Good morning,

The Health Care Complaints Commission has received your email below.

The role of the Commission is to manage complaints about healthcare practitioners (e.g., doctors, dentists, counsellors) and other health service providers (e.g., hospitals and pathology labs) within NSW.

For more information on the types of concerns that are within the Commission's scope as well as our process please visit What can I make a complaint about? - NSW Health Care Complaints Commission

Upon review of the information you have provided, the Commission will require more information to assess your concerns. As such, to progress your complaint – we kindly that you submit this information via our complaint form. The completion of a formal complaint form will ensure that we have the necessary information required to assess your complaint.

A complaint form can be lodged via our online complaint portal Sign up or sign in.

Please note that the Commission cannot intervene in care and treatment.

If you would like to speak with someone further, you are welcome to contact our Enquiries Line on 1800 043 159 or (02) 9219 7444 and select option 1.

We hope the information provided is of assistance.

Kind regards,

The Health Care Complaints Commission
