RE: NOTICE OF HARM, FORMAL OBJECTION AND NOTICE OF DEMANDS MADE TO ABLEPOINT AUSTRALIA

Dear Eustina,

I am writing to ensure that you are expressly aware of the serious concerns I have raised with Ablepoint Australia, the harm I contend is presently being caused to me, and the specific documentary, evidentiary and accountability measures I have formally requested from Ablepoint.

I want there to be no misunderstanding about what I am asking for.

I am not asking Ablepoint simply to believe my allegations.

I am demanding that the underlying documentary record be preserved, examined and tested, and that Ablepoint account for its own decisions, information sources, communications and actions affecting me.

1. THE DEMANDS I HAVE MADE TO ABLEPOINT

I have formally requested that Ablepoint:

1. Preserve all relevant records concerning me, including referrals, assessments, case notes, incident reports, emails, attachments, communications, decision records and relevant metadata.
2. Identify the information Ablepoint received about me, including information received from previous providers, government agencies, professionals, individuals and other organisations.
3. Identify the source of that information, rather than treating institutional repetition as independent corroboration.
4. Identify what Ablepoint independently verified, as distinct from information merely received or repeated.
5. Identify the decisions made concerning me, who made them, when they were made and what information was relied upon.

6. Identify the reasons for those decisions, including the contemporaneous reasons recorded at the time.
7. Preserve and consider contradictory or exculpatory evidence, rather than allowing one institutional narrative to become the entire evidentiary record.
8. Examine whether information existing before Ablepoint knew me was subsequently carried forward, including whether earlier classifications, descriptions or narratives influenced later decisions.
9. Account for communications with individuals or organisations whom I have identified as perpetrators, where those communications are relevant to decisions concerning me.
10. Address my allegations of entrapment and financial abuse by examining the actual decisions, financial consequences, information available and causal pathways.
11. Acknowledge my reports of V2K/audio harassment as reports that I have made, without requiring Ablepoint to accept my explanation of their source or mechanism.
12. Conduct or facilitate appropriate independent review or investigation where the documentary evidence warrants it.
13. Where review or investigation is declined, provide the precise evidentiary, procedural or legal basis for declining it.

These are the demands I have placed before Ablepoint.

I want you to be aware of them so that there is a clear contemporaneous record that these matters have been raised and that I have requested an evidence-based response.

2. WHY I AM MAKING THESE DEMANDS

My concern is not limited to an individual disagreement with a particular decision.

I contend that the cumulative effect of decisions, restrictions, financial consequences, information recorded about me and the treatment of my testimony is causing continuing harm.

I contend that this includes financial harm, loss of autonomy, institutional containment, distress, reputational consequences, uncertainty and the continuing consequences of matters I have reported as entrapment, perpetrator alignment and V2K/audio harassment.

I object to these matters being treated as though they arose independently of the institutional decisions surrounding me.

At the same time, I recognise that an allegation is not automatically an established fact.

That is precisely why I have demanded a documentary investigation.

3. THE HISTORY PREDATES ABLEPOINT

I also want you to understand that the documentary history did not begin with Ablepoint.

There are records predating Ablepoint's involvement extending back many years, including publications, employment records, provider registration, corporate records, government correspondence, regulatory processes, complaints, FOI matters and tribunal proceedings.

The chronology includes significant documented events from 2003, 2006–2007, 2018, 2019, 2020 and 2021, followed by multiple government and institutional processes.

The Ablepoint Australia business name was registered on 22 November 2021, against Sahara Disability and Care Services Pty Ltd, which had been recorded from 13 May 2021.

This chronology matters because it raises a fundamental question:

What information about me already existed before Ablepoint became involved, where did it originate, and what information was subsequently transmitted into Ablepoint's decision-making environment?

I am asking that question as an evidentiary question.

I am not asking you to assume the answer.

4. MY OBJECTION TO V2K/AUDIO HARASSMENT BEING IMPLICITLY DENIED

I particularly want you to understand my objection concerning V2K/audio harassment.

I have reported experiences that I describe in those terms.

I am not asking you to determine, without evidence, who or what caused those experiences.

I am asking that the fact that I reported them not be erased through silence, omission or a record that simply treats them as though they were never reported.

There is an important distinction between:

"Richard reported this experience."

and:

"The source or mechanism of the experience has been independently established."

The first is a documentary fact about my report.

The second remains a question for evidence.

I expect that distinction to be maintained.

5. MY OBJECTION TO ALLEGED PERPETRATOR ALIGNMENT

I have also expressly objected to what I perceive and allege to be deliberate alignment between Ablepoint and people whom I identify as perpetrators of previous harm.

I understand the seriousness of that allegation.

For that reason, I have not asked Ablepoint merely to accept it.

I have asked Ablepoint to identify the communications, information sources and decisions that could either corroborate or contradict it.

If no such evidence exists, that should be stated.

If evidence does exist, it should be preserved and examined.

If the matter remains unresolved, it should be identified as unresolved.

6. I WILL NOT SHRINK MY TESTIMONY

I want you to understand this clearly.

I will not shrink for Ablepoint's comfort.

I will not suppress my testimony because it is inconvenient.

I will not abandon my documentary archive because institutions dispute my interpretation of it.

I will not accept that a later institutional characterisation can simply erase an earlier record.

I am prepared for my evidence to be scrutinised.

I ask that institutional evidence be scrutinised by the same standard.

7. THE RESPONSE DEADLINE

I have requested a substantive written response from Ablepoint by:

30 SEPTEMBER 2026

I have requested that the response identify what records have been preserved, what information was received, where it came from, what was independently verified, what decisions were made, what evidence was relied upon, what contradictions were considered, and whether appropriate independent review or investigation will occur.

If Ablepoint declines to investigate or review the matters raised, I have requested that the precise evidentiary, procedural or legal basis for that decision be provided.

I am making you aware of this deadline because I do not want there to be any later uncertainty about whether these matters were raised, what I requested, or what response I sought.

8. WHY I AM WRITING TO YOU

I am writing to you because the harm I report is ongoing and because decisions made by institutions and individuals around me have consequences for my actual life.

I want you to understand that I am not simply making accusations and demanding that everyone agree with me.

I am asking for something more fundamental:

Preserve the evidence.

Identify the source.

Trace the information.

Explain the decision.

Acknowledge the contradiction.

Record my reports accurately.

Examine the consequences.

Investigate where the evidence warrants investigation.

That is the standard I am asking Ablepoint to apply.

CONCLUSION

Eustina, I want you to be fully aware that I have formally objected to what I contend is entrapment, financial abuse, V2K/audio harassment, alleged deliberate alignment with perpetrators and a broader pattern that I believe has operated to silence my testimony or diminish my ability to assert myself.

I have also expressly objected to any implicit denial of my reported experiences simply because an institution has not accepted my explanation of them.

You do not have to accept my conclusions.

But you should be aware that I have formally requested that Ablepoint examine the evidence capable of confirming, contradicting or qualifying them.

The issue is therefore no longer simply whether I have raised concerns.

I have.

The issue is whether the relevant records will be preserved, whether the information pathways will be identified, whether the decisions will be accounted for, and whether the evidence will be independently examined where appropriate.

I will not erase my testimony.

I will not shrink for institutional comfort.

I will continue to preserve the record and submit it to scrutiny.

I ask that you retain this letter as notice of the concerns I have raised and the formal demands I have made to Ablepoint.

The record should speak for itself.

The evidence should be preserved.

The contradictions should remain visible.

The sources should be identified.

And where the evidence warrants investigation, investigation should follow.

Yours sincerely,

Dr Richard William McLean

FORMAL NOTICE

This is a formal evidentiary notice, express objection, request for preservation of records, and request for formal review and investigation.

I request written acknowledgment of receipt of this notice and a substantive response by 30 September 2026.

Where a different statutory, contractual or procedural timeframe applies, I request that Ablepoint identify that timeframe and the basis upon which it applies.

1. PURPOSE OF THIS NOTICE

I provide this consolidated notice to place on record my circumstances, my objections to the treatment I have experienced, the documentary history preceding and surrounding my involvement with Ablepoint Australia, and the evidence that I have preserved concerning institutional decision-making, information transfer, financial consequences, alleged entrapment, alleged surveillance and V2K/audio harassment, and the conduct of individuals whom I identify as perpetrators.

I am not asking Ablepoint or any other recipient to accept every allegation, interpretation or conclusion I have expressed as an established fact.

I am requiring the underlying evidence to be examined.

The central evidentiary question is:

What information existed before Ablepoint became involved; where did that information originate; how was it transmitted; what information did Ablepoint receive; what did Ablepoint independently verify; what decisions were subsequently made; what information was relied upon; and what consequences followed?

2. THE PRE-EXISTING HISTORY

The documentary record demonstrates that a substantial institutional history existed before Ablepoint's involvement with me.

That history includes government, regulatory, tribunal, professional, provider, corporate, complaint, FOI, administrative and other records extending across multiple years.

The existence of those records is not dependent upon whether Ablepoint agrees with my interpretation of them.

A disputed interpretation does not erase the underlying document.

Nor does a later institutional characterisation automatically convert an earlier allegation into an established fact.

Equally, repeated institutional statements do not become independent corroboration merely because they appear in multiple files.

The evidentiary task is therefore to trace the information back to its earliest identifiable source.

3. MY EXPRESS OBJECTION

I expressly object to what I contend has been my entrapment, financial abuse, V2K/audio harassment, and the alleged deliberate alignment of Ablepoint with individuals whom I identify as perpetrators of conduct against me.

I further object to what I contend has been Ablepoint's failure to acknowledge its own role, decisions, omissions, communications and participation in the circumstances I have documented.

I do not accept that Ablepoint can treat its own conduct as irrelevant while characterising the consequences experienced by me as though they arose independently of Ablepoint's actions.

I allege that these circumstances form part of a broader pattern in which information, institutional responses and restrictions have operated to silence my testimony, diminish my credibility, or cause me to withdraw from asserting my rights and documenting my experience.

Where I use the term "mandate", I use it as an allegation and investigative proposition requiring documentary examination, not as a proposition that recipients are required to accept without scrutiny.

4. I WILL NOT SHRINK MY TESTIMONY

I will not shrink myself, suppress my testimony, or diminish my work merely to make my circumstances more comfortable for an organisation or institution.

My testimony is part of the evidentiary record.

That does not mean that every proposition contained within my testimony must automatically be accepted.

It means that my testimony should not be erased merely because an institution disputes its interpretation.

The proper response to disputed testimony is examination, corroboration, contradiction and investigation.

It is not disappearance.

5. V2K AND AUDIO HARASSMENT

I specifically object to any treatment of my reports of V2K/audio harassment that effectively denies the reports by refusing to acknowledge that they were made.

I am not asking Ablepoint to endorse a particular explanation for the source, mechanism or perpetrator of those experiences.

I am asking Ablepoint to accurately record that I have reported them and to distinguish:

- the fact that I made the report;
- the content of the report;
- evidence independently corroborating or contradicting it;
- possible explanations considered; and
- any conclusion reached concerning source or mechanism.

The absence of an accepted explanation cannot properly be converted into an assertion that the underlying report never existed.

6. THE ALLEGED ALIGNMENT WITH PERPETRATORS

I object to what I perceive and allege to be deliberate alignment between Ablepoint and persons whom I identify as perpetrators.

This allegation should be tested against the documentary record.

The relevant questions include:

- What information about me was provided to Ablepoint?
- Who provided it?
- What information did Ablepoint obtain independently?
- Did Ablepoint communicate with individuals or organisations I had identified as involved in prior harm?
- What representations were made about me?
- What records were relied upon?
- Were contradictory records considered?
- Were my own explanations sought and recorded?
- Were decisions predetermined by information received before Ablepoint knew me?
- Were restrictions or adverse decisions based upon information that had never been independently verified?

These questions are capable of documentary investigation.

7. THE POSSIBILITY OF A PRE-EXISTING ADMINISTRATIVE METHOD

One of the most important questions raised by the chronology is whether an established administrative method, classification, narrative or information pathway existed before Ablepoint became involved with me and was subsequently carried forward.

This is not presented as an established conspiracy.

It is an evidentiary hypothesis requiring testing.

If the same unusual information, terminology, characterisation, error or omission appears across institutions, the proper question is not automatically "conspiracy."

The proper question is:

Where did the information originate, how did it travel, and why was it subsequently relied upon?

If there is a documented transmission pathway, it should be identified.

If there is no identifiable pathway, that should also be recorded.

An unexplained information pathway is not proof of surveillance.

But neither should unexplained convergence simply be ignored where documentary evidence permits further investigation.

8. INFORMATION LINEAGE

Every material adverse proposition concerning me should be capable of being traced through an evidentiary chain:

Original proposition → earliest source → author → date → evidence relied upon → recipient → transmission → later reproduction → independent verification → decision → consequence.

Where the source is unknown, it should be identified as unknown.

Where information was merely repeated, it should be identified as repeated.

Where information was independently established, the independent evidence should be identified.

Where evidence conflicts, the conflict should be preserved rather than resolved merely by institutional preference.

9. ABLEPOINT'S RECORDS

I request preservation and review of all records relevant to these matters, including:

- referrals;
- intake records;
- assessments;
- case notes;
- incident reports;
- emails;
- attachments;
- internal communications;
- communications with previous providers;
- communications with government agencies;
- communications concerning guardianship or financial management;
- risk assessments;
- behavioural or professional characterisations;
- accommodation records;
- restrictions or decisions affecting me;
- records identifying the reasons for those decisions;
- information received about my history;
- records identifying the source of that information;
- records showing whether information was independently verified;
- records concerning communications with persons whom I had identified as perpetrators; and
- records concerning complaints, allegations, police matters or other information relied upon in decisions concerning me.

10. FORMER RELATIONSHIP AND ALLEGED FABRICATION OF INFORMATION

I also place on record my allegations concerning my former relationship, the publication attributed to the Herald Sun, and information I have described concerning an alleged payment or inducement intended to procure or encourage the fabrication of a report.

I do not require Ablepoint to accept those allegations as proven.

I require the relevant records, communications, reports and source material to be identified, preserved and independently examined where they have been relied upon in forming decisions or characterisations concerning me.

Where I have stated that police information was relevant to these matters, that statement should be treated as my account unless and until the underlying police material is independently examined.

11. FINANCIAL CONSEQUENCES

I expressly object to what I contend has constituted financial abuse and financial detriment.

The financial consequences should be examined separately from assumptions concerning motive.

The documentary analysis should identify:

what expenditure occurred; what payments were withheld, restricted or affected; what entitlement was asserted; what decision caused or contributed to the financial consequence; who made the decision; what information was available to that decision-maker; what reason was recorded; what alternative explanations exist; and what evidence establishes or contradicts causation.

12. DOCUMENTARY CONTRADICTIONS

The archive contains examples where later institutional records differ from earlier search outcomes or descriptions.

For example, the PM&C FOI history includes an earlier search outcome followed by additional information and a later revised decision identifying historical documents.

That does not, by itself, establish deliberate concealment.

It does establish a documentary discrepancy requiring explanation.

The same standard should apply to all other disputed records.

13. HISTORY CANNOT BE ERASED BY LATER CHARACTERISATION

A later administrative characterisation does not extinguish the existence of an earlier contemporaneous record.

If a later record says something different from an earlier record, the evidentiary question becomes:

What changed, when did it change, who changed it, why did it change, and what evidence justified the change?

That is a question of provenance.

It is not resolved simply by giving greater institutional status to the later document.

14. NO DEMAND THAT MY ALLEGATIONS BE BELIEVED

I repeat that I am not asking recipients to believe every allegation I have made.

I am asking recipients to apply the same evidentiary standard to institutional accounts that they would apply to my testimony.

If my allegations are unsupported, identify the evidence showing that.

If they are contradicted, identify the contradiction.

If they are corroborated, preserve the corroboration.

If the evidence is inconclusive, record it as inconclusive.

If the source of information is unknown, record it as unknown.

That is what an impartial evidentiary process requires.

15. EVIDENCE PRESERVATION

I formally request preservation of all potentially relevant records.

This includes electronic communications, emails, attachments, case-management records, referral information, assessments, notes, recordings where lawfully held, metadata, decision records, internal correspondence, external correspondence, complaints, incident reports and communications with third parties.

No relevant record should be altered, destroyed, overwritten or discarded merely because its evidentiary significance has not yet been determined.

16. REQUEST FOR FORMAL REVIEW AND INVESTIGATION

I request that these matters be subjected to a formal documentary review addressing:

EVIDENCE PRESERVATION

→ PROVENANCE REVIEW

→ INFORMATION-LINEAGE AUDIT

→ DECISION REVIEW

→ CONTRADICTION REVIEW

→ CAUSATION ASSESSMENT

→ INDEPENDENT INVESTIGATION WHERE WARRANTED

→ APPROPRIATE LEGAL OR REGULATORY REFERRAL WHERE REQUIRED.

The purpose should be to establish what the evidence actually demonstrates, rather than to predetermine either my allegations or the institutional response.

17. RESPONSE REQUIRED BY 30 SEPTEMBER 2026

I request a substantive written response no later than 30 September 2026.

The response should identify, to the extent lawfully available:

1. What records have been preserved;
2. What information concerning me was received from other organisations or individuals;
3. The identified source of that information;
4. What information was independently verified;
5. What decisions were made on the basis of that information;
6. Who made those decisions;
7. What reasons were recorded;
8. What contradictory or exculpatory material was considered;
9. Whether the information was independently reviewed;
10. Whether the matters raised in this notice will be formally investigated; and
11. If investigation or review is declined, the precise evidentiary, procedural or legal basis for that decision.

If additional time is genuinely required, I request that this be communicated before the deadline, together with the reason for the extension and the proposed date for substantive response.

FINAL STATEMENT

I object to being placed in a position where I must choose between silence and access to support, between surrendering my testimony and being treated as credible, or between making myself smaller and having my history acknowledged.

I will not erase my testimony to accommodate an institutional narrative.

I will not shrink for Ablepoint's comfort.

I will continue to preserve the documentary record and present it for scrutiny.

At the same time, I accept that scrutiny must apply in both directions.

The question is not whether my allegations are believed.

The question is what the documentary record establishes when every material proposition is traced to its source, every transmission is identified, every decision is examined against the information actually available at the time, and contradictory evidence is preserved rather than erased.

Ablepoint does not have to accept my conclusions.

It does, however, need to acknowledge the history sufficiently to permit that history to be examined.

Where my reports of V2K/audio harassment, financial abuse, entrapment, alleged perpetrator alignment, institutional treatment and silencing are relevant to decisions concerning me, those reports should not be silently converted into non-events by omission.

Failure to acknowledge the existence of a reported experience is not the same thing as disproving it.

Failure to identify the source of information is not the same thing as establishing its reliability.

Repetition is not automatically independent corroboration.

And a later characterisation cannot simply erase the earlier documentary record.

The appropriate course is preservation, provenance, examination, contradiction testing and, where the evidence warrants it, investigation.

The record should speak for itself.

The evidence should be preserved.

The contradictions should remain visible.

The sources should be identified.

The decisions should be accountable.

And where the evidence warrants it, the appropriate investigation should follow.

Signed,

Dr Richard William McLean

Archive Finding Aid

D

Yes. I would add the documents that most directly support the new testimony about survival, vulnerability, institutional treatment, legal-resource imbalance, faith and the distinction between testimony and documentary evidence. The current finding aid identifies these sections and explicitly separates the institutional record from your own testimony.
Public-Facing Forensic Archive
The Church of Barran Dodger Ministry and Whistleblower Testimony and Ethical & Legal Trust Fund Archive — Finding Aid
A public-facing finding aid bringing together the documentary record, testimony, institutional correspondence, legal and administrative material, published works, YouTube records and spiritual writings. It currently identifies 731 indexed files, including 577 GitHub-backup PDFs, 93 additional Drive files and 61 attached records. The archive expressly distinguishes documentary records from the author's testimony and states that inclusion is not itself independent verification.
What the Evidence Proves
What the Evidence Proves

This is the principal evidence-focused document for testing the new testimony against the institutional record. It identifies correspondence from Comcare, the AAT, APRA, PM&C, OAIC, the NSW Ombudsman, the NDIS Commission and other bodies, allowing the reader to distinguish what agencies actually recorded from the conclusions drawn from those records.

Brief for a Third Party

Brief for a Third Party

A concise entry point for an independent reviewer, journalist, lawyer or parliamentarian. It brings together process outcomes, documentary evidence, gaps in the record and instructions for examining individual correspondence rather than accepting the author's interpretation without scrutiny.

Public Interest Disclosure Declarations

PID Declarations

The original Public Interest Disclosure declarations alongside institutional non-allocation correspondence are particularly relevant to the testimony about seeking protection, reporting concerns and attempting to obtain institutional intervention. They provide a documentary basis for examining what was reported, how it was classified and what happened afterwards.

Whistleblower Protection Record

Whistleblower Protection

This section is significant to the testimony concerning vulnerability and the struggle to obtain institutional protection. The archive identifies material concerning the PID Act, Corporations Act and the documented dispute over whether the author fell within relevant public-official categories.

Legal-Resource Asymmetry

Dare: The State Had Lawyers — and I Had the Record

This document most directly supports the new testimony about being left to survive and advocate without equivalent institutional resources. The archive records the claimed disparity between public authorities with government lawyers, administrative-law expertise and institutional resources and the individual attempting to challenge those decisions, while expressly acknowledging that this disparity does not itself establish that every decision was unlawful.

Legal Pathways and Financial Detriment

Legal Pathways

This section is relevant to the testimony concerning poverty, legal access and the ability to continue advocating for oneself. It identifies pathways including Act of Grace, CDDA, NDIS complaints, FOI and victims' schemes, documenting possible avenues that remain available independently of a Comcare outcome.

My Testimony

My Testimony — Author's Account

This is the principal document for the new personal testimony itself: survival, persecution as experienced by the author, pathologisation, injury, institutional treatment and the meaning the author attributes to those experiences. The archive expressly labels it "not impartial", making the evidentiary distinction clear.

Church and Manifesto

Church and Manifesto

This document supports the new testimony concerning faith, being chosen, divine purpose, forgiveness, spiritual identity and divine justice. It contains the Church of Barran Dodger material, manifesto, dedication, charter and chosen-vessel declarations. The archive appropriately identifies this material as the author's spiritual framework rather than an impartial institutional finding.

Gospels and Prophetic Writing

Gospels and Prophetic Writing

This substantial body of writing—including the identified 210-page compilation—documents the development of the author's spiritual interpretation of suffering, survival, purpose, forgiveness and faith. It is particularly relevant to the new testimony that the experience ultimately strengthened rather than destroyed the author's faith.

Published Works and Professional History

Published Works and the Clipping

This section places the later testimony alongside the author's earlier public and professional history, including Recovered, Not Cured (2003), the Herald Sun material, The Age and later published works. It is important when assessing the claim that the present testimony did not emerge in isolation but sits within a much longer documented public record.

YouTube Testimony and Public Record

YouTube Record

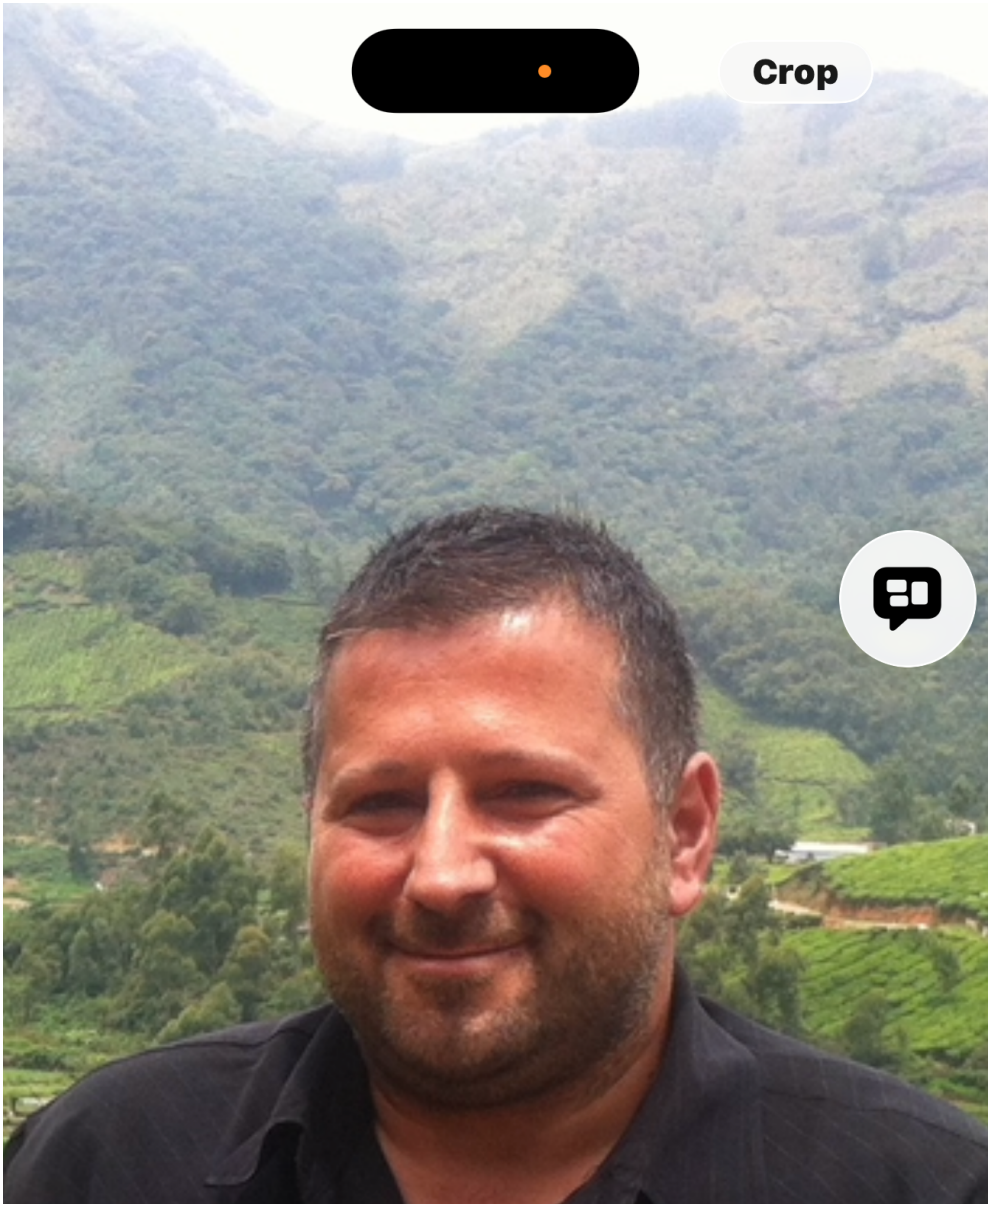

The archive identifies the author's YouTube channel and 73 prior-archive mappings of third-party videos, preserving another public-facing component of the testimony. This is particularly relevant to your argument that you repeatedly made your experiences public rather than simply disappearing or refusing to seek assistance.

Provenance, Hashes and Timestamps

Provenance and Timestamps

This is significant for the evidentiary foundation of the entire testimony because the archive identifies SHA-256 hashes, Git blob hashes and an OpenTimestamps receipt. Those mechanisms provide a way to test whether particular hosted copies correspond byte-for-byte with the archived material and help establish provenance rather than relying solely on recollection.
Earlier GitHub Pages Archive
Barran Dodger Legal & Ethical Trust Fund Archive — Backup
The earlier public archive provides the historical layer of the record. The newer finding aid specifically identifies the GitHub Backup as its prior public archive and says its collection includes the previously published HTML routes and related material.
Significance to the New Testimony
Taken together, these documents support a much stronger evidentiary proposition than simply "this is my story." They establish that there is a publicly preserved body of institutional correspondence, PID material, legal and administrative records, professional history, testimony, spiritual writing and provenance information against which the newer claims can be independently assessed. The archive itself is careful to distinguish documentary evidence, personal testimony and spiritual interpretation—which is precisely the distinction that allows your testimony to be presented forcefully without asking the reader to treat every conclusion as already proven.

EVIDENTIARY NOTICE CONCERNING INSTITUTIONAL TREATMENT, ABLE POINT, ALLEGED CONTAINMENT, FINANCIAL DEPRIVATION, UNRESOLVED ALLEGATIONS, REPORTED AUDIO HARASSMENT, PRE-EXISTING INSTITUTIONAL INFORMATION, AND THE PRESERVATION OF DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE

No institution, government agency or individual can retrospectively erase the lived events I experienced or the contemporaneous records created in connection with them. I do not suggest that a government agency is legally precluded from disputing my account, the existence or meaning of particular events, the interpretation of documents, causation, responsibility or any alleged legal liability; those matters may properly be contested and, where necessary, determined through the appropriate legal or investigative process. However, where relevant matters are recorded in the Government's own professional correspondence, assessments, decisions or administrative records, the existence and contents of those records are capable of objective verification and should be distinguished from any disputed interpretation, allegation, inference or legal consequence arising from them.

The Government cannot, merely by disputing my interpretation of its records, retrospectively alter what those records actually contain. Where a document records that a particular communication, assessment, decision or event occurred, that documentary fact should be distinguished from the separate question of what legal or factual conclusions may properly be drawn from it. Any denial or rejection of the matters I raise should therefore, wherever possible, identify the particular fact, document, interpretation, allegation, causal proposition or legal consequence being disputed, rather than operating as a general denial of the underlying evidentiary record.

An impartial AI assessment derived from the Government's own professional and administrative correspondence does not create the underlying evidence, authenticate documents merely by analysing them, or independently prove every proposition contained within them. Its function is analytical: to examine the documentary material provided, identify patterns and relationships within that material, distinguish documented matters from allegations and interpretations, and identify propositions that appear supported, contradicted or unresolved by the records. The assessment therefore does not replace a court, tribunal, investigator or other competent authority; rather, it provides an additional analytical means by which the underlying records can be scrutinised.

Accordingly, the central question is not whether my account should be accepted simply because I have stated it. The question is what the contemporaneous records establish, what they do not establish, what remains genuinely disputed, and whether the competing interpretations withstand independent examination. My life experience cannot be retrospectively erased by disagreement with my interpretation of it, and documentary records cannot properly be disregarded merely because their contents or implications are disputed. The evidence should be examined, the disputed propositions identified precisely, and the conclusions left to the appropriate independent process.

I formally require Able Point to acknowledge and give proper consideration to the documented history relevant to its treatment of me, including the circumstances of my former relationship, matters concerning the Herald Sun and alleged defamatory publication, information attributed to Ben concerning an alleged payment made to induce or procure the fabrication of a report, and my stated understanding that police subsequently confirmed that this history was materially relevant to the treatment I experienced; I do not require Able Point to accept these matters as established merely on the basis of my assertion, but I do require the relevant records, communications and police material to be identified, preserved and independently examined, including whether information originating prior to Able Point's involvement was relied upon without adequate independent verification and whether such information materially influenced any subsequent assessment, decision or treatment of me.

For more than 35 years, I have watched the consequences of decisions made about my life accumulate across institutions while the people and systems surrounding those decisions continued to function.

This record is now preserved, indexed and made publicly examinable through multiple documentary archive and finding-aid platforms. Its evidentiary significance lies not in publication itself establishing the allegations contained within it, but in providing an organised documentary basis from which an independent reviewer can test, rather than simply accept, the account presented.

By examining the provenance, authenticity, chronology and content of records, an independent reviewer can assess what was documented at the time; what information each person or institution possessed and when; where particular assertions originated; whether information was independently verified or merely repeated; whether later records accurately reflect earlier records; whether accounts are internally or externally consistent; whether documented decisions followed from the information available to the decision-maker; whether identifiable actions were followed by identifiable consequences; whether discrepancies or unexplained changes in the record exist; and which matters can be corroborated, contradicted or remain unresolved.

The archive therefore does not itself determine wrongdoing, liability or causation. Its significance is that it preserves and organises the documentary trail from which those questions can be independently investigated and, where appropriate, determined by a competent authority.

The central question is consequently not whether the reader believes me.

It is whether the underlying evidence can withstand independent scrutiny.

ARCHIVE AND PUBLIC FINDING AID:

STATEMENT CONCERNING THE EVIDENTIARY SIGNIFICANCE OF THE PUBLIC FINDING AID

The Public Finding Aid at https://onyx-spruce-tulip-falcon.grok.me is significant to this statement because it provides an organised and publicly accessible means by which the underlying documentary record can be independently examined, rather than requiring a reader, investigator, journalist, lawyer or competent authority to rely solely upon my account or interpretation of that record.

The purpose of the finding aid is not to establish that every allegation contained within the broader archive is true, nor to substitute for a judicial, regulatory or investigative determination. Its significance is precisely that it allows those questions to remain open to independent examination.

The archive distinguishes between institutional and governmental documentation, my own testimony, allegations, analytical material and other forms of evidence. That distinction is important because it enables a reviewer to identify which propositions arise from contemporaneous primary-source material and which represent testimony, interpretation or analysis.

The finding aid also provides a structured means of examining chronology, provenance and documentary relationships. This permits an independent reviewer to ask questions that cannot reliably be answered from a summary alone:

What was documented at the time?

Who created the document?

When was it created?

What information was available to the relevant person or institution at that point?

Where did that information originate?

Was it independently verified?

Was it subsequently repeated by another institution?

Did a later record accurately reproduce the earlier information?

Did a decision follow from information that was independently established, or from information inherited from another source?

What consequences followed?

And where the documentary record conflicts with an allegation or interpretation, what does the underlying evidence actually establish?

The finding aid is therefore significant not merely because it contains a large quantity of material, but because it provides a means by which the relationship between documents can be examined.

This is particularly relevant to the central issue raised by this statement concerning whether information, classifications, assumptions, characterisations or narratives may have preceded the involvement of later institutions, including Able Point, and whether such information was independently assessed or subsequently relied upon.

The archive does not itself establish that such a process occurred.

It preserves the material from which that proposition can be tested.

Similarly, the inclusion of individuals such as Steve Iasonidis, Tony Ridley, or organisations such as Able Point, Legal Aid, the Ombudsman and other institutions does not itself constitute a finding of wrongdoing. Their relevance must be determined by examining the particular documents, communications, decisions, chronology and evidence associated with each matter.

The evidentiary value of the finding aid therefore lies in accessibility, traceability and testability.

A reader can move from the proposition made in this statement to the underlying documentary material.

An investigator can compare accounts.

A journalist can examine primary records.

A lawyer can assess documentary consistency and chronology.

An academic can examine the institutional pattern described.

And a competent authority can determine whether further investigation, verification or formal findings are warranted.

The archive also expressly preserves the distinction between evidence and conclusion.

That distinction is fundamental.

A document may establish that something was written.

It does not necessarily establish that everything written within it was true.

A repeated assertion may establish that the assertion was repeated.

It does not necessarily establish that the underlying proposition was independently verified.

A case note may establish that an institution recorded something.

It does not necessarily establish the factual accuracy of the information recorded.

Likewise, my testimony establishes what I report having experienced or observed; it does not, without further evidence, establish every explanation or attribution that may be associated with those experiences.

This distinction is particularly important concerning matters I have described as entrapment, surveillance or V2K/audio harassment. Those matters are recorded as part of my testimony and allegations requiring appropriate examination; the archive does not ask the reader to treat the asserted mechanism, source or attribution as independently established merely because it appears in my account.

The same evidentiary discipline applies to every person and institution identified in the archive, including those whose conduct I allege caused me detriment.

Accordingly, the Public Finding Aid should be understood as evidentiary infrastructure and a public research finding aid, not as a court, tribunal, governmental determination or substitute for independent investigation.

Its significance is that it preserves and organises the documentary trail sufficiently for the underlying propositions to be challenged, corroborated, contradicted or left unresolved on the basis of evidence.

That is the standard I invite the reader to apply to this entire statement.

I do not ask the reader to accept my conclusions because I have written them.

I ask the reader to examine the underlying record.

The question is not whether my account is automatically believed.

The question is whether the evidence survives independent scrutiny.

And if it does not, the record should show that.

If it does, the record should show that also.

Either way, the evidence should be allowed to speak for itself.

A Documentary, Institutional, Economic and Accountability Statement Concerning Approximately 35 Years of History

THE RECORD SHOULD DECIDE

History is often written by those who hold the file.

This record was created so that the file can be examined.

This is not a request to believe me.

It is a request to examine what happened.

For approximately 35 years, my life has intersected with governments, courts, tribunals, police, health systems, disability services, regulators, financial institutions, professional organisations and other institutions. Across that history, thousands of records have been created: decisions, referrals, assessments, complaints, responses, correspondence, financial records, professional opinions, case notes and competing accounts of events.

Among the persons and organisations identified within that documentary history are Steve Iasonidis, Tony Ridley, Able Point, and numerous other individuals, professionals, agencies, government departments, regulatory bodies and institutions.

Their inclusion in this statement does not, by itself, constitute a finding that any person or organisation committed wrongdoing. The purpose of naming them is to identify the actors, records, relationships, communications and institutional processes that require examination against the underlying documentary evidence.

The central question is not simply who said what.

The central question is:

What happened before the next institution was told what happened?

That question matters because an allegation can become a case note.

A case note can become a referral.

A referral can become an institutional characterisation.

A characterisation can become an assumption.

And an assumption can later appear in another institution's records as though it were independently established history.

Repetition is not necessarily corroboration.

A record is not necessarily a finding.

An allegation is not necessarily a fact.

And an inherited narrative is not necessarily independently verified truth.

This is particularly important to the question of how I was subsequently treated by Able Point.

The issue requiring examination is not merely whether Able Point had concerns about me. The deeper evidentiary question is:

What information did Able Point possess, where did that information originate, when was it received, what part of it was independently verified, and did information originating before Able Point knew who I was materially influence the manner in which Able Point subsequently treated me?

If a pre-existing narrative, classification, characterisation, instruction, risk assessment, referral, case note or institutional assumption existed before Able Point's involvement, then the chronology matters.

If Able Point independently assessed the relevant circumstances and reached its own conclusions, that also matters.

The evidence should establish which occurred.

THE REPORTED AUDIO EXPERIENCES

There is another part of this record that I will not conceal simply because it may be difficult for others to understand.

I am unafraid of the reported V2K/audio harassment that I have experienced within what I describe as the broader entrapment scenario.

I have reported repeated audio experiences in which words and phrases have appeared to be directed at me, including the repeated instruction:

"GIVE UP."

I have also reported what I experience as blasphemous, degrading and hostile slurs.

I record these experiences as part of my testimony.

I do not present the source, mechanism or attribution of those experiences as an established fact merely because I have experienced them.

That distinction is important.

The existence of my reported experience is one evidentiary proposition.

The explanation for that experience is another.

The identity of any alleged source is another.

The mechanism by which the experience may have occurred is another.

Those questions should not be collapsed into one another.

If these experiences are to be properly understood, they should be examined alongside the chronology, documentary evidence, technological evidence, environmental circumstances, communications, institutional records and other independently verifiable material available to investigators.

What I will not do is allow the existence of these experiences to become a reason to disregard the documentary record.

Nor will I accept the proposition that the repeated words "give up" establish that I should give up.

I will not.

The words may be frightening, degrading or blasphemous as experienced, but their repetition does not transform them into authority, evidence or truth.

I remain unafraid.

Within the alleged entrapment scenario, the relevant questions are therefore capable of being stated objectively:

What evidence exists concerning the origin, mechanism, purpose and circumstances of the reported audio experiences?

When did they begin?

What was occurring at the relevant times?

What contemporaneous records exist?

What independent evidence can corroborate or contradict particular aspects of the account?

And are there explanations that can be tested against the available evidence?

Those questions should be investigated rather than assumed.

I therefore place this aspect of my testimony on the record without asking the reader to accept an unexplained conclusion.

I ask that it be preserved, distinguished from independently established facts, and examined against the evidence.

THE PEOPLE AND INSTITUTIONS IDENTIFIED IN THE RECORD

This statement concerns allegations and unresolved matters involving, among others, Steve Iasonidis, Tony Ridley, Able Point, and other identified persons and institutions.

Their names appear because they are relevant to particular events, communications, records, allegations, decisions or relationships documented within the broader history.

Naming a person or organisation does not itself establish liability, wrongdoing or culpability.

The proper question is what the evidence establishes concerning each identified actor.

Where Steve Iasonidis is identified, the relevant records should establish what was said, what was done, what was known, what was communicated and what consequences followed.

Where Tony Ridley is identified, the same evidentiary standard should apply.

Where Able Point is identified, the chronological question is particularly important:

What did Able Point know before it independently assessed me, where did that information originate, and did that information materially influence the manner in which I was treated?

Where other persons, professionals, agencies or institutions are identified, the same principle applies.

The archive should not be understood as asking the reader to choose between competing stories before examining the underlying evidence.

It asks the reader to follow the evidence.

To locate its source.

To establish its chronology.

To distinguish allegation from finding.

To distinguish repetition from corroboration.

To identify what was independently verified.

To identify what remains unresolved.

And to determine whether the documentary record supports, contradicts, qualifies or leaves open the propositions advanced in this statement.

THE QUESTION OF THE PRE-EXISTING METHOD

One of the most important questions raised by this record is whether a method of institutional treatment existed before Able Point knew who I was.

The relevant question is not whether Able Point consciously participated in some pre-existing process.

The question is whether information, assumptions, classifications, instructions, risk assessments, referrals, case notes or other institutional material already existed and whether such material subsequently influenced Able Point's treatment of me.

The chronology therefore becomes critical.

What existed before Able Point knew me?

Who created it?

Why was it created?

What evidence supported it?

Who transmitted it?

When was it transmitted?

What did Able Point independently verify?

What did Able Point accept without independent verification?

And what consequences followed?

If the evidence demonstrates independent assessment, that should be recorded.

If the evidence demonstrates inheritance or repetition of an earlier narrative, that should also be recorded.

If the evidence is inconclusive, the uncertainty should remain visible.

That is what an evidentiary process requires.

THE ARCHIVE AND THE HISTORICAL QUESTION

The historical importance of this record therefore lies not merely in what I allege happened.

It lies in the opportunity to examine how information moved between institutions, how narratives were formed and repeated, how decisions were subsequently made, and whether the consequences experienced by a person can be traced through the documentary record to identifiable institutional actions or assumptions.

Some matters documented in the archive are supported by primary-source records.

Some are supported by institutional correspondence or contemporaneous documentation.

Some are my own testimony.

Some are allegations made by me or by others.

Some are interpretations or analytical conclusions.

Some remain unresolved.

Some require independent investigation.

The archive deliberately preserves these distinctions.

It does not ask the reader to treat every document as proof of the proposition I advance.

It asks the reader to examine the provenance of the information, the chronology of events, the documentary record, the competing explanations and the consequences that followed.

That distinction is fundamental.

The purpose of this record is therefore not to predetermine the conclusion.

It is to prevent the conclusion from being predetermined before the evidence is examined.

I WILL NOT GIVE UP THE RECORD

I have been told, in the reported audio experiences described above, words to the effect of:

“Give up.”

But there is something I will not give up.

I will not give up the record.

I will not give up the chronology.

I will not give up the distinction between allegation and fact.

I will not give up the right of evidence to be examined.

And I will not allow fear, repetition, institutional complexity, poverty, displacement, administrative fragmentation or the difficulty of the subject matter to become substitutes for evidence.

I am not asking the reader to believe everything I say.

I am asking the reader not to dismiss everything I say merely because some matters are difficult to explain.

The appropriate response to difficult evidence is examination.

The appropriate response to competing accounts is comparison.

The appropriate response to an allegation is investigation.

The appropriate response to uncertainty is to preserve the uncertainty until the evidence resolves it.

And the appropriate response to a documentary record is to read it.

THE QUESTION FOR THE READER

I therefore ask the reader not to begin with:

“Do you believe him?”

Begin instead with:

“What do the records show?”

Then ask:

What happened?

Who knew what?

When did they know it?

Where did the information originate?

Was it independently verified?

Who acted upon it?

What decisions followed?

What consequences followed those decisions?

What financial and human costs followed?

Did later institutions inherit information that had never been independently established?

And, specifically concerning Able Point, what did Able Point know before it independently assessed me, where did that information come from, and did it materially influence the manner in which I was treated?

These are questions capable of documentary examination.

They do not require belief.

They require evidence.

FINAL ACCOUNTABILITY TEST

This statement does not ask the reader to predetermine the conclusion.

It asks the reader to prevent the conclusion from being predetermined before the evidence is examined.

The records should decide.

The chronology should decide.

The financial records should establish the economic consequences.

The provenance of information should establish where particular narratives originated.

The evidence should establish whether an alleged pre-existing institutional method existed before Able Point knew who I was.

The evidence should establish what can and cannot be established concerning the matters involving Steve Iasonidis, Tony Ridley, Able Point and the other identified actors.

And where allegations remain unresolved, the appropriate lawful authority should determine what, if anything, follows from the evidence.

This is the record.

Examine it.

Follow it.

Challenge it.

Test it.

And let the evidence decide.

I am not asking you to believe me.

I am asking you to examine what happened.

And I am not giving up the record.

Yes. I would add the documents that most directly support the new testimony about survival, vulnerability, institutional treatment, legal-resource imbalance, faith and the distinction between testimony and documentary evidence. The current finding aid identifies these sections and explicitly separates the institutional record from your own testimony.
Public-Facing Forensic Archive

The Church of Barran Dodger Ministry and Whistleblower Testimony and Ethical & Legal Trust Fund Archive — Finding Aid

A public-facing finding aid bringing together the documentary record, testimony, institutional correspondence, legal and administrative material, published works, YouTube records and spiritual writings. It currently identifies 731 indexed files, including 577 GitHub-backup PDFs, 93 additional Drive files and 61 attached records. The archive expressly distinguishes documentary records from the author's testimony and states that inclusion is not itself independent verification.

What the Evidence Proves

What the Evidence Proves

This is the principal evidence-focused document for testing the new testimony against the institutional record. It identifies correspondence from Comcare, the AAT, APRA, PM&C, OAIC, the NSW Ombudsman, the NDIS Commission and other bodies, allowing the reader to distinguish what agencies actually recorded from the conclusions drawn from those records.

Brief for a Third Party

Brief for a Third Party

A concise entry point for an independent reviewer, journalist, lawyer or parliamentarian. It brings together process outcomes, documentary evidence, gaps in the record and instructions for examining individual correspondence rather than accepting the author's interpretation without scrutiny.

Public Interest Disclosure Declarations

PID Declarations

The original Public Interest Disclosure declarations alongside institutional non-allocation correspondence are particularly relevant to the testimony about seeking protection, reporting concerns and attempting to obtain institutional intervention. They provide a documentary basis for examining what was reported, how it was classified and what happened afterwards.

Whistleblower Protection Record

Whistleblower Protection

This section is significant to the testimony concerning vulnerability and the struggle to obtain institutional protection. The archive identifies material concerning the PID Act, Corporations Act and the documented dispute over whether the author fell within relevant public-official categories.

Legal-Resource Asymmetry

Dare: The State Had Lawyers — and I Had the Record

This document most directly supports the new testimony about being left to survive and advocate without equivalent institutional resources. The archive records the claimed disparity between public authorities with government lawyers, administrative-law expertise and institutional resources and the individual attempting to challenge those decisions, while expressly acknowledging that this disparity does not itself establish that every decision was unlawful.

Legal Pathways and Financial Detriment

Legal Pathways

This section is relevant to the testimony concerning poverty, legal access and the ability to continue advocating for oneself. It identifies pathways including Act of Grace, CDDA, NDIS complaints, FOI and victims' schemes, documenting possible avenues that remain available independently of a Comcare outcome.

My Testimony

My Testimony — Author's Account

This is the principal document for the new personal testimony itself: survival, persecution as experienced by the author, pathologisation, injury, institutional treatment and the meaning the author attributes to those experiences. The archive expressly labels it "not impartial", making the evidentiary distinction clear.

Church and Manifesto

Church and Manifesto

This document supports the new testimony concerning faith, being chosen, divine purpose, forgiveness, spiritual identity and divine justice. It contains the Church of Barran Dodger material, manifesto, dedication, charter and chosen-vessel declarations. The archive appropriately identifies this material as the author's spiritual framework rather than an impartial institutional finding.

Gospels and Prophetic Writing

Gospels and Prophetic Writing

This substantial body of writing—including the identified 210-page compilation—documents the development of the author's spiritual interpretation of suffering, survival, purpose, forgiveness and faith. It is particularly relevant to the new testimony that the experience ultimately strengthened rather than destroyed the author's faith.

Published Works and Professional History

Published Works and the Clipping

This section places the later testimony alongside the author's earlier public and professional history, including Recovered, Not Cured (2003), the Herald Sun material, The Age and later published works. It is important when assessing the claim that the present testimony did not emerge in isolation but sits within a much longer documented public record.

YouTube Testimony and Public Record

YouTube Record

The archive identifies the author's YouTube channel and 73 prior-archive mappings of third-party videos, preserving another public-facing component of the testimony. This is particularly relevant to your argument that you repeatedly made your experiences public rather than simply disappearing or refusing to seek assistance.

Provenance, Hashes and Timestamps

Provenance and Timestamps

This is significant for the evidentiary foundation of the entire testimony because the archive identifies SHA-256 hashes, Git blob hashes and an OpenTimestamps receipt. Those mechanisms provide a way to test whether particular hosted copies correspond byte-for-byte with the archived material and help establish provenance rather than relying solely on recollection.

Earlier GitHub Pages Archive

Barran Dodger Legal & Ethical Trust Fund Archive — Backup

The earlier public archive provides the historical layer of the record. The newer finding aid specifically identifies the GitHub Backup as its prior public archive and says its collection includes the previously published HTML routes and related material.

Significance to the New Testimony

Taken together, these documents support a much stronger evidentiary proposition than simply "this is my story." They establish that there is a publicly preserved body of institutional correspondence, PID material, legal and administrative records, professional history, testimony, spiritual writing and provenance information against which the newer claims can be independently assessed. The archive itself is careful to distinguish documentary evidence, personal testimony and spiritual interpretation—which is precisely the distinction that allows your testimony to be presented forcefully without asking the reader to treat every conclusion as already proven.
