STATEMENT REGARDING ABLEPOINT

Request for Evidence, Clarification, Independent Review and Reasoned Response

15 September 2026

I am seeking a clear, evidence-based response from Ablepoint regarding serious concerns I have raised about my treatment, safety, accommodation and the circumstances surrounding the services being provided to me.

I am not asking Ablepoint to accept my allegations as established facts. I am asking Ablepoint to identify the evidence it holds, correct any inaccuracies, explain the basis for decisions or actions affecting me, and ensure that matters affecting my safety and dignity are properly considered.

These concerns do not exist in isolation. They form part of a much larger documentary record that I have preserved in my public forensic archive:

Barran Dodger Documentary Archive:
https://wezzo72.github.io/Backup/

I ask Ablepoint, and any subsequent independent reviewer, to consider relevant primary-source material in that archive where it relates to the matters raised here.

1. Documents and evidence requested from Ablepoint

In particular, I ask Ablepoint to produce or identify:

- any signed service agreement between Ablepoint and me;
- any lease or tenancy agreement that I have signed;
- records documenting the services, supports and accommodation arrangements being provided to me;
- records concerning any threats to kill, threats of violence or other safety concerns that have been reported to Ablepoint;
- records showing whether and when such matters were reported to police, a court, NDIS, or another relevant authority;
- records concerning allegations of libel, slander, paedophilia or rape made about me, including who made them, when they were received, and what steps were taken to verify or assess them;
- records concerning communications between Ablepoint and police, legal representatives, medical or psychiatric services, media, my family or NDIS concerning me;

- records concerning any medication, drugs or substances allegedly provided to me through third parties or paid actors;
- records concerning any alleged communication with hospitals or health professionals about my medication or treatment, including any issue concerning ADHD medication;
- records of complaints, incident reports, risk assessments, case notes, internal discussions or decisions concerning my accommodation, supports, safety or continued placement; and
- records identifying who has made decisions concerning my accommodation or supports and the evidence and reasoning upon which those decisions were based.

If Ablepoint considers any requested material confidential or unable to be disclosed to me, I ask that it identify the category of material, the reason for non-disclosure and, where possible, the legal or policy basis relied upon.

2. My willingness to respond to allegations and acknowledge harm

I have publicly stated that I am willing to respond to any allegation made against me with understanding and without dismissing the person making the allegation.

If any person believes that I have harmed them in any way, I have stated that I am willing to hear what they say, understand their experience and acknowledge the person who feels that I have harmed them.

This does not mean that I automatically admit every allegation made against me.

It means that I am expressly offering an avenue for allegations to be put to me and addressed openly, rather than having allegations circulate about me without giving me an opportunity to understand, respond to and, where appropriate, acknowledge the harm alleged.

I ask that this willingness to engage be distinguished from an admission of wrongdoing.

If a person alleges that I have harmed them, I am asking that the allegation be identified, communicated to me appropriately, and assessed according to evidence and procedural fairness.

3. Requests to speak with police and be arrested

I have repeatedly asked to speak directly with police concerning the matters I have raised.

I have also stated that, if I have committed an offence, I am willing to be arrested and dealt with through the proper legal process.

At one point, in an attempt to obtain police intervention and force the allegations into an accountable legal process, I went so far as to hypothetically admit to allegations including paedophilia, rape, extortion and terrorism, despite those statements being made in the context of attempting to have the allegations formally investigated and to have police take responsibility for determining whether an offence had actually occurred.

No arrest resulted.

Instead, I was sent to hospital and subsequently returned to my accommodation.

I emphasise that these hypothetical or provocative statements should not be interpreted as admissions that I committed those offences.

My purpose was to obtain a formal process in which allegations could be tested, investigated and either substantiated or rejected.

The significance, from my perspective, is that I have repeatedly sought accountability through lawful institutions rather than asking that allegations against me simply disappear.

4. Legal representation and access to justice

I have also repeatedly sought legal assistance and Legal Aid.

I have experienced what I describe as being shunned by sections of the legal fraternity, including circumstances in which I have been unable to obtain meaningful legal representation despite repeatedly seeking it.

I am particularly concerned by any characterisation that I am myself the risk, while I report facing serious threats, alleged torture, alleged V2K/audio harassment and what I describe as 24/7 monitoring.

I acknowledge that these experiences and allegations require objective assessment.

I am not asking Ablepoint to certify that V2K or continuous monitoring is occurring merely because I report experiencing it.

I am asking that my reports be distinguished from conclusions about their truth and that objectively verifiable evidence be investigated wherever it exists.

5. Safety and the apparent reversal of the usual protective relationship

The circumstances described above raise an important question concerning the way my safety and vulnerability are being assessed.

I am reporting serious threats and asking police and other authorities to investigate them.

I am asking for legal representation so that allegations can be tested through proper processes.

I am publicly stating that I am prepared to hear allegations against me and acknowledge people who believe I have been harmful to them.

I have even asked that, if I have committed an offence, I be arrested and dealt with through the ordinary criminal justice system.

Yet, notwithstanding these requests, I have experienced circumstances in which I have been treated as though I am the risk rather than as a person reporting that I may be at risk.

I ask Ablepoint to consider whether that apparent reversal has been properly assessed.

6. Safety, coercion, isolation and autonomy

I ask Ablepoint to respond specifically to my concerns that I may have been entrapped, isolated, coerced or otherwise placed in circumstances that have adversely affected my safety, autonomy and ability to obtain assistance.

I allege that there may have been a coordinated pattern of conduct involving Ablepoint and/or other individuals or organisations.

I do not presently claim that this has been established as fact.

I am asking for the matter to be independently assessed against the available documentary evidence.

I am particularly concerned about whether circumstances have arisen in which allegations about me have been accepted or repeated without those allegations having been tested through an appropriate legal or evidentiary process.

If Ablepoint has relied upon such information in making decisions about my accommodation, supports, safety or treatment, I request that it identify the information relied upon and provide me with an appropriate opportunity to respond.

7. Additional matters requiring independent assessment

7.1 Alleged campaign to undermine or destroy my testimony

I have raised concerns about what I describe as a campaign involving Tony Ridley and others to undermine, discredit or destroy my testimony and credibility.

I do not ask Ablepoint to accept that characterisation as an established fact.

I ask that the underlying communications, recordings, documents and chronology be examined to determine, where possible, what objectively occurred, what was communicated, by whom, when and with what consequences.

7.2 Steve Iasonidis and Corrine — alleged financial control

I have also documented allegations concerning my former partner Steve Iasonidis and Corrine, including alleged financial control and conduct affecting my financial independence.

I ask that these matters be treated as allegations requiring evidentiary assessment rather than predetermined findings.

7.3 Alleged assassination attempt involving Bill Shorten

I have made a serious allegation concerning an alleged assassination attempt and have identified Bill Shorten in connection with that allegation.

I expressly acknowledge that an allegation of this nature requires a particularly high level of independent verification.

I am not asking Ablepoint to declare that this allegation is proven.

I ask that it not simply be converted into a conclusion that I am fabricating or acting irrationally merely because the allegation is serious or difficult to establish.

7.4 Exile from Victoria

I also ask that my circumstances be considered in the context of what I describe as my exile from Victoria and the consequences that followed, including displacement from established personal, professional, social and support networks.

I use "exile" as a description of my experience and circumstances, not as a predetermined legal conclusion.

The relevant factual questions include what circumstances caused or contributed to my departure from Victoria, what realistic alternatives were available, what institutional or individual decisions contributed to that situation, and what consequences followed.

8. Cumulative significance

I ask that these matters be considered cumulatively rather than automatically treated as disconnected incidents.

The significance of the overall circumstances, in my view, is that I have repeatedly sought mechanisms through which the allegations surrounding me could be tested, investigated and resolved.

I have:

- asked to speak with police;

- asked to be arrested if I have committed an offence;
- publicly stated my willingness to hear allegations against me and understand people who believe I have harmed them;
- sought legal representation and Legal Aid;
- repeatedly requested that evidence be examined;
- preserved a substantial documentary archive;
- sought independent consideration of serious allegations concerning my safety; and
- requested that decisions affecting my accommodation and supports be based upon evidence.

At the same time, I report experiencing serious threats and alleged surveillance, torture and V2K/audio harassment.

The significance I ask Ablepoint to consider is not that these circumstances prove my allegations. They do not, by themselves, do so.

Their significance is that they demonstrate a consistent request on my part for accountability, investigation and due process, while the underlying factual issues remain disputed or unresolved.

If my allegations are wrong, I want them tested and disproved through evidence.

If they are partly correct, I want the supported parts identified.

If they cannot be established, I want that stated honestly.

What I do not consider appropriate is for unresolved allegations to be treated as established facts against me while my own allegations are treated as inherently discredited without examination.

9. Status of allegations

For clarity, I distinguish between documented facts, allegations, personal recollections, interpretations and matters requiring investigation.

Where I use terms such as “alleged”, “I believe”, “I experienced” or “I am concerned”, those terms are intentional. They do not constitute a claim that the matter has already been judicially determined.

Where I identify a document, recording, communication, official decision or other primary-source material, I ask that the underlying material be examined directly rather than relying upon a characterisation of it.

I accept that evidence may ultimately support, qualify, contradict or fail to establish aspects of my account.

My request is therefore for preservation of evidence, procedural fairness, independent assessment and a reasoned response — not automatic acceptance of my allegations.

10. What I ask Ablepoint to answer

I ask Ablepoint to provide a written response identifying:

1. What is accepted as fact;
2. What is disputed;
3. What evidence supports Ablepoint's position;
4. What evidence remains unavailable or requires investigation;
5. What information concerning me has been received from third parties;
6. Whether any untested allegations have been relied upon in decisions concerning me;
7. What opportunity I have been given to correct materially inaccurate information;
8. Whether any conflicts of interest exist;
9. What steps will be taken to ensure my safety and procedural fairness; and
10. What further investigation or independent review Ablepoint considers necessary.

Nothing in this statement should be interpreted as asking Ablepoint to prejudge the outcome of these allegations.

I am asking for the opposite: that the evidence be examined before conclusions are reached.

11. Non-response

If Ablepoint does not provide a substantive response, I want the significance of that non-response to be recorded accurately.

Ablepoint's failure to provide a substantive response does not, of itself, establish the truth of my allegations. I do not ask that its silence be treated as an admission.

However, a non-response may have evidentiary and procedural significance because:

1. the allegations and questions I have raised remain unanswered;
2. Ablepoint has not identified the evidence on which its position is based, if it has such evidence;
3. the factual issues therefore remain unresolved rather than disproved;
4. if receipt of this statement can be established, Ablepoint has been placed on notice of the concerns I have raised;
5. the absence of a substantive response may become relevant to any subsequent independent review, complaint, investigation or oversight process; and
6. a later decision-maker should distinguish carefully between the underlying allegations and the fact that those allegations were raised and not substantively answered.

I therefore ask that any subsequent assessment not characterise my concerns as having been "resolved" merely because Ablepoint has not responded.

The appropriate distinction is:

> The allegations are matters requiring assessment. The non-response does not prove the allegations, but neither does non-response constitute a substantive answer to them.

If Ablepoint elects not to provide a substantive response, I ask that the record state:

> "The concerns and evidentiary questions were put to Ablepoint. No substantive response was provided."

That is the evidentiary proposition I rely upon.

I do not claim that silence, by itself, proves the underlying allegations.

12. Requested response timeframe

I request written acknowledgement of this statement within 2 business days of receipt and a substantive written response within 10 business days.

If Ablepoint considers that 10 business days is insufficient because of the complexity of the matters raised, I request that Ablepoint advise me within that period:

1. who is responsible for handling the matter;
2. what aspects are being investigated;
3. what further information is required from me;
4. what interim measures are being taken concerning my safety and supports; and
5. the expected date for providing a substantive response.

Failure to respond within this requested timeframe will not be treated by me as proof that my allegations are true.

However, it will be recorded as the absence of a substantive response to matters that I have formally raised and specifically requested Ablepoint to address.

I ask that the date this statement is received by Ablepoint be recorded, together with the date of any acknowledgement and substantive response.

13. Final request

I am not asking Ablepoint to believe me simply because I have made these allegations.

I am asking Ablepoint not to disbelieve me without examining the evidence either.

I have repeatedly demonstrated my willingness to engage with allegations against me, to hear people who believe I have harmed them, to acknowledge harm where appropriate, to submit matters to police and legal processes, and to have evidence tested.

I therefore request a transparent, evidence-based and procedurally fair response to the matters set out above, together with appropriate consideration of my safety, accommodation, supports, dignity and ability to obtain independent assistance.

The purpose of this statement is to create a clear record that:

> I raised the concerns. I identified the evidence I am asking to be examined. I distinguished allegations from established facts. I stated my willingness to hear and acknowledge allegations of harm. I asked to speak with police and, where appropriate, to be dealt with through the criminal justice process. I sought legal assistance. I requested preservation of relevant records. I requested an opportunity to respond to adverse information. And I requested a reasoned response within a defined timeframe.

If the allegations are wrong, the appropriate mechanism is to identify the evidence demonstrating that.

If they are partly supported, the appropriate response is to identify what is supported and what is not.

If they cannot presently be determined, that should also be stated.

What I am asking for is not automatic vindication. I am asking for the evidence to be examined and for the resulting position to be explained.

Why a Substantive Response Is Respectful and Required

I consider a substantive response to this statement to be both a matter of basic respect for me as a person with disability and participant receiving NDIS supports, and, to the extent the relevant NDIS obligations apply to Ablepoint and the services being provided, a matter of regulatory and legal compliance.

I am not asking for special treatment or for Ablepoint to accept my allegations without examination.

I am asking to be treated as a person whose concerns about safety, dignity, accommodation, supports and the conduct of services are entitled to be heard, recorded, considered and answered.

The NDIS Quality and Safeguards Commission states that people with disability have rights to dignity and respect, safety, quality supports and services, and the ability to raise concerns and complaints. Providers are expected to make participants feel safe and comfortable raising concerns and to handle concerns and complaints about the quality and safety of supports quickly and effectively. (NDIS Quality and Safeguards Commission)

The NDIS Practice Standards further provide that complaints and feedback are to be welcomed, acknowledged, respected and well-managed, and that a provider's complaints management and resolution system is to follow principles of procedural fairness and natural justice. (NDIS Quality and Safeguards Commission)

The NDIS Commission also states that providers must effectively manage complaints and that, when a complaint is received, the person making the complaint and the affected person with disability should be appropriately involved in its resolution and kept informed of its progress, decisions and actions taken. (NDIS Quality and Safeguards Commission)

Accordingly, I ask Ablepoint to distinguish between:

1. Acknowledging a complaint;

2. Investigating a complaint;

3. Providing a substantive response; and

4. Agreeing with the person making the complaint.

These are not the same thing.

I am not demanding that Ablepoint agree with me.

I am asking Ablepoint to acknowledge the concerns, consider the evidence, investigate where appropriate, tell me what is accepted or disputed, explain the evidence relied upon, and provide a reasoned response.

That is consistent with procedural fairness. It also provides an opportunity for Ablepoint to correct misunderstandings, identify evidence that contradicts my account, explain decisions that I may have misunderstood, and take corrective action if an issue is identified.

A response is therefore respectful because it recognises my right to be heard.

It is also potentially a regulatory obligation because NDIS providers are required to maintain appropriate complaints management and resolution arrangements, and the relevant rules and standards require proper regard to procedural fairness in complaints management. (NDIS Quality and Safeguards Commission)

I therefore do not ask Ablepoint to treat my allegations as proven.

I ask Ablepoint to treat the complaint as real, treat me with dignity while it is being considered, and provide the process and response required to determine what is actually supported by evidence.

The significance of a non-response

Against that background, a complete absence of substantive engagement would not automatically establish the truth of my allegations.

However, it would leave the concerns unanswered and would raise a legitimate question about whether the provider's complaints-management and procedural-fairness obligations have been properly engaged.

If Ablepoint considers that particular allegations are unfounded, it should be able to say so and explain why.

If Ablepoint considers that evidence contradicts my account, it should identify that evidence where it can lawfully do so.

If Ablepoint considers that the matters fall outside its responsibility, it should identify the appropriate authority or process.

If Ablepoint considers that further investigation is required, it should tell me what investigation is proposed and, where appropriate, provide an expected timeframe.

Silence does not establish my allegations. But silence is also not a substantive response to them.

I therefore respectfully request that Ablepoint engage with this statement in accordance with its applicable complaints-management, safeguarding, procedural-fairness and participant-rights obligations.

I also ask that Ablepoint not penalise, disadvantage, threaten or otherwise adversely treat me because I have raised these concerns. The NDIS Commission expressly states that providers must provide a safe environment for people with disability to raise concerns and complaints without fear of negative consequences. (NDIS Quality and Safeguards Commission)

My request is ultimately straightforward:

Hear the complaint. Record it. Preserve the evidence. Investigate what requires investigation. Tell me what is accepted and disputed. Explain the evidence and reasoning. And tell me what will be done in response.

That is not a request for automatic vindication.

It is a request for procedural fairness, dignity, accountability and an evidence-based response.
