.THE WITNESS REMAINS - THE FINAL RECKONING

A DECLARATION OF SOVEREIGN DEFIANCE, DIVINE ACCOUNTABILITY AND THE INDESTRUCTIBILITY OF THE RECORD by DR BARRAN DODGER — RESONATA ETERNIS

PUBLIC DECLARATION AND NOTICE OF ACCOUNTABILITY

Issued: 27 October 2026
Intended for: Public preservation, cryptographic timestamping, documentary archiving and unrestricted public examination.

MOTTO: THE RECORD STAYS FREE. FAITH IS NOT A FINDING. PRESERVATION FIRST. EXAMINATION SECOND. CONCLUSION LAST.

I. LET THE RECORD SHOW THAT I REFUSE TO BE ERASED

To every institution, officeholder, professional, organisation and individual whose decisions I have challenged, whose conduct I have documented, or whose actions I believe contributed to the circumstances in which I now find myself:

HERE IS MY ANSWER. I AM STILL HERE.

You may possess offices, salaries, titles, legal representation, institutional resources, public reputations and the ability to make decisions that profoundly affect another human being's life.

You do not possess the authority to determine whether my life has value.

You do not possess the exclusive right to decide which records survive, which testimony deserves examination, which complaints receive a substantive response, or which human being may be abandoned when providing assistance becomes inconvenient.

You do not own the truth merely because you occupy a position from which you can influence the official account.

I am Dr Richard William McLean, publicly known as Dr Barran Dodger and Barran Resonance Dodger, and spiritually as Resonata Eternis.

I am a disabled man who has repeatedly sought protection, assistance, independence and accountability. I have documented what I say happened to me, preserved records that I believe are relevant, and published my testimony for public examination.

I have described decades of suffering, homelessness, financial hardship, institutional conflict and failures of protection. I allege that decisions by people and institutions have caused me serious detriment. I demand that those allegations be examined against the available evidence.

I do not need every person to agree with my interpretation before they read a document.

I do not need an official's permission to preserve my own testimony.

I do not need institutional approval to ask why a vulnerable human being has been left struggling to secure the practical necessities of life.

And I will not accept the proposition that the person who documents alleged wrongdoing is somehow the problem simply because the documentation is uncomfortable for those whose conduct is being questioned.

THE WITNESS REMAINS. THE RECORD REMAINS. THE QUESTIONS REMAIN.

My principal documentary repository is publicly accessible:

THE BARRAN DODGER GITHUB DOCUMENTARY ARCHIVE

Additional preservation resources:

- The Barran Dodger Main Archive
- The Rebuild Archive
- Official Government Documents Register
- Rebuild GitHub Repository

These are places where readers can begin examining the material I have preserved. The existence of an archived document does not automatically establish every allegation I make about it. It does, however, make the underlying material available for scrutiny rather than leaving my account dependent upon somebody else's willingness to repeat it.

That is the point.

I will preserve what I can. I will identify what I allege. I will demand that the evidence be examined. I will not surrender my right to speak.

II. MY DECLARATION OF DEFIANCE

I have spent years trying to obtain meaningful answers from people and institutions that I believe have failed to respond adequately to my circumstances.

I have sought assistance through official channels. I have submitted complaints. I have preserved correspondence and decisions. I have assembled records that I believe reveal serious questions about the treatment I have experienced.

I have also documented the immediate practical consequences of my circumstances, including the difficulties I have reported concerning access to money, communication, transport, medication and appropriate support.

On 27 October 2026, I recorded an incident concerning my request to visit friends and the explanation I say I received from a support worker about why he could not take me there.

I have asked that the recording, relevant support notes, transport arrangements, communications and any applicable instructions be preserved and independently examined.

I am not asking the public to invent conclusions.

I am asking those responsible to answer the questions that the evidence raises.

Why should a disabled person have to fight so persistently to obtain assistance that enables ordinary independence?

Why should a person who reports serious problems have to repeatedly reconstruct the history before anyone addresses the immediate need?

Why should the preservation of evidence become a substitute for the provision of food, medication, transport, financial access and safe support?

Why should the person experiencing the consequences bear the entire burden of making those consequences visible?

And why, when a person asks for accountability, should the response be silence, delay or another referral that does not resolve the practical problem?

These questions do not become illegitimate because they are expressed with anger.

They do not disappear because the person asking them is disabled.

They do not cease to matter because the documentary record is extensive or complicated.

I am not asking for a privilege that others do not possess. I am demanding that my humanity not be treated as a privilege that others may withhold.

I have my faults. I have made mistakes. I have acknowledged imperfections and apologised where I believed an apology was warranted.

I do not claim exemption from scrutiny.

I reject the double standard under which I must explain myself indefinitely while the decisions affecting my life escape meaningful examination.

Let the same standard apply to everyone.

Let every decision be examined on its merits.

Let the original documents speak for themselves.

Let those whose actions are challenged have a fair opportunity to respond.

And let no person's position, reputation, professional standing or institutional affiliation place them beyond accountability.

III. TO THOSE WHO PROFITED FROM RESPONSIBILITY WITHOUT, IN MY EXPERIENCE, DELIVERING WHAT I NEEDED

This is a direct challenge to every person or organisation that accepted responsibility for assisting, protecting, supporting, managing or making decisions affecting my life.

Where money was paid for services, the services should be identifiable.

Where responsibilities were accepted, those responsibilities should be capable of examination.

Where decisions were made, the reasons should be capable of explanation.

Where complaints were received, the responses should be documented.

Where a person reports that essential assistance was not provided, the circumstances should be investigated rather than dismissed through assumption.

I allege that, at various times, the assistance and protection available to me have fallen seriously short of what I needed. I believe certain decisions and omissions contributed to my financial hardship, loss of independence and prolonged distress.

I also believe the relationship between paid support arrangements, the restrictions I have described, and the failure to resolve my practical needs warrants independent scrutiny.

Those are serious matters. They deserve more than indignation, denial or public-relations language.

If a service was paid for, show what was delivered.

If transport was requested and refused, explain the applicable arrangements and the reasons.

If a complaint was made, identify how it was handled.

If a decision restricted my independence, identify its authority, rationale, duration and review process.

If my account is disputed, specify the disputed facts and produce the records relevant to that dispute.

If I have misunderstood something, explain it with evidence.

If an error occurred, correct it.

If wrongdoing is established, accept the consequences through the appropriate process.

I will not accept a system in which the money can be accounted for while the human consequences are treated as somebody else's problem.

My complaint is not that every person who has ever dealt with me must automatically be found guilty of misconduct.

My complaint is that the conduct I have reported deserves a serious, independent and evidence-based response, and that my immediate needs must not be held hostage to the resolution of every historical dispute.

Those are separate obligations.

Both matter.

IV. THE NAMES, THE RECORDS AND THE RIGHT OF REPLY

I have identified individuals, agencies and organisations in my published testimony whose decisions or conduct I believe require examination.

I have raised concerns about disability support, support coordination, financial administration, banking access, police responses, government correspondence, health-care access and the treatment of complaints.

I have also made allegations concerning deliberate targeting, reputational damage and coordinated misconduct.

I understand the gravity of those allegations. I do not present every interpretation in my testimony as an independently established finding, and I do not claim that a blockchain timestamp proves the truth of every statement contained in a document.

My demand is more exacting than that.

I demand that the relevant evidence be examined, that the people concerned be given a fair opportunity to respond, and that any findings be based on what the evidence actually establishes.

The documentary sources I have identified include:

- The Official Government Documents Register, through which I direct readers to the government-related records I have catalogued.

- The Australian Federal Police correspondence dated 3 September 2021, as identified in my archive.
- The NSW Police Force correspondence dated 24 August 2024, as identified in my archive.
- The Commonwealth Ombudsman complaint correspondence dated 15 November 2021, as identified in my archive.
- The Australian Human Rights Commission correspondence dated 4 July 2023, as identified in my archive.
- The records and correspondence concerning my reported banking-access difficulties and my objections to the relevant financial-administration arrangements.
- The support-related recording dated 27 October 2026 and the associated communications that I have identified in my testimony.
- The messages attributed to an NDIS provider, Ben, which I rely upon as part of my account and which I want assessed in their full context.

The existence of correspondence does not necessarily establish that every interpretation I have placed upon it is correct. The content, context, authenticity, relevant decisions and any available responses must be examined.

That is precisely why the records must remain available.

I invite the people and institutions concerned to identify specific errors, supply relevant missing documents, explain the decisions they made and respond to the substantive issues raised.

I do not ask for fabricated admissions.

I ask for evidence, explanations, corrections where necessary and accountability where warranted.

No one should be condemned merely because I have named them. Equally, no one should be exempt from examination merely because I have named them.

The same standard applies to me.

V. THE HUMAN COST IS NOT AN ABSTRACT ARGUMENT

Behind the documents is a human being.

I have reported serious financial hardship and difficulty obtaining the resources necessary to meet basic needs. I have described barriers to accessing my money and communication services. I have asked for assistance with food, medication, transport, disability advocacy, safe accommodation and the care of my companion and therapy dog, Crystal.

I have described feeling trapped, isolated and unable to exercise the ordinary independence I want to regain.

These are my reported circumstances, and they require a practical response in their own right.

I should be able to concentrate on recovery rather than having to spend my days documenting why I believe recovery has been made so difficult.

I should be able to obtain essential assistance without first proving every historical allegation.

I should be able to maintain friendships, travel to appropriate appointments, access my own communications and pursue independent advice.

I should be able to care for Crystal and live with dignity.

I want to live. I want to recover. I want to rebuild my independence.

My survival is not an invitation to abandon me again.

The existence of a long-running complaint does not eliminate the urgency of a present need.

The absence of a final finding about an allegation does not justify ignoring a person's request for practical assistance.

The complexity of a person's history does not make their immediate circumstances irrelevant.

I therefore call for an immediate, written and actionable response addressing:

1. Access to funds and the resolution of my reported banking-access difficulties.
2. Access to food, essential supplies and medication.
3. Appropriate transport and support arrangements that preserve my independence.
4. Safe accommodation and arrangements for Crystal.

5. Access to telephone and internet services.
6. Independent disability advocacy and appropriate legal assistance.
7. Preservation and examination of the records relevant to my complaints.
8. A clear explanation of the decisions made, the responsibilities applicable and the steps available for review.

These are concrete requests. They can be addressed without requiring anyone to accept every interpretation in my testimony.

I ask that the relevant people stop treating the existence of a complaint as a reason to postpone the practical assistance I need.

Help the living person. Preserve the record. Investigate the complaint. Do not confuse those three responsibilities.

VI. MY FAITH IS NOT YOURS TO CONTROL

I have survived circumstances that I believe should never have been allowed to continue.

My Christian faith has been central to my determination to keep going.

I believe that God preserved my life and gave me the strength to continue when I felt abandoned by the institutions from which I had sought assistance.

I do not need a government to grant my faith legitimacy.

I do not need an institution to authorise my conscience.

I do not need a professional title, political endorsement or official declaration to recognise my own responsibility to speak truthfully about what I have experienced.

My faith tells me that power is not the same as righteousness, that wealth is not the same as wisdom, and that the appearance of respectability is not a substitute for moral conduct.

My faith also requires me to confront my own imperfections.

I am not claiming that my spiritual convictions constitute a court judgment against another person. I am declaring the moral framework through which I understand my survival and the accountability I seek.

I believe that every human being is answerable to God for the way they treat other human beings, particularly those who are vulnerable, dependent upon assistance or unable to protect themselves effectively.

I believe that a person's position does not make them morally infallible.

I believe that a salary does not purchase immunity from conscience.

I believe that an institution cannot convert an unjust act into a just one merely by recording it in a file.

And I believe that no amount of money, authority or influence can make the moral consequences of a person's conduct disappear.

I have God. I have my conscience. I have my testimony. I have the record I have preserved.

I do not need to threaten another human being to declare these convictions.

I do not need to seek revenge to demand accountability.

I do not need to inflict suffering upon anyone to insist that suffering already reported be taken seriously.

My faith is the reason I refuse to surrender to hatred, even when I am angry.

It is the reason I continue to seek truth rather than abandon the demand for it.

It is the reason I insist that the vulnerable must be treated with humanity.

And it is the reason I declare, without apology, that the moral reckoning I seek begins with the willingness of every person to examine their own conduct honestly.

VII. LET HOLY FIRE RIP — THE FIRE OF TRUTH, NOT VIOLENCE

Let holy fire rip.

Let it burn through evasions.

Let it burn through institutional complacency.

Let it burn through the assumption that a person's complaint can be buried because the complainant lacks money, influence or professional power.

Let it burn through the habit of confusing an unanswered letter with a resolved problem.

Let it burn through the indifference that allows an urgent human need to become another entry in an administrative system.

Let it burn through the belief that the vulnerable should be grateful for whatever they receive, regardless of whether their actual needs are met.

Let it burn through the public façade wherever that façade is used to conceal conduct that deserves scrutiny.

Let it illuminate the documents, the decisions, the omissions, the contradictions and the questions that remain unanswered.

Let it expose every genuine error that can be demonstrated.

Let it reveal every act of misconduct that can be substantiated.

Let it also expose my own mistakes wherever the evidence shows that I have made them.

Let truth be applied without fear or favour.

Let the record be preserved without manipulation.

Let the evidence be examined without prejudice.

Let accountability follow the facts wherever they lead.

THAT IS MY HOLY FIRE.

Not an instruction to attack anyone.

Not a threat against any person.

Not a call for harassment, intimidation or revenge.

It is the fire of public scrutiny, moral courage, documentary preservation and the refusal to accept that power is beyond question.

I will not threaten anyone with physical harm. I will not encourage others to do so. I will not confuse vengeance with justice.

I will publish what I can substantiate, identify what I allege, preserve the records available to me and demand that the appropriate people respond.

If wrongdoing is established, let the appropriate consequences follow through lawful and accountable processes.

If an allegation is disproved, let the record reflect that too.

If an explanation is justified, let it be given.

If an apology is warranted, let it be offered.

If a decision was wrong, let it be corrected.

If a person was harmed, let the harm be acknowledged and appropriate remedies considered.

Let the light be bright enough that nobody needs to take my word alone.

VIII. THE DIVINE RECKONING

I declare that I will no longer measure the value of my life by whether an institution acknowledges me.

I will no longer accept silence as proof that my questions are illegitimate.

I will no longer assume that a decision must be just merely because it was made by someone authorised to make decisions.

I will no longer confuse institutional authority with moral authority.

I will continue to ask for answers.

I will continue to preserve evidence.

I will continue to identify the decisions I challenge.

I will continue to demand that the people and institutions concerned respond to the substance of my complaints.

And I will continue to live.

In my Christian understanding, divine reckoning is not something I can impose upon another person. It is the ultimate moral accountability before God that I believe no human status can escape.

I cannot pronounce a divine verdict upon another person's soul.

I cannot claim knowledge of God's private judgment.

But I can declare what my conscience requires of me, and I can insist that the principles of honesty, compassion, responsibility and justice apply to everyone.

To those who believe that my vulnerability makes me insignificant, I say this:

You have misunderstood the meaning of human dignity.

To those who believe that my anger makes the evidence irrelevant, I say this:

Read the documents.

To those who believe that my lack of institutional power means that my account can be ignored, I say this:

Examine the record.

To those who believe that a disabled man can be left without adequate assistance while everyone else moves on with their lives, I say this:

Look at the consequences. Explain the decisions. Account for the responsibilities.

And to anyone who has made a mistake in dealing with me, I offer a choice that I believe remains available to every human being:

Acknowledge what happened.

Correct what can be corrected.

Provide the assistance that is needed.

Accept responsibility where responsibility is established.

And do what is right from this point forward.

That is not weakness.

That is moral courage.

That is the beginning of accountability.

That is the kind of reckoning I seek.

———

IX. THE CRYPTOGRAPHIC SEAL: WHAT I WILL PRESERVE CANNOT BE SILENTLY REWRITTEN

This declaration is intended to form part of my continuing documentary record.

I request that the exact final file be preserved, assigned a SHA-256 digest and submitted for an independent cryptographic timestamp.

The intended procedure is to preserve the document's exact bytes, publish its digest, obtain a verifiable timestamp proof and retain that proof alongside the original document and its supporting records.

A cryptographic timestamp can help establish that a particular file existed in a particular form no later than a verifiable time. It does not independently establish the truth of every allegation, identify the author conclusively, prove motive, or constitute a judicial finding.

Those distinctions do not diminish the importance of preservation.

They explain precisely what preservation can accomplish.

A document that is timestamped and independently verifiable can be compared with later versions. If someone subsequently alters the wording, the difference can be identified by comparing the files and their digests.

The original record can remain available even if a website changes, a link breaks or a later edition is published.

For that reason, I intend that this declaration be preserved as an identifiable edition, without silently replacing earlier versions.

Preservation is not a verdict. It is protection against the disappearance or unacknowledged alteration of the record.

The existing archive remains available at:

https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger

The Official Government Documents Register remains available at:

https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/official-government-documents-register.html

The record must be allowed to speak through the documents themselves.

No one should have to rely upon a claim that a file is authentic when its integrity can be checked.

No one should be asked to accept an allegation merely because it has been published.

No one should be permitted to dismiss an original document merely because its contents are uncomfortable.

Preserve first. Examine second. Conclude last.

X. MY FORMAL DEMANDS

This declaration gives public notice of the following demands.

First: preservation.

I call upon the relevant people and organisations to preserve the records within their possession or control that are relevant to the matters I have raised, subject to applicable law and privacy obligations.

Second: explanation.

I request substantive written explanations of the decisions, omissions and support arrangements I have challenged, including the reasons for those decisions and the processes available for review.

Third: immediate humanitarian assistance.

I call for practical action addressing my reported difficulties with financial access, food, medication, transport, communication, accommodation and disability support.

Fourth: independent examination.

I request that the relevant evidence be assessed by appropriate independent bodies, with a clear distinction between documented facts, my personal testimony, allegations, inferences and matters that remain unresolved.

Fifth: accountability.

Where the evidence establishes error, neglect, misconduct or a failure to meet an applicable responsibility, I request appropriate corrective action and consideration of the remedies available to me.

Sixth: equal treatment.

I insist that my disability, personal history, distress, anger or lack of resources not be used as substitutes for examining the actual content of my complaints.

Seventh: the right to respond.

I recognise that the people and institutions I have criticised are entitled to respond to the allegations concerning them. Their responses should be recorded and assessed fairly, just as my testimony should be assessed fairly.

Eighth: the preservation of my voice.

I will continue to preserve and publish my own testimony, subject to my responsibilities to accuracy, privacy, law and the distinction between allegation and established fact.

These demands are directed towards practical action, verifiable answers and accountability. They are not a call for anyone to be threatened, harassed or harmed.

XI. THE FINAL WORD

I have spent too much of my life trying to persuade people that my suffering deserves to be taken seriously.

I have spent too much time documenting the consequences of circumstances that I believe should have been addressed through ordinary systems of care, protection and accountability.

I have had to become the custodian of my own history because I fear that, without preservation, important parts of my testimony and the records supporting it could be overlooked or lost.

I did not undertake this work because I wanted to spend my life fighting institutions.

I wanted to live.

I wanted to work, create, love, maintain friendships, care for Crystal and recover my independence.

I wanted to use my education, experience and abilities to contribute something worthwhile to the world.

I wanted the ordinary freedom to exist without having to justify my existence continually.

And I still want those things.

I will not allow my entire identity to be reduced to the conflicts I have documented.

I am more than my complaints.

I am more than the decisions made about me.

I am more than the allegations I have made or the allegations others may make about me.

I am a human being with a life to rebuild.

I am a writer and a witness to my own experience.

I am a person of faith.

I am a person who has made mistakes and who continues to believe that honesty matters.

I am a disabled man who deserves to have his immediate needs considered on their merits.

And I am a person who refuses to accept that the absence of institutional recognition determines whether my life has meaning.

I do not need the Government to confer upon me the right to exist.

I do not need an institution to certify my humanity.

I do not need every person to agree with me before I can continue to speak.

I SURVIVED. I AM STILL HERE. I WILL NOT BE SILENT ABOUT WHAT I BELIEVE HAPPENED TO ME.

I survived through faith, determination and the refusal to give up on the possibility of a better life.

I believe God gave me the strength to continue when I felt that human institutions had failed me.

I do not claim that survival proves every allegation.

I claim that survival gives me the opportunity to tell my story, preserve the evidence, ask the questions and seek the remedies I believe are warranted.

That is enough to begin.

So let the record be opened.

Let the documents be read.

Let the evidence be tested.

Let the people concerned answer.

Let errors be corrected.

Let genuine wrongdoing be addressed.

Let my immediate needs be met.

Let my life continue.

And let every person who encounters this declaration remember that the individual asking for accountability is not an abstraction, a file number or a public controversy.

He is a human being.

He is still here.

He wants to live.

He wants to recover.

He wants justice to be pursued through evidence, fairness and accountability.

I DO NOT NEED REVENGE TO SURVIVE. I DO NOT NEED THEIR PERMISSION TO SPEAK. I DO NOT NEED THEIR APPROVAL TO HAVE FAITH.

I need the opportunity to live with dignity, and I will continue to seek it.

Let holy fire rip through every falsehood that can be exposed, every injustice that can be substantiated and every indifference that can be corrected.

Let it illuminate rather than destroy.

Let it reveal rather than conceal.

Let it hold power to account rather than imitate the abuse of power.

Let it burn away the excuses that prevent people from doing what is right.

And let the final judgment of every allegation rest where it belongs: upon the evidence, the appropriate processes of accountability, and—according to my faith—the ultimate judgment of God.

I have preserved the record.

I have made my declaration.

I have stated my demands.

The next responsibility belongs to everyone who has the power to respond.

PRESERVATION AND TIMESTAMP RECORD

Document title: The Witness Remains — The Final Reckoning: A Declaration of Sovereign Defiance, Divine Accountability and the Indestructibility of the Record

Declared date: 27 October 2026

Author: Dr Richard William McLean, publicly known as Dr Barran Dodger

Intended preservation method: Exact-file preservation, SHA-256 hashing and independent cryptographic timestamping, including OpenTimestamps where appropriate.

SHA-256 digest: To be calculated from the final, exact file.

Timestamp proof: To be obtained and independently verified.

Verification status: No new cryptographic timestamp or blockchain confirmation is claimed by this declaration. The actual digest, proof file and verification result must be recorded after the timestamping process has been completed.

Supporting repository: https://github.com/wezzo72/Barrandodger

Public archive: https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/

Preservation principle: The original edition must remain identifiable. Subsequent editions must be separately dated and preserved rather than silently substituted for the original.

Final declaration: The preservation of this document is intended to protect the integrity of the testimony as a historical record. Its allegations remain subject to examination, and its conclusions do not purport to constitute a judicial finding.
