the events

Each proposed head of loss should identify the date range, amount, supporting evidence, alleged cause, possible alternative explanations and any relevant limitation period.

Any large valuation figure previously published in archive material should be identified as an estimate or claim unless its methodology, assumptions, legal basis and calculations can be reproduced and independently checked.

The objective is to create an evidence-linked schedule, not to inflate a figure or imply that a remedy is guaranteed.

SECTION 18 — PUBLIC COMMUNICATION, STATUS LEGEND AND EVIDENCE-LINKED CLAIMS

The archive should use a consistent status legend across its pages, tables and downloadable reports.
DOCUMENTED — A source document is available and the relevant point can be located in it. This does not mean every interpretation of the document is established.
REPORTED — A first-person account or secondary description is recorded but has not been fully checked against the relevant primary records.
DISPUTED — Available accounts or documents conflict on a material point.
UNRESOLVED — The available material does not answer the question.
OFFICIAL FINDING — A named court, tribunal or authorised body made a finding. The exact decision, date and scope must be stated.
ANALYSIS — An interpretation, inference or argument drawn from the available material.
NOT YET VERIFIED — The source, date, completeness, authenticity or interpretation requires further checking.

Public-facing archive statement

BARRAN DODGER — THE DOCUMENTARY RECORD
Dr Richard William McLean | Barran Dodger
This archive preserves a first-person account, a documentary chronology and a collection of records concerning alleged institutional detriment, whistleblower issues, administrative decisions, access to justice, disability rights and the pursuit of accountability.
The documents are presented so that readers can examine correspondence, decisions, referrals and unanswered questions for themselves. The archive distinguishes original records from personal testimony, analysis, disputed interpretations and formal findings. Where a question remains unresolved, its status should be stated openly and the relevant evidence identified.
The purpose is to preserve the record, make the chronology accessible, identify the questions that remain unanswered and ensure that important documents are not lost or separated from the events they concern.
The human consequences matter. Behind every reference number and administrative decision is a person whose access to assistance, housing, representation, financial security and a fair process may be affected. Documentary preservation must therefore be accompanied by practical attention to present needs and a clear route for people willing to help.
Read the evidence. Follow the chronology. Check the source documents. Identify what remains unanswered.
Read the original archive:
https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/

Read the GitHub evidence repository:
https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger
Read the rebuilt archive:
https://wezzo72.github.io/barrandodger-rebuild/

SECTION 19 — HUMANITARIAN NEEDS AND IMMEDIATE PRACTICAL ASSISTANCE

The documentary record and the person's immediate circumstances are related, but they are not interchangeable. A long-term investigation does not itself provide food, housing, electricity, transport, communications or personal safety.

Any public appeal should therefore state practical needs separately and clearly.

A useful humanitarian request identifies:

- The assistance required now.
- The reason it is urgent.
- The approximate cost or type of support needed.
- The safest way for a genuine helper to make contact.
- Any relevant public evidence that can be examined.
- What a helper can do without needing to resolve the entire legal dispute.

The appeal should not require prospective helpers to accept every allegation as proven before offering ordinary humanitarian assistance. Nor should it imply that every organisation listed in the archive has endorsed the account.

Suggested public appeal

URGENT HUMANITARIAN APPEAL — PLEASE DO NOT LET THE HUMAN BEING DISAPPEAR BEHIND THE PAPERWORK

I am Dr Richard William McLean, also known publicly as Barran Dodger. I have preserved a substantial documentary archive concerning my account of institutional detriment, administrative disputes, whistleblower-related issues and my pursuit of accountability.

I am asking people and organisations willing to help to look beyond the reference numbers and recognise the immediate human needs involved. I need practical assistance and a fair opportunity to have the relevant records examined, the chronology understood and unanswered questions properly addressed.

The archive is available for readers to examine. It contains material that should be assessed document by document, with clear distinctions between original records, my own testimony, analysis and matters that remain unresolved.

I am asking for practical support, not blind acceptance. If you can assist with essential needs, safe accommodation referrals, disability advocacy, independent documentary research, appropriate legal or administrative guidance, or connection with a reputable humanitarian organisation, please consider making contact through a safe and verifiable channel.

The documents matter. The unanswered questions matter. The person living through the consequences matters too.

In an immediate emergency in Australia, call 000. For homelessness assistance in NSW, Link2home can be contacted on 1800 152 152; check current service availability and eligibility directly.

SECTION 20 — INVESTIGATION COMPLETION PLAN

The following plan identifies the work required to turn the current finding aid into a verified, searchable and maintainable archive.

Priority	Task	Required output
1	Preserve the existing repositories and published pages	Stable baseline and backup
2	Enumerate every file in the relevant repositories	Complete file inventory
3	Identify every PDF and extract metadata	PDF catalogue
4	Extract text and run OCR where needed	Searchable document text
5	Generate hashes and record file versions	Integrity register
6	Identify titles, dates, authors, recipients and reference numbers	Structured metadata table

7	Build a dated chronology	Chronology linked to source records
8	Map documents to institutions and proceedings	Institution and case index
9	Compare apparently inconsistent decisions and correspondence	Contradiction register
10	Identify review rights and deadlines from actual decisions	Procedural pathway table
11	Build an evidence-linked loss schedule where appropriate	Loss and remedy register
12	Publish a reader-facing finding aid	Clear entry point for the public
13	Maintain a separate current humanitarian assistance	Practical support pathway assistance statement

14	Recheck links, dates, file hashes and status labels	Quality-control report

Quality-control rules

- Do not invent missing document URLs.
- Do not label an unverified source as an authenticated original.
- Do not confuse a referral with a finding.
- Do not describe an allegation as an official conclusion without identifying the actual decision.
- Do not present an estimate as a proven compensation entitlement.
- Do not omit a conflicting record merely because it complicates the chronology.
- Do not overwrite the only preserved version of a document.
- Do not claim a repository scan is complete until the inventory and its exceptions have been checked.
- Preserve the original wording of important letters and decisions when quoting them.
- Record corrections transparently, with dates and reasons.

SECTION 21 — CONSOLIDATED FINDINGS AND PRESENT STATUS

On the material currently available, the following conclusions can be stated responsibly.

First: The archive is a substantial preservation and public-communication project concerning Dr Richard William McLean's account of alleged institutional detriment, administrative disputes, access to justice and human-rights concerns.

Second: The reported workers' compensation and employment-status history warrants careful document-by-document comparison. The relevant decisions, correspondence and tribunal records must be read together before drawing a definitive legal conclusion.

Third: The reported FOI history raises specific questions that can be tested by comparing the original request, search records, decision letters and documents subsequently released.

Fourth: The reported Ombudsman and public-interest-disclosure history should be reconstructed from the original disclosures, referrals, responses and service-restriction correspondence. A referral alone does not establish the outcome.

Fifth: The Legal Aid NSW and NSW Trustee & Guardian matters require exact descriptions of the decisions made, their legal scope and their practical consequences. Current essential needs should be recorded independently of historical disputes.

Sixth: The human-rights framework provides a way to identify potentially relevant principles, but each proposed breach must be linked to specific facts, evidence, jurisdiction and an applicable process.

Seventh: Preservation hashes and timestamps can assist with document integrity, but they do not independently prove the truth of the contents or the legality of the conduct described.

Eighth: A full PDF catalogue and repository-wide scan remain outstanding until the underlying files have actually been enumerated, processed and checked. This report must not be represented as the completed result of such a scan.

Ninth: The archive's public value is strengthened by keeping original records accessible, providing clear links, maintaining a transparent chronology and stating the status of unresolved questions.

Tenth: Immediate humanitarian needs deserve direct attention. A person should not have to wait for every historical administrative question to be resolved before seeking practical assistance with necessities and safety.

The central objective is a coherent, evidence-linked record that readers can navigate without losing the human context. The strongest presentation is one that is forceful about the importance of the questions, precise about what each document establishes, transparent about what remains unknown and practical about what should happen next.

SECTION 22 — SOURCE DIRECTORY AND REFERENCE POINTS

Archive sources

- Original public archive: https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/
- Original GitHub repository: https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger
- Main index file: https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger/blob/main/index.html
- Rebuilt public archive: https://wezzo72.github.io/barrandodger-rebuild/
- Preservation-copy folder: https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger/tree/main/barrandodger.com%20website%20backup

Official legal and administrative resources

- Commonwealth legislation: https://www.legislation.gov.au/
- NSW legislation: https://legislation.nsw.gov.au/
- Administrative Review Tribunal: https://www.art.gov.au/
- Commonwealth Ombudsman: https://www.ombudsman.gov.au/
- Office of the Australian Information Commissioner: https://www.oaic.gov.au/
- Australian Human Rights Commission: https://humanrights.gov.au/
- UN human-rights instruments: https://www.ohchr.org/en/instruments-and-mechanisms
- Australian treaty information: https://www.dfat.gov.au/international-relations/treaties

These are official starting points for checking current legislation, agency functions, procedures and published guidance. They do not replace the original case documents or establish the outcome of an individual matter.

———

FINAL CONCLUSION — PRESERVE THE RECORD, EXAMINE THE EVIDENCE, RECOGNISE THE HUMAN BEING

The Barran Dodger archive brings together a first-person account and a body of documentary material concerning alleged institutional detriment, administrative decisions, whistleblower-related concerns, disability rights, access to justice and the pursuit of accountability.

Its significance lies in the ability to preserve records, connect documents to a chronology, identify questions that have not been answered and make the material accessible to readers who might otherwise encounter only fragments of the story.

The record should be preserved in its original form wherever possible. Each important claim should be connected to the document that supports it. Conflicts should be identified rather than concealed. Official findings should be accurately described, and unresolved questions should remain visible until the relevant evidence answers them.

This approach does not require the person at the centre of the archive to surrender his voice. It makes that voice easier to understand in context, alongside the correspondence, decisions, dates and records to which it refers.

The documentary task and the humanitarian task must proceed together. Historical questions may take time to investigate, but present needs for safety, food, housing, communications, financial stability and human contact cannot be reduced to entries in a case register.

The purpose of preservation is not merely to accumulate documents. It is to ensure that evidence remains accessible, that important questions can be examined and that the human consequences are not erased from the account.

Preserve the record. Follow the evidence. Keep the unanswered questions visible. Do not lose sight of the human being behind the archive.

End of consolidated master report.

MASTER COMMAND - BARRAN DODGER / DR RICHARD WILLIAM MCLEAN LEGAL BREIF

Comprehensive Legal Status, Access to Justice, International Human Rights, Institutional Accountability, Documentary Evidence and Remedies Investigation

MANDATE

Conduct a comprehensive, evidence-driven investigation into the legal and administrative circumstances of Barran Dodger, also known as Dr Richard William McLean, using his public documentary archive, original government correspondence, relevant Australian legislation, applicable international treaties ratified by Australia, official decisions, court and tribunal records, and other verifiable evidence.

The investigation must identify every material legal issue, unresolved complaint, potential compensation claim, procedural barrier, difficulty obtaining legal assistance, relevant international human-rights obligation and available avenue for review or remedy supported by the available evidence.

The resulting report must be comprehensive, direct, independently reasoned, legally precise, accessible to the public and suitable for permanent inclusion in a documentary evidence archive.

Do not produce a superficial biography, a generic legal overview, or a summary that merely repeats allegations. Reconstruct the documentary chronology, examine the original records, identify relevant legal provisions, test competing interpretations and explain the practical implications of unresolved matters.

Central question:

What happens when a person documents allegations of serious institutional detriment, pursues answers and remedies through domestic administrative and legal channels, encounters barriers to representation and fragmented institutional responsibility, and seeks to understand whether Australian domestic law and Australia's international obligations provide applicable protections or avenues for accountability?

Investigate this question rigorously without presuming that every allegation has been proved or that every adverse decision was unlawful.

---

1. PRIMARY DOCUMENTARY ARCHIVE

Begin with these public repositories.

Original Barran Dodger evidence repository

https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger

Original public archive

https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/

Rebuilt public archive

https://wezzo72.github.io/barrandodger-rebuild/

Inspect available HTML pages, original PDFs, government correspondence, evidence indexes, chronology documents, public statements, FOI records, legal correspondence and supporting documents.

Follow repository links to the underlying records. Do not rely exclusively on README files, summaries, document titles, search snippets or previous AI-generated assessments.

Where records are inaccessible, state precisely what could not be examined. Do not claim to have reviewed unavailable documents.

For each material document, record its title, issuing body, date, reference number where applicable, source URL, relevant passage, evidentiary significance and limitations.

Distinguish what a document actually records from what it establishes, what can reasonably be inferred and what remains unverified.

Preserve the original record and its context. Do not alter quotations or imply that a document contains a finding that it does not contain.

2. ESTABLISH THE ACTUAL LEGAL STATUS

Prepare a dated assessment of McLean's known legal and administrative position.

Investigate and distinguish:

- Criminal charges, prosecutions, convictions, warrants and other formal criminal proceedings.
- Civil proceedings, potential causes of action and compensation claims.
- Administrative complaints, internal reviews, external reviews and judicial-review possibilities.
- Employment-status and workers' compensation disputes.
- NCAT matters, guardianship orders and financial-administration arrangements.
- Legal Aid applications, refusals, restrictions, reviews and complaints.
- FOI, privacy-access and government-information requests.
- Ombudsman, regulatory, integrity-agency and departmental complaints.
- Potential discrimination, human-rights, employment, financial-services and other statutory claims.
- Relevant international complaints, communications or treaty-based procedures, where available and applicable.

For every matter, identify the jurisdiction, date, decision-maker, relevant documents, applicable law, present known status, procedural risks and possible next step.

Classify each issue as:

1. Documented administrative fact.
2. Allegation supported by identified documentary evidence.
3. Allegation requiring further corroboration.
4. Official decision or finding.
5. Decision under review or appeal.
6. Unresolved administrative complaint.
7. Potential legal claim requiring assessment.
8. Matter apparently concluded, subject to verification.
9. Current status unknown.

Do not conflate a complaint with a proceeding, an allegation with a finding, an administrative refusal with a judicial determination, or an absence of known charges with independently verified proof that no proceedings exist.

Explain how each unresolved issue may affect access to representation, compensation, review rights, financial security and effective remedies.

3. THE LEGAL AID PARADOX AND ACCESS TO JUSTICE

Treat the reported refusal, restriction or practical unavailability of Legal Aid assistance as a central issue.

Examine the apparent paradox between the purpose of publicly funded legal assistance and the predicament of a person who cannot afford private representation but faces multiple interconnected legal and administrative disputes.

The central proposition to investigate is:

A legal assistance system may formally exist to improve access to justice while its eligibility rules, funding limitations, jurisdictional boundaries or individual decisions leave a particular applicant unable to obtain the assistance necessary to pursue consequential legal issues. The practical availability of justice may therefore fall short of the protection that the system is intended to provide.

Investigate:

- What assistance was requested, when, from which service and for which matter.

- Whether assistance was refused, restricted, terminated, delayed or never formally applied for.
- Whether there was a refusal of a particular grant, a limitation on the scope of assistance or an actual prohibition on receiving assistance.
- The written reasons and the specific eligibility criteria or policies applied.
- The applicant's financial circumstances and capacity to fund private representation.
- The complexity of the legal and administrative issues.
- Any review, appeal, reconsideration or complaint and its outcome.
- Whether alternatives were offered and whether they could realistically address the problem.
- Whether fragmented responsibility between agencies and assistance providers left gaps in available representation.
- The practical difficulty of identifying legal grounds, preparing evidence, navigating jurisdictional requirements and preserving limitation periods without professional help.
- What assistance and review options remain available.

Relevant starting points:

- Legal Aid NSW — eligibility for a lawyer
- Legal Aid NSW — appealing a legal aid decision
- Legal Aid NSW — feedback and complaints
- Legal Aid Commission Act 1979 (NSW)

Verify the applicable legislation, decision rules and policies rather than assuming that general eligibility information establishes the outcome of McLean's individual application.

Use the term "ban" only if an actual prohibition or exclusion is established. Otherwise describe the precise refusal, restriction or unavailability of assistance.

Analyse whether the evidence supports an incorrect decision, procedural deficiency, funding or eligibility barrier, inadequate alternative assistance or a broader structural access-to-justice problem.

Examine the cumulative practical effect of the barriers rather than treating each decision in isolation.

The central question is whether the documented circumstances left McLean without a realistic and affordable means of understanding, challenging and pursuing consequential legal issues.

4. INTERNATIONAL LAW: AUSTRALIA'S TREATY OBLIGATIONS

Conduct a dedicated international-law investigation.

Identify the international human-rights treaties, conventions, optional protocols and other agreements that Australia has ratified or acceded to and that may be relevant to the documented circumstances.

Use authoritative treaty records, particularly:

- United Nations Treaty Collection
- Australian Treaties Database — Australian Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade
- Australian Human Rights Commission — human rights
- UN Human Rights Office — treaty bodies

Verify Australia's actual treaty status, ratification or accession date, entry into force, reservations, declarations, optional protocols and any relevant withdrawal or amendment. Do not assume that signature alone establishes ratification.

For each potentially applicable treaty, identify the precise articles, the rights protected, the nature of the obligation, the relevant treaty-body interpretations and the connection to the documentary evidence.

4.1 International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights

Official treaty text:

International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights — United Nations Treaty Collection

Examine, where relevant:

- Article 2(3): effective remedies for violations of Covenant rights.
- Article 9: liberty and security of person and protection against arbitrary detention.
- Article 10: humane treatment of persons deprived of liberty.
- Article 14: equality before courts and tribunals and fair-hearing protections within its applicable scope.
- Article 16: recognition as a person before the law.
- Article 17: protection against arbitrary or unlawful interference with privacy and related interests.
- Article 19: freedom of expression, subject to the Covenant's applicable limitations.

- Article 26: equality before the law and equal protection without prohibited discrimination.

Determine whether the documented facts engage any of these provisions and whether the relevant provision imposes an obligation applicable to the conduct under examination.

Do not assume Article 14 guarantees publicly funded representation in every civil dispute. Examine its actual scope, including the distinction between criminal proceedings and determination of rights and obligations in a suit at law.

Do not infer arbitrary detention or unlawful interference merely from allegations of institutional mistreatment. Identify the specific events and evidence required.

4.2 International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights

Official treaty source:

United Nations Treaty Collection

Examine, where relevant:

- Article 2(1): progressive realisation and the obligation to take appropriate steps.
- Article 2(2): non-discrimination in the enjoyment of Covenant rights.
- Article 6: the right to work.
- Article 9: the right to social security.
- Article 11: the right to an adequate standard of living, including adequate food and housing.
- Article 12: the right to the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health.

Investigate whether the evidence raises relevant questions about employment, financial security, housing, essential living conditions, health or non-discrimination.

Distinguish immediate obligations, non-discrimination requirements and progressive-realisation obligations. Do not treat every adverse financial or housing outcome as an automatic treaty violation.

Explain which actions, omissions, policies or decisions might be relevant and what evidence would be needed to establish a connection to a particular Covenant right.

4.3 Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment

Official treaty source:

United Nations Treaty Collection

Where the records raise a specific, evidence-supported issue concerning torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment, examine the relevant provisions, including Articles 2, 12, 13 and 16 where applicable.

Investigate the relevant factual and legal elements, including the nature of the treatment, severity, purpose where required, public-official involvement and applicable state obligations.

Do not label an experience torture as a legal conclusion without examining the treaty definition and supporting evidence.

Distinguish a person's description of an experience from the legal classification of that experience.

4.4 Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Official treaty source:

United Nations Treaty Collection

Investigate the Convention where the documented facts establish a relevant disability-rights issue.

Consider:

- Article 5: equality and non-discrimination.
- Article 9: accessibility.
- Article 12: equal recognition before the law.
- Article 13: access to justice.
- Article 14: liberty and security of person.
- Article 15: freedom from torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment.
- Article 16: freedom from exploitation, violence and abuse.
- Article 19: living independently and being included in the community.
- Article 25: health.
- Article 28: adequate standard of living and social protection.

Examine Article 13 particularly where the evidence raises questions about practical access to legal processes, procedural accommodations or assistance necessary to participate effectively.

Do not assume that a diagnosis, hospitalisation, guardianship arrangement or need for support establishes a disability-rights violation. Identify the relevant facts and treaty obligations.

Examine whether reasonable procedural accommodations, accessible communication, support arrangements or other measures were relevant to the actual circumstances.

4.5 Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women

Official treaty source:

United Nations Treaty Collection

Assess this Convention only if the evidence establishes a relevant gender-discrimination issue or other facts bringing the matter within its scope. Do not list it as a directly applicable substantive basis without explaining the connection.

4.6 International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination

Official treaty source:

United Nations Treaty Collection

Assess this Convention only where documented evidence raises a relevant issue of racial discrimination or another matter within its scope. Do not infer race or a discriminatory motive.

4.7 Convention on the Rights of the Child

Official treaty source:

United Nations Treaty Collection

Assess this Convention only where the documented facts concern a child or another matter within its legal scope. Do not treat it as directly applicable to an adult's circumstances without a substantiated connection.

4.8 Other ratified conventions, protocols and agreements

Identify any other ratified international instrument that is materially relevant to the evidence, including applicable conventions concerning refugees, statelessness, labour rights, forced labour, trafficking, or other subjects where the documented facts justify examination.

Do not expand the report with irrelevant treaties merely to increase the number of references.

For every instrument, verify Australia's treaty status and the relevance of the particular provision.

4.9 International complaint and monitoring mechanisms

Investigate whether any applicable international communication, individual complaint, inquiry or reporting procedure is available under the relevant treaty or optional protocol.

Determine:

- Whether Australia has accepted the particular procedure.
- Whether McLean falls within its jurisdiction.
- Whether domestic remedies must first be exhausted.
- Whether any time, admissibility or duplication requirements apply.
- Whether the procedure is available to an individual in the circumstances.
- Whether any previous communication or decision affects eligibility.
- What evidence and procedural steps would be necessary.

Do not imply that an international complaint is automatically admissible or that a UN treaty body can replace a domestic court or tribunal.

4.10 International obligations versus Australian domestic law

Explicitly distinguish:

1. Treaties binding Australia at international law.
2. Treaties incorporated into Australian domestic law through legislation.
3. Treaty provisions that may inform statutory interpretation or administrative decision-making.
4. International reporting, monitoring and complaint mechanisms.
5. Rights that are directly enforceable in a particular domestic proceeding, where applicable.

6. International obligations for which no directly enforceable domestic cause of action has been established.

Explain that ratification does not automatically make every treaty article directly enforceable in Australian courts.

Identify relevant implementing legislation, where it exists, and explain how the international obligation relates to the domestic legal framework.

Do not represent an alleged inconsistency with a treaty as proof that a domestic decision is legally invalid. Explain the applicable legal route and any limitations.

5. DOMESTIC LEGISLATION AND STATUTORY HYPERLINKS

Every substantive legal chapter must contain named hyperlinks to the actual legislation and provisions relevant to the issue.

Use the Federal Register of Legislation for Commonwealth laws:

https://www.legislation.gov.au/

Use the NSW legislation website for New South Wales laws:

https://legislation.nsw.gov.au/

For each legal proposition:

- Name the Act in full, including year and jurisdiction.
- Link the name to its authoritative text.
- Identify the applicable section or subsection.
- Explain the provision in plain English.
- Compare the provision with the documented facts.
- Identify any unresolved factual or legal question.
- Verify the version in force at the relevant date.
- Explain any relevant amendments, commencement rules or transitional provisions.
- Identify available review mechanisms, deadlines and remedies where verified.

Do not merely list legislation at the end. Place the relevant hyperlink in the paragraph discussing the issue.

5.1 Workers' compensation and employment

Safety, Rehabilitation and Compensation Act 1988 (Cth)

Examine section 5 and the provisions relevant to employee status, injury, liability, claim eligibility and review rights.

Relate the law to the reported Comcare refusal of 26 May 2021, NDIS Commission correspondence of 3 June 2021 and January 2024 Federal Court correspondence associated with Scott Treadwell.

Verify what each document establishes and whether any judicial determination is actually recorded.

5.2 Guardianship and financial administration

- Guardianship Act 1987 (NSW)
- NSW Trustee and Guardian Act 2009 (NSW)
- Civil and Administrative Tribunal Act 2013 (NSW)
- Powers of Attorney Act 2003 (NSW)
- Mental Health Act 2007 (NSW)

Apply only those provisions relevant to the actual orders, decisions and circumstances.

5.3 FOI and privacy

- Freedom of Information Act 1982 (Cth)
- Privacy Act 1988 (Cth)
- Government Information (Public Access) Act 2009 (NSW)

Distinguish Commonwealth FOI matters from NSW GIPA matters.

5.4 Administrative review and judicial review

- Administrative Review Tribunal Act 2024 (Cth)
- Administrative Decisions (Judicial Review) Act 1977 (Cth)
- Administrative Decisions Review Act 1997 (NSW)
- Civil and Administrative Tribunal Act 2013 (NSW)

Account for the replacement of the Administrative Appeals Tribunal by the Administrative Review Tribunal on 14 October 2024 and verify the applicable transitional arrangements.

5.5 Discrimination and employment

- Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth)
- Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth)
- Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth)

Examine only where the facts engage the relevant statutory provisions.

5.6 Civil claims and limitation periods

- Civil Liability Act 2002 (NSW)
- Civil Procedure Act 2005 (NSW)
- Limitation Act 1969 (NSW)

Identify any more specific statutory scheme that displaces or modifies general rules.

5.7 Integrity and public-interest disclosures

- Public Interest Disclosure Act 2022 (NSW)
- Independent Commission Against Corruption Act 1988 (NSW)
- Ombudsman Act 1976 (Cth)

Verify the jurisdiction, definitions and reporting criteria before recommending any particular mechanism.

All statutory links and section references must be verified against the authoritative source before publication.

6. INSTITUTIONAL ACCOUNTABILITY AND ALLEGED WRONGDOING

Examine whether the documentary record reveals:

- Referrals between agencies without substantive resolution.
- Repeated jurisdictional or eligibility barriers.
- Conflicting official explanations.
- Failure to answer material questions.
- Difficulty obtaining records.
- Restrictions affecting the ability to pursue complaints.
- Fragmented processes that leave interconnected problems unresolved.
- Potential inconsistencies between published policy and documented decisions.
- Gaps between formal complaint mechanisms and practical remedies.

For each proposed pattern, identify the specific evidence and explain the inference.

Distinguish individual decisions, organisational practices and systemic policy problems.

Examine whether the cumulative effect of multiple processes may have left McLean without a realistic avenue of redress, even where each process addressed only a limited part of the overall problem.

Do not automatically equate an adverse decision with corruption, a referral with a cover-up, or an unresolved complaint with proof of deliberate wrongdoing.

Where corruption, collusion, retaliation or deliberate misconduct is alleged, identify the specific evidence and additional proof required.

7. COMPREHENSIVE EVIDENCE MATRIX

Create a detailed table containing:

1. Legal issue.
2. Relevant agency or party.
3. Date.
4. Original document title.
5. Direct document hyperlink.
6. Relevant passage or accurately attributed summary.
7. What the document establishes.
8. What it does not establish.
9. Corroborating or contradictory evidence.
10. Applicable domestic legislation and linked provisions.
11. Relevant international treaty and linked article, where applicable.
12. Current known status.
13. Unanswered question.
14. Available review or remedy.
15. Verified procedural deadline.
16. Priority for further action.

Use direct PDF or original-document links wherever possible. Where only an index exists, link to the exact index page and identify the document's location.

Never invent URLs, document titles, quotations, reference numbers, statutory provisions or case citations.

Create a separate contradictions register identifying conflicting documents, their exact differences and the evidence needed to resolve them.

8. PARTY-BY-PARTY ACCOUNTABILITY REGISTER

Identify the agencies, organisations, companies and relevant decision-makers whose documented conduct is material to each issue.

For every party, specify:

- Its documented role.
- The decision, action, omission or correspondence connected to the matter.
- The evidence linking it to the issue.
- The applicable domestic legislation.
- Any relevant international obligation and its legal status.
- The explanation or response available.
- Whether the issue concerns an individual decision, organisational process or policy.
- The unresolved question.
- The potential review or accountability pathway.

Name individuals only where necessary, publicly documented and relevant to their official role or recorded conduct.

Do not label anyone a criminal, corrupt perpetrator or proven wrongdoer without adequate evidence.

9. LIMITATION PERIODS AND PROCEDURAL RISKS

For every potentially actionable matter, investigate:

- The date of the relevant conduct or decision.
- The applicable limitation period or review deadline.
- Whether it has expired or remains open.
- Whether an extension, reconsideration or other lawful option may exist.
- The correct court, tribunal, regulator or review body.
- Any prerequisites, notice requirements or jurisdictional restrictions.
- The practical consequences of delay.
- Whether another complaint or proceeding affects the available route.

Do not assume that an administrative complaint suspends a limitation period.

Do not describe a historical matter as actionable without checking the applicable law.

Prioritise preservation of evidence, clarification of current status and protection of any remaining procedural rights.

10. REQUIRED FINAL DELIVERABLES

Produce one integrated report containing:

A. Executive summary

The principal legal issues, known current status, barriers to representation, applicable international obligations and immediate priorities.

B. Comprehensive chronology

A dated reconstruction of the documentary record from the earliest relevant event to the latest verified source.

C. Legal Aid and access-to-justice analysis

The actual refusal or restriction, reasons, review mechanisms, practical consequences and possible structural barriers.

D. Domestic legal analysis

A separate chapter for every material workers' compensation, employment, guardianship, trustee, FOI, privacy, administrative-review, discrimination, compensation and other legal issue supported by the records.

E. International human-rights analysis

The applicable ratified treaties, exact relevant articles, Australia's treaty status, domestic implementation, possible state obligations, treaty-body interpretations and available international procedures.

F. Party-by-party accountability register

Every materially relevant party linked to the original evidence and applicable legal framework.

G. Evidence matrix

Direct links to the original documents, exact evidentiary significance and limitations.

H. Legislation and treaty index

Every Act, regulation, statutory provision, international treaty, treaty article, official interpretation, judgment and procedural rule relied upon, with verified named hyperlinks.

I. Contradictions and unanswered questions

The conflicting records, unresolved issues and additional evidence needed.

J. Legal status register

Established facts, official findings, allegations, unresolved matters, potential claims and unknown outcomes.

K. Remedies and priorities plan

The most urgent deadlines, documents to obtain, decisions to challenge, assistance pathways and potential domestic or international procedures.

L. Public-facing archive statement

A strong, accessible statement suitable for publication on the Barran Dodger archive, accurately explaining the documentary record, the access-to-justice problem and the relevance of domestic and international legal protections.

M. Final conclusions

An evidence-based assessment of whether the records support concerns about institutional accountability, barriers to legal assistance, unresolved complaints, fragmented administrative responsibility and the practical availability of remedies.

11. PUBLICATION AND EVIDENTIARY STANDARDS

Write in substantial detail, using clear headings, named hyperlinks, original documents and relevant legal provisions throughout.

Do not dilute substantiated criticism through unnecessary bureaucratic language.

Do not treat a treaty ratification as automatic domestic enforceability. Do not treat a possible treaty inconsistency as proof that a domestic decision is invalid. Identify the actual legal mechanism and its limitations.

Do not assume that an allegation is false because it has not been officially determined. Equally, do not assume it is established because it appears in a public archive.

Treat AI-generated analysis as an analytical aid rather than an official determination.

Treat blockchain timestamps as evidence potentially relevant to data integrity or existence at a given time, not as proof that the contents of a document are true.

For every important conclusion, demonstrate the chain of reasoning from source document to factual proposition, from factual proposition to legal rule, and from legal rule to possible remedy.

Verify all treaty statuses, statutory provisions, historical versions, dates and URLs before publication.

Where evidence is insufficient, identify precisely what is missing and how the gap could be addressed.

12. FINAL INSTRUCTION

Begin by examining the repositories and original documents. Investigate every material legal and administrative issue systematically.

Do not stop at a general summary, a list of allegations or a list of legislation. Complete the chronology, evidence matrix, party register, domestic legal analysis, international treaty analysis, Legal Aid investigation and remedies plan.

The ultimate objective is to establish the clearest possible documentary account of Barran Dodger / Dr Richard William McLean's legal and administrative position; identify the actual barriers to representation and accountability; examine the domestic and international protections potentially relevant to the evidence; and determine which practical routes remain available to pursue unresolved issues.

Deliver a comprehensive, legislation-linked, treaty-linked and document-linked report whose force comes from the evidence, the applicable law and the clarity with which it identifies unresolved questions and potential remedies.

The command now expressly requires the researcher to distinguish Australia's international obligations from rights directly enforceable under Australian domestic law, and to link the relevant treaty articles and domestic statutory provisions throughout the report. That distinction is essential to a legally accurate assessment.

STAMP & VERIFY
←
LEGAL BRIEF of BARRAN DODGER : DR RICHARD WILLIAM
MCLEAN– Fri 23rd October, 2026. pat 972.1 KB
SHA256:
,8ddc5056d7977186e93f1282bfdOO1dąe2c30da0c850c6ba90a7,
SUCCESS!
Open Timestamps receipt created and download started
HOW IT WORKS