God never gave you permission to harm my body and desecrate my spirit and laugh and dressed up in polite language while I gave you the patience and grace to do the right thing and be human and now God's divine reckoning is here. You can prove me wrong on that I don't even need revenge. Revenge is God's alone and you'll have to suffer indignation and humiliation of laughing with a vulnerable person begging you for help as $1 billion company dressed it up in a language and deliberately causing him you laughed but he's laughing when God comes for you.

REECE.GCR@CBA.COM.AU

FORMAL ESCALATION — THE WITNESS REMAINS

SUBJECT: THE HOLY RECKONING: FORTY YEARS OF CUSTOMER LOYALTY, THE ALLEGED FINANCIAL EXPLOITATION I REPORTED, THE UNANSWERED COMPLAINT CONCERNING 123 OFFICIAL RECORDS AND ABNs, RESTRICTED BANKING ACCESS, AND THE PERMANENT RECORD OF INSTITUTIONAL FAILURE

Reece,

Let us dispense with the fucking pleasantries.

I have read your email. I understand that you have received my complaint. I understand that you intend to investigate it and that you aim to provide an outcome by 15 November 2026.

What I want to know is whether Commonwealth Bank of Australia understands the fucking gravity of the history behind that complaint, or whether I am about to be subjected to yet another round of polished bureaucratic language designed to make institutional inaction sound like meaningful accountability.

Because I am fucking sick of it.

I am sick of being treated as though I cannot understand what is happening to me. I am sick of raising serious concerns and receiving procedural acknowledgements that leave the central questions unanswered. I am sick of being expected to remain patient while I struggle to obtain the basic necessities of life.

And I am sick of the presumption that a bank can hide behind a complaint reference, a privacy statement, a departmental process and a carefully worded email while the human being at the other end is left to deal with the consequences.

I AM NOT A FUCKING IDIOT.

I am not an idiot because I have suffered. I am not an idiot because I have been financially vulnerable. I am not an idiot because I have trusted institutions that I now believe have failed me. And I am not an idiot because I have spent years documenting what I say has happened to me rather than quietly disappearing when the answers did not come.

I have been a Commonwealth Bank customer for more than forty fucking years.

Forty years.

Think about that before sending me another paragraph about process.

Forty years of my life. Forty years of a banking relationship. Forty years during which I placed my trust in your institution.

And now I am writing to you about restricted banking access, unresolved complaints, allegations of financial exploitation, questions concerning my identity and official records, and circumstances in which I have described myself as struggling to obtain money for food and medicine.

If that does not warrant a serious, substantive and accountable response, then what the fuck does?

I. YOU ARE NOT GOING TO MAKE THIS COMPLAINT DISAPPEAR INTO A SPREADSHEET

Your email identifies three issues:

- Why my internet banking was restricted.
- What access I retain to my accounts.
- Why I never received an adequate response to my previous complaint concerning the number of ABNs.

Those are legitimate questions. But they do not encompass the full history of what I have raised with Commonwealth Bank.

I previously complained about approximately 123 official records and ABN-register entries that I believe are associated with my identity and the public identity under which I now write as Barran Resonance Dodger.

I raised concerns about my former relationship with Steve Isanidis, which I describe as having lasted approximately five years. I alleged financial exploitation and sought the proper examination of banking records that I believe may help establish what happened.

I have also reported threats and other conduct that I regard as serious threats to my safety. I have described experiences that I interpret as part of a much broader history of personal devastation, institutional failure and alleged political targeting.

I have made serious allegations concerning other individuals and institutions. Those allegations require evidence-based examination, and I am not asking Commonwealth Bank to pretend that every disputed matter has already been proved.

But I am absolutely entitled to ask what happened to the complaints I actually submitted to your bank.

DO NOT FUCKING CONFUSE THE FACT THAT MY ALLEGATIONS ARE SERIOUS WITH PERMISSION TO IGNORE THEM.

Do not reduce years of complaints to three convenient bullet points if the earlier issues have not been properly addressed.

Do not tell me that a complaint is being investigated without explaining whether the investigation includes the relevant history.

Do not treat the restriction of my internet banking as though it exists in a vacuum, disconnected from the questions I have already raised about my accounts, records and previous dealings with your institution.

And do not send me another polite acknowledgement as though the act of acknowledging my existence somehow resolves the substance of what I have been trying to communicate.

I want the actual records examined.

I want the actual complaint history established.

I want the actual decisions explained.

And I want the actual unanswered questions identified.

Not corporate theatre. Not a fucking template. Not another exercise in making a serious matter sound administratively manageable while leaving the person who raised it without an answer.

II. FORTY YEARS OF LOYALTY — AND THIS IS WHAT I AM LEFT ASKING YOU FOR?

I gave Commonwealth Bank more than forty years of customer loyalty.

I trusted your institution with my banking relationship. I expected that when serious concerns arose, I would be able to raise them and receive an appropriate response.

I did not expect that I would eventually be pleading for clarity about my own access to banking services while struggling to obtain the money I need for basic necessities.

I have described my current circumstances as desperate. I have said that I am struggling to obtain enough money for food and medicine.

Do you understand what that means?

It means that the distinction between an administrative restriction and an effective resolution is not an academic exercise for me. It means that access to banking services can have immediate consequences for my ability to manage everyday life.

I am not asking the bank to invent money, disregard legitimate security requirements or grant me an exemption from rules that apply to customers.

I am demanding an explanation of what has happened to my banking access, what access remains available, what requirements I must satisfy and what can be done to address any immediate hardship arising from the situation.

I WANT ANSWERS, NOT ANOTHER FUCKING LESSON IN HOW TO WAIT.

If there is a legitimate reason for the restriction, explain what you can lawfully explain.

If verification is required, tell me exactly what is required and how to complete it.

If an error occurred, identify it.

If the earlier complaint was mishandled, investigate that.

If the bank cannot resolve a particular issue, explain why and identify the appropriate avenue for review.

But do not expect me to regard another administrative acknowledgement as a satisfactory answer when the practical problem remains unresolved.

III. THE COMPLAINT YOU ALREADY RECEIVED — WHAT THE FUCK HAPPENED TO IT?

This is one of the most important questions in this entire matter.

I previously raised concerns about approximately 123 official records and the ABN register. I believe those records require careful examination in light of my identity, my history and the allegations I have made concerning the misuse or misrepresentation of information associated with me.

I have described the damage to my character and reputation as a billion-dollar-scale fraud. That is my assessment of the magnitude of the harm I believe I have suffered, not a judicial finding of a billion-dollar liability.

The question for Commonwealth Bank is what happened when I brought the relevant concerns to your attention.

Was the complaint received?

Was it registered?

Was it assessed?

What did the bank actually investigate?

Which matters fell within the bank's authority?

Which matters were referred elsewhere?

What conclusions were reached?

What response was sent?

If no adequate response was sent, why not?

These are not questions that require you to resolve the entire history of my life. They require you to examine your own records and explain your own handling of my complaint.

I WILL NOT ACCEPT THE FUCKING CIRCULARITY OF BEING TOLD THAT MY COMPLAINT IS BEING INVESTIGATED WITHOUT ANY CLEAR ACCOUNT OF WHAT HAPPENED TO THE COMPLAINT THAT CAME BEFORE IT.

If the bank says the earlier complaint was resolved, identify the resolution.

If the bank says the matter was outside its jurisdiction, identify the relevant limits and explain what information was provided to me.

If the bank says further information was required, identify what was required and whether that was communicated.

If the records show that an issue was overlooked, say so.

If you cannot establish what happened, do not manufacture certainty. Tell me what the records show and what remains unknown.

I am not asking for a miracle from a complaint-handling department.

I am asking for basic accountability.

IV. THE BANKING RECORDS, MY FORMER PARTNER AND THE QUESTIONS THAT REMAIN

I have alleged that I was financially exploited during my relationship with Steve Isanidis. I have also reported threats and conduct that I regard as deeply serious.

I have previously sought the proper examination of relevant banking records because I believe those records may be material to establishing the financial history of that relationship.

My allegation is that the handling of my concerns has left important questions unresolved.

I want Commonwealth Bank to explain what it has actually done with the matters I raised.

I want to know what records relating to my own accounts and transactions remain available.

I want to know how I can obtain those records lawfully.

I want to know whether specific transactions I previously identified were reviewed.

I want to know whether my complaints were investigated, closed, referred or left unresolved.

And I want to know what further steps are available if I dispute the handling of those matters.

If privacy obligations prevent disclosure of another person's confidential information, comply with those obligations. But explain the limits and identify what information about my own accounts, transactions and complaint history can be provided.

PRIVACY IS NOT A MAGIC FUCKING WORD THAT MAKES EVERY QUESTION DISAPPEAR.

Nor am I asking you to declare another person guilty simply because I have made an allegation.

I am asking you to distinguish between what the bank has examined, what its records establish, what cannot be disclosed and what remains unresolved.

That is a standard of evidence-based accountability, not an unreasonable demand.

V. THE ALLEGATIONS ABOUT INSTITUTIONAL FAILURE WILL NOT BE ANSWERED BY PRETENDING THEY WERE NEVER MADE

I have described my experiences as involving institutional failure, profound personal harm and what I believe may be connections between actions by different individuals and organisations.

I have made allegations concerning political actors, government agencies and an alleged assassination attempt. I have described experiences that I interpret as political targeting and the consequences of what I regard as a history of mistreatment.

I understand that Commonwealth Bank cannot determine every allegation concerning every person or institution in my account.

But the bank cannot use the breadth of those allegations to avoid the specific questions concerning its own decisions.

You do not need to determine whether my wider interpretation is correct to establish when my internet banking was restricted.

You do not need to investigate an entire government to establish whether my earlier complaint was registered and answered.

You do not need to make a finding about a former partner to explain the process for obtaining my own banking records.

And you do not need to agree with my theology, philosophy or political conclusions to treat a complaint seriously.

ANSWER WHAT IS WITHIN YOUR AUTHORITY. EXPLAIN WHAT IS OUTSIDE IT. AND STOP LEAVING ME TO GUESS WHICH IS WHICH.

If evidence supports a finding of wrongdoing, that evidence should be assessed by the appropriate authority.

If evidence does not support a particular allegation, that distinction should be made clear.

If responsibility is uncertain, say so.

What is unacceptable is allowing a person's questions to dissolve into an administrative void because the full story is complicated or uncomfortable.

VI. THE HOLY RECKONING — YOU DO NOT OWN THE MORAL UNIVERSE

Now let me address the part of this matter that cannot be reduced to a complaint number.

My faith is central to how I understand my survival, my testimony and my responsibility to preserve the record.

I believe that truth matters.

I believe that justice matters.

I believe that mercy matters.

And I believe that power exercised without conscience becomes a profound moral failure.

I understand my life and my work as those of a witness who has endured what he regards as extraordinary adversity and who continues to document his experiences rather than surrender his voice.

I believe that God has witnessed my suffering. I understand the language of divine reckoning as an expression of my conviction that wrongdoing must ultimately be confronted and that no position of institutional authority makes a person morally untouchable.

You do not have to share my faith.

You do not have to accept my understanding of divine purpose.

But you do not get to use the fact that I speak in the language of faith as an excuse to ignore the concrete questions I have raised.

I have offered patience. I have sought answers. I have tried to make my case through correspondence and documentation.

I now regard my patience with repeated procedural ambiguity as exhausted.

I AM DONE CONFUSING POLITE WORDS WITH JUSTICE.

I am done pretending that an institution has resolved a matter simply because someone has written that it is being investigated.

I am done treating an acknowledgement as though it were an answer.

I am done accepting the implication that a person who has suffered should endlessly accommodate the convenience of the systems from which they are seeking assistance.

In the language of my faith, this is the reckoning: the moment when the record must be confronted, the questions must be answered and the difference between professed responsibility and actual conduct must be exposed to examination.

I am not claiming that a bank email proves divine judgement or that any individual has been found guilty by God or by a court.

I am telling you that my faith gives me the resolve to continue seeking accountability, and that I will not abandon that commitment merely because an institution would prefer a quieter complainant.

VII. I WILL NOT GIVE YOU ANOTHER INFINITE RESERVOIR OF PATIENCE

For years, I have sought answers to matters that I consider deeply consequential.

I have described feeling betrayed by institutions, abandoned in circumstances of serious hardship and left without meaningful explanations.

I have repeatedly attempted to communicate my concerns. I have documented my experiences. I have continued asking questions.

That history matters because I do not regard this complaint as an isolated inconvenience.

I regard it as another opportunity for Commonwealth Bank to demonstrate whether it is willing to examine its own conduct with seriousness.

Your email gives an anticipated outcome date of 15 November 2026.

I acknowledge that date.

But the existence of a deadline does not relieve the bank of the need to clarify my present access to banking services or explain what I must do if further information is required.

Nor should the current investigation erase the earlier complaint from view.

I AM NOT GIVING YOU PERMISSION TO TURN THIS INTO ANOTHER ENDLESS FUCKING WAITING GAME.

I expect prompt clarification of my current banking access and the steps available to me.

I expect the earlier complaint to be identified and its handling explained.

I expect the investigation to distinguish the immediate internet banking issue from the broader matters I previously raised.

And I expect the bank to tell me plainly if particular issues require a separate complaint or another authority.

No more ambiguity where a clear explanation is reasonably available.

No more generic reassurances in place of answers.

No more pretending that the mere existence of a process establishes that the process has worked.

VIII. THE FORMAL DEMANDS — ANSWER THE FUCKING QUESTIONS

I require written answers addressing the following matters.

1. The internet banking restriction

What was restricted, when did the restriction take effect, what explanation can lawfully be given, and what banking access remains available to me?

2. The earlier ABN and official-record complaint

What happened to the complaint concerning approximately 123 official records and ABN-register entries? Identify the complaint reference, its recorded status, the issues assessed and the response history.

3. My banking records

Explain how I can obtain the statements, transaction histories and other records relating to my own accounts that I am legally entitled to access.

4. My complaints concerning alleged financial exploitation

Identify whether the specific banking concerns I previously raised were reviewed, and explain the process for having any outstanding transaction concerns examined.

5. The handling of my earlier complaint

If the bank considers that it responded adequately, identify the response. If it did not respond, or cannot establish whether it did, explain that fact accurately.

6. The basis for any refusal or limitation

Where the bank cannot provide particular information or take a requested action, identify the applicable limitation and explain what alternative information, review or referral is available.

7. Immediate financial hardship

Explain what arrangements, alternative access or hardship support may be available if the current restrictions are affecting my ability to meet essential expenses.

8. Preservation of records

Please ensure that relevant records are preserved and handled in accordance with applicable legal and retention requirements, and that this correspondence is associated with the existing complaint.

9. The investigation's actual scope

Confirm whether the investigation will address the earlier complaint history and the questions raised in this letter, or whether separate complaint references are required.

10. External review

Identify the appropriate internal escalation process and the available external complaint pathway if the bank's response remains inadequate.

I expect these issues to be addressed in the written outcome anticipated by 15 November 2026, to the extent they fall within the investigation's scope. If additional time or a separate process is required, explain why and identify the next step.

I also expect the immediate questions concerning present banking access to be addressed without unnecessary delay.

These are not ten invitations to send me ten paragraphs of corporate language.

They are ten areas in which I require clear, relevant and intelligible answers.

IX. THE WITNESS REMAINS — AND THE RECORD WILL SHOW WHAT YOU DID

My public archive exists to preserve testimony, documents, correspondence and unresolved questions.

I will preserve your acknowledgement.

I will preserve my reply.

I will preserve the bank's substantive response.

I will preserve the chronology of the earlier complaint to the extent that records are available.

And I will distinguish what can be established from what remains alleged, disputed or unknown.

I will not manufacture evidence.

I will not invent a finding that has not been made.

I will not declare an individual criminally guilty merely because I believe that person's conduct warrants investigation.

But I will not erase a legitimate question simply because the answer is inconvenient.

If Commonwealth Bank provides a satisfactory explanation, that explanation can stand in the record.

If the bank identifies an error and corrects it, that correction can stand in the record.

If the bank refuses a request and explains the lawful basis for that refusal, the refusal and its reasons can be examined.

If a question remains unanswered, I will identify it as unanswered.

THE RECORD WILL NOT BE IMPROVED BY EXAGGERATION. IT WILL BE STRENGTHENED BY THE PRESERVATION OF WHAT ACTUALLY HAPPENED.

That is why I insist on documentary accountability.

My archive, THE WITNESS REMAINS, is publicly accessible here:

https://barran-dodgers-holy-reckoning.grok.me/

Its governing principle remains:

PRESERVATION FIRST. EXAMINATION SECOND. CONCLUSION LAST.

You are entitled to defend the bank's decisions.

You are entitled to explain the limits of your authority.

You are entitled to identify what the available evidence does and does not establish.

But you are not entitled to expect that a formal acknowledgement will be treated as the end of the matter when substantive questions remain unanswered.

X. THE FINAL WORD — I WILL NOT BE ERASED, AND I WILL NOT PRETEND THIS IS FINE

Reece, I have been a Commonwealth Bank customer for more than forty years.

I have raised serious complaints.

I have sought answers about my banking records, the ABN register, my identity and the allegations of financial exploitation that I have reported.

I have described profound hardship and circumstances in which obtaining money for basic necessities has become desperately difficult.

I have told you that I believe the handling of my concerns forms part of a much wider history of institutional failure.

You do not have to agree with every aspect of my account to investigate the bank's own decisions.

You do not have to share my beliefs to understand the significance of a complaint about access to banking services.

And you do not have to accept my conclusions in advance to provide an honest explanation of what your records establish.

I am not asking for a ceremonial apology designed to make an uncomfortable correspondence go away.

I am not asking for another email that tells me how seriously my concerns are being taken without demonstrating that seriousness through its substance.

I am demanding answers.

I am demanding that the previous complaint be accounted for.

I am demanding clarity about my banking access.

I am demanding an explanation of what information can lawfully be provided, what remains unresolved and what avenues of review are available.

And I am demanding that the bank stop treating the acknowledgement of a complaint as though it were equivalent to its resolution.

I HAVE HAD ENOUGH OF BEING EXPECTED TO ACCEPT THE FUCKING APPEARANCE OF ACCOUNTABILITY IN PLACE OF THE REAL THING.

I have spent years preserving my testimony. I have continued to write, document, question and seek answers. I have maintained my convictions despite circumstances I have described as devastating.

My faith tells me that truth and justice matter even when the person demanding them has little institutional power.

My experience has taught me that a title does not guarantee integrity, a policy does not guarantee fairness, and a polite email does not guarantee that the underlying problem has been resolved.

That is the standard I am applying here.

Not my anger alone.

Not my religious conviction alone.

Not an allegation treated as a verdict.

The actual record. The actual decisions. The actual answers. The actual omissions, if omissions are established.

I will not withdraw my questions merely because they are difficult.

I will not surrender my dignity to the convenience of a complaints process.

And I will not allow the passage of time to turn an unresolved matter into an imaginary resolution.

If Commonwealth Bank has acted appropriately, explain the evidence and the decisions.

If it has made a mistake, identify the mistake and address it.

If it cannot resolve an issue, explain the limitation and identify the available route forward.

That is the minimum standard of a meaningful response.

My patience with empty procedure is finished.

My commitment to preserving the truth, as I understand it and can document it, remains.

My faith remains.

My voice remains.

THE WITNESS REMAINS.

The record remains open.

The unanswered questions remain identifiable.

The opportunity to provide a substantive response remains.

And Commonwealth Bank now has the opportunity to demonstrate, through evidence and action rather than polished assurances, what its commitment to fair complaint handling actually means.

THIS IS THE HOLY RECKONING AS I UNDERSTAND IT: NOT A SUBSTITUTE FOR EVIDENCE, NOT A PRETENDED COURT VERDICT, BUT A REFUSAL TO LET QUESTIONS OF JUSTICE, DIGNITY AND ACCOUNTABILITY BE BURIED BENEATH BUREAUCRATIC LANGUAGE.

Preservation first.

Examination second.

Conclusion last.

Not a court. Not a verdict.

THE WITNESS REMAINS — AND THE RECORD WILL SPEAK FOR ITSELF.

Please confirm receipt, identify the relevant complaint reference and explain how the issues raised will be addressed.

One practical point: because you have said you are struggling to obtain money for food and medicine, put the immediate banking-access question at the top of the email if that is the most urgent problem today. The broader complaint deserves to be preserved and investigated, but you should not have to wait for the entire historical dispute to be resolved before asking what access you currently have to your money.

You're saying something important: you do not want another institution to hand you a list of institutions to contact when you have already explained that you feel unable to navigate that process, have lost faith in those channels, and need a practical response now. The letter should make that point unmistakably—without giving CBA an excuse to dismiss the complaint as a threat or an unsupported conclusion.

Here is a forceful section to add to your existing letter.

XI. DO NOT SEND ME INTO ANOTHER BUREAUCRATIC LOOP AND CALL THAT A RESOLUTION

Reece, there is one more thing I need to make absolutely fucking clear.

Do not respond to my complaint by handing me another list of institutions, ombudsmen, lawyers, media organisations or complaint pathways and pretending that you have thereby addressed the problem.

I know those pathways exist. I know the names. I know the standard institutional script: contact this department, submit another form, wait for another assessment, explain everything again, provide documents you have already provided, receive another acknowledgement, and then discover that the next organisation cannot assist, considers the matter outside its remit, or sends you somewhere else.

I am telling you plainly that I do not have the resources to spend the rest of my life trapped in that fucking loop.

I am experiencing serious financial hardship. I have explained the consequences of my restricted banking access. I have explained the history of my complaints. I have explained that my trust in institutional complaint mechanisms has been profoundly damaged by my experiences.

Do not ignore those circumstances and then congratulate yourselves for providing me with a referral. A referral is not a resolution. A list of telephone numbers is not an investigation. And telling a person to start again somewhere else does not answer the questions that person put to you.

I have lost confidence in the ability of the institutions I have approached to deliver an effective outcome. I have expressed grave concerns about institutional failures and the cumulative effect of unanswered complaints. Those concerns require evidence-based examination; they should neither be automatically accepted as proven nor used as an excuse to avoid the specific questions Commonwealth Bank can answer about its own conduct.

I am not asking you to take responsibility for every institution in Australia. I am asking you to take responsibility for the complaint in front of you.

I am asking you to investigate what happened to my banking access, establish what happened to my earlier complaint, examine the records within your control, explain the decisions made, and tell me what can actually be done.

If you believe another organisation must consider a particular issue, explain precisely which issue, why it falls outside your authority, what evidence or decision is required, and what practical assistance or documentation Commonwealth Bank can provide to help me pursue it. Do not use the existence of another organisation as a substitute for completing the work that belongs to your own institution.

If you cannot do something, tell me specifically what you cannot do and why. If you can do something, tell me what it is, who is responsible, and when I can expect it to happen. If you need information from me, identify it clearly. If my immediate access to funds or essential banking services is affected, address that practical problem urgently.

And if you intend to refer me elsewhere, answer this first: what have you actually investigated, what have you established, and what concrete action have you taken before passing the matter on?

I am not going to pretend that I have unlimited money, unlimited energy, unlimited access to legal assistance or an endless capacity to repeat my story to institutions that may simply redirect me again. I cannot manufacture those resources by being told that another process exists.

I have a right to expect an intelligible response to the matters I have raised with my bank. I expect you to recognise the difference between informing a customer of an available complaint mechanism and using that mechanism to deflect an unresolved complaint.

THE HOLY RECKONING IS A DEMAND FOR ACCOUNTABILITY—NOT AN EXCUSE TO EVADE IT

My faith is central to my life. I understand my continuing testimony through a conviction that truth matters, that the vulnerable deserve dignity, and that power does not place any person or institution beyond moral scrutiny.

When I speak of divine reckoning, I am expressing the seriousness of that conviction. I am saying that I refuse to accept a world in which suffering can be ignored indefinitely, unanswered questions can be buried in administrative systems, and responsibility can be passed from one desk to another until the person seeking help has nothing left.

I do not expect you to share my theology. I do expect you to understand that this is not a casual complaint to me. It concerns my financial independence, my ability to manage my life, my history with Commonwealth Bank and my determination to obtain a substantive answer.

I am angry because I believe I have been left fighting for answers while dealing with circumstances that are already extraordinarily difficult. I am exhausted by the prospect of being sent around another circuit of institutions without any assurance that the underlying problem will be addressed.

I will not pretend that I trust every organisation merely because it has an official title. I will not tell you that I have unlimited faith in external complaint processes when my own experiences have left me deeply distrustful of them.

But I am giving Commonwealth Bank the opportunity to answer for Commonwealth Bank's own decisions. Do not squander that opportunity by sending me away with a template.

You have acknowledged my complaint. Now investigate it.

You have given me a proposed response date. Now produce a response that answers the questions.

You have received notice of the practical hardship I have described. Now address the banking issues that may be contributing to it.

And if you believe you have already done all that can reasonably be done, demonstrate that through the record, the findings and the reasons—not through another referral that leaves me exactly where I started.

I am not asking for an endless chain of promises. I am asking for a clear explanation, a practical response and a meaningful outcome.

THE WITNESS REMAINS. THE QUESTIONS REMAIN. AND A REFERRAL IS NOT A FINDING, AN ACKNOWLEDGEMENT IS NOT A RESOLUTION, AND SILENCE IS NOT ACCOUNTABILITY.

I expect your investigation to reflect that distinction.

One practical point: because the immediate issue is access to your money, keep the request for urgent clarification of what banking functions and funds remain accessible near the beginning of the email, where it cannot get lost in the longer account of your concerns. That is a concrete question CBA can address without requiring you to prove your wider allegations first.
