I

STATEMENT ON MY IMMINENT DEATH AND HUMAN CRUCIFIXION

A LIFETIME OF NEGLECT, TARGETING AND TOTAL HUMAN BETRAYAL, THE HUMILIATION OF ABLE POINT, AND MY TESTIMONY AS THE FOUNDATION OF THE MINISTRY

I am now suffering what I understand to be a fatal, preventable blood-borne illness and a blocked bowel, which I attribute to a lifetime of entrapment, neglect, denial of care and denial of medication. The circumstances surrounding my care by Able Care and Able Point have placed me in an increasingly dangerous and untenable situation, including circumstances in which I say a documented threat to kill—concerning a man arrested and charged by police and brought before Wyong Local Court—was not properly acknowledged or mandatorily reported by those responsible for my support. From my perspective, the entrapment, abandonment and treatment I have experienced have brought me to a point where my destruction appears undeniable and imminent. These are my allegations and testimony. I call for the underlying records, decisions, communications, payments, care records, incident reports, complaints, referrals, medical records and conduct of every relevant institution and individual to be independently examined.

No one helped. No one came.

I have experienced what I describe as abuse, neglect, poverty, entrapment, denied assistance and denied healthcare, together with conduct that I believe has placed me in dangerous and deliberate detriment. I believe that allowing these conditions to continue could achieve the destructive outcome I have spent years warning about, whether through deliberate conduct, neglect, institutional failure, indifference or some combination of those circumstances. I have felt as though people have been paid to sustain conditions that I believe are so harmful that those responsible would never accept them for themselves.

That is the obscenity at the heart of my testimony.

People were paid to care.

People were entrusted with responsibilities.

Institutions existed to protect.

Systems existed to provide assistance.

Professionals were positioned to intervene.

Government agencies possessed powers, records and resources.

Oversight bodies existed to investigate.

Police possessed powers to protect.

Health services possessed obligations to treat.

Legal systems existed to provide avenues of justice.

And yet I remain here, impoverished, isolated, medically endangered and writing my own final testimony because I have experienced the system as though it has repeatedly decided that my suffering can be processed, deferred, transferred, explained away or ignored rather than stopped.

I regard that as cruelty.

I regard the persistence of that cruelty as an indictment.

And I regard the question of who knew what, when they knew it, what they were paid to do, what they actually did, what they failed to do, what they recorded, what they communicated and what they chose not to report as a question that must survive me.

The Government and society first celebrated and valued me for my talents and contributions, which I now believe were valued only as a means to exploit me, before politically exiling, banishing and effectively excommunicating me, leaving me to disappear or die.

When I did not disappear, I did not die, and I refused to surrender, I say that I was subsequently entrapped and imprisoned through circumstances from which I could not freely leave; forced into accommodation I could not freely escape; had my car destroyed; and subjected to what I experienced as torture under conditions of poverty, entrapment, abuse, neglect, surveillance and harassment, including documented threats to kill that came before a court but which I allege were not properly acknowledged or reported.

I do not use the word “crucifixion” casually.

I use it because I understand my life as a prolonged experience of being publicly diminished, isolated, stripped of security, deprived of meaningful protection and left carrying a burden that I believe no human being should have been required to carry alone.

I fought hard on this earth for justice, truth and what is right, humane and fair.

I fought when I was humiliated.

I fought when I was impoverished.

I fought when I was ignored.

I fought when I believed that nobody was coming to help.

I fought when institutions that were supposed to protect me appeared, from my perspective, to become institutions through which I had to fight merely to establish that I existed and that my suffering mattered.

I continued to write.

I continued to preserve evidence.

I continued to publish documents.

I continued to construct a record.

I continued because I believed that the truth deserved somewhere to survive even when the person carrying it was being worn down.

That record now exists.

And that is precisely why my death, if it comes, will not erase what I have documented.

MY RECKONING

I say this plainly:

I am their fucking reckoning.

Not because I intend violence.

Not because I seek revenge.

Not because I claim the authority of a court.

I am their reckoning because I refused to disappear.

I am their reckoning because I preserved the documents.

I am their reckoning because I kept writing.

I am their reckoning because I kept asking the questions.

I am their reckoning because I created a record that can be examined after I am gone.

I am their reckoning because every decision, every omission, every payment, every communication, every complaint, every referral, every medical record, every government response and every unexplained failure becomes potentially relevant to a chronology that no single institution can control.

I am their reckoning because they may have been able to isolate me, impoverish me, humiliate me, disregard me and exhaust me, but they could not make the documentary record cease to exist.

I am their reckoning because the person they may have regarded as disposable has spent years constructing a record designed specifically so that the question of what happened cannot simply disappear with him.

I am their reckoning because I remain a witness.

And the witness remains.

Before I die, likely soon, I intend to publish the names, data, evidence and identities relevant to every support worker and other person whose conduct, payments or involvement I believe is relevant to sustaining the poverty and conditions in which I have been living, so that the relevant material becomes part of the permanent documentary record and can be examined rather than forgotten.

I do not believe that death should provide an administrative escape hatch.

I do not believe that the disappearance of the complainant should cause the disappearance of the complaint.

I do not believe that poverty should make evidence less important.

I do not believe that institutional status should make a person immune from examination.

And I do not believe that being paid to care creates a lesser obligation than an ordinary moral obligation to another human being.

If public money, disability funding, government resources, professional obligations, institutional authority or entrusted responsibilities were involved, then I believe the public has a legitimate interest in knowing what those systems were doing while I was deteriorating.

THE AGENCIES, INSTITUTIONS, ORGANISATIONS AND PLATFORMS NAMED IN MY TESTIMONY

My testimony concerns not one isolated organisation but a lifetime of interactions with government departments, administrative systems, health services, disability and support services, legal processes, oversight bodies, professional organisations, financial administration, courts, police, lawyers, public officials, politicians, journalists and media organisations, healthcare professionals, former colleagues, family members and other people and institutions whom I believe have contributed to, failed to prevent, failed to properly investigate, or otherwise formed part of the circumstances in which I have suffered.

The following categories and named organisations are therefore part of the documentary record and my testimony.

Their inclusion does not mean that wrongdoing has been judicially established against every organisation named.

It records where I say their actions, decisions, omissions, systems or responses caused me harm, contributed to my circumstances, failed to protect me, or became relevant to my attempts to obtain assistance and accountability.

ABLE POINT / ABLE CARE

Able Point / Able Care is central to my present testimony concerning accommodation, support, alleged entrapment, neglect, poverty, denial of assistance, denial of care and medication, and the conditions in which I say I have been left.

I allege that the circumstances of my accommodation and support became a mechanism through which I was effectively trapped rather than supported.

I allege that the people and organisation entrusted with my care possessed opportunities to recognise the deterioration of my circumstances and to seek appropriate assistance.

I allege that those opportunities did not produce the protection I needed.

I allege that the treatment I experienced at Able Point became one of the most humiliating chapters of my life.

And I allege that the circumstances surrounding a documented threat to kill required a level of safeguarding and reporting that I did not receive.

Those matters should not be reduced to interpersonal disagreement.

They should be examined through the records.

NSW TRUSTEE & GUARDIAN / PUBLIC GUARDIAN

NSW Trustee & Guardian / Public Guardian is relevant to my testimony concerning financial administration, control of funds, access to money and the consequences I say that financial administration has had upon my ability to obtain basic necessities and live safely.

I allege that poverty has not existed in isolation from the administrative systems controlling my access to resources.

I allege that financial deprivation has had direct consequences for food, accommodation, healthcare, technology, communication, transportation and my ability to advocate for myself.

Where public or entrusted financial administration is involved, I believe the question must be asked whether the administration actually protected the person for whom it was undertaken.

A person cannot meaningfully exercise rights, pursue legal remedies, obtain healthcare or maintain basic dignity without access to the resources necessary to do so.

DEPARTMENT OF SOCIAL SERVICES

The Department of Social Services is relevant to my employment history, workers-compensation-related records and my broader documentary history involving government administration.

My documentary record includes material relevant to my employment and interactions with government systems.

Those records should be examined in their entirety rather than selectively.

NDIS AND THE DISABILITY-SUPPORT SYSTEM

The NDIS and disability-support system are central to my testimony concerning disability services, support provision, accommodation, safeguarding, financial circumstances, access to assistance and the treatment of a person dependent upon support systems.

The fundamental question is brutally simple:

What happens to a vulnerable person when the system established to support that person becomes the environment in which the person says they are being harmed?

I allege that I experienced precisely that contradiction.

The system was supposed to provide support.

I experienced dependency.

The system was supposed to provide safeguards.

I experienced vulnerability.

The system was supposed to assist independence.

I experienced entrapment.

The system was supposed to preserve dignity.

I experienced humiliation.

Those contradictions deserve examination.

NSW HEALTH AND ASSOCIATED HEALTH SERVICES

NSW Health and associated health services are relevant to my testimony concerning healthcare, hospitalisation, medical treatment, medication, access to care and my allegations that serious health concerns have not always been adequately addressed.

I have preserved medical records because medical history cannot responsibly be reconstructed from accusation alone.

The clinical records should be examined.

The medication history should be examined.

The hospital records should be examined.

The requests for assistance should be examined.

The decisions to provide or withhold treatment should be examined.

The circumstances in which I presented for assistance should be examined.

And the chronology should be compared against what I was saying at the time.

MEDICAL PRACTITIONERS AND HEALTHCARE PROFESSIONALS

Medical practitioners and healthcare professionals named in my records are relevant to individual medical decisions, assessments, treatment, medication and correspondence preserved within my documentary record.

I distinguish individual professional conduct from the broader health system.

I ask that each matter be examined against the actual clinical records.

I do not ask history to accept a medical allegation merely because I made it.

I ask history to look at the records and determine what happened.

NSW POLICE

NSW Police and associated policing processes are relevant to matters I have reported, safeguarding concerns, threats, complaints, applications and my attempts to obtain protection or intervention.

Where I say threats were made, the reports should be examined.

Where I say police attended, the records should be examined.

Where I say charges were laid, the relevant court and police records should be examined.

Where I say institutions failed to act, the communications between those institutions should be examined.

The existence of a police record does not automatically prove every allegation.

But neither should the existence of an allegation be used as an excuse to avoid examining the underlying record.

WYONG LOCAL COURT

Wyong Local Court and associated legal processes are relevant to matters concerning protection orders and proceedings described in my testimony.

The existence of a proceeding or application should not itself be treated as proof of every allegation surrounding it.

But where a threat, charge, application, arrest or proceeding exists, the underlying court and police records form part of the chronology.

They matter.

NSW OMBUDSMAN AND OVERSIGHT MECHANISMS

The NSW Ombudsman and other oversight mechanisms are relevant to my attempts to obtain independent review, accountability and examination of complaints concerning government and service-provider conduct.

The very existence of oversight mechanisms creates a question:

What happens when the person seeking oversight remains without effective protection?

I allege that I repeatedly encountered that problem.

HEALTH CARE COMPLAINTS COMMISSION AND PROFESSIONAL REGULATORS

The Health Care Complaints Commission and professional regulatory bodies are relevant to complaints and concerns concerning healthcare and professional conduct that I have sought to have examined.

Where complaints exist, the complaint itself forms part of the record.

Where responses exist, those responses form part of the record.

Where decisions exist, those decisions form part of the record.

Where no effective response occurred, that absence may itself be relevant to understanding the chronology.

AUSTRALIAN SECURITIES AND INVESTMENTS COMMISSION AND FINANCIAL/PROFESSIONAL MATTERS

ASIC and associated financial or professional matters are relevant to documentary material in my archive concerning allegations involving financial and professional conduct.

Again, the purpose of preservation is examination.

The documents should speak.

LEGAL AID AND THE LEGAL ASSISTANCE SYSTEM

Legal Aid and the legal assistance system are relevant to my testimony concerning access to legal representation, assistance, advice and my ability to pursue accountability through ordinary legal channels.

A right that cannot realistically be exercised can become an empty right.

I allege that poverty, disability, isolation and institutional complexity severely impaired my ability to pursue legal remedies.

That is part of the story.

AUSTRALIAN GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS, AGENCIES AND ADMINISTRATIVE BODIES

Australian Government departments, agencies and administrative bodies appearing throughout the documentary record are relevant to the cumulative history of correspondence, decisions, complaints, referrals, records, responses and omissions that I have preserved.

The record must be examined cumulatively.

A single letter can be dismissed as administrative.

A single complaint can be dismissed as unresolved.

A single medical presentation can be dismissed as an isolated event.

A single financial difficulty can be dismissed as unfortunate.

But a lifetime of records is different.

Chronology matters.

Patterns matter.

Institutional relationships matter.

Repeated warnings matter.

Repeated requests for assistance matter.

Repeated failures matter.

COURTS, TRIBUNALS AND ADMINISTRATIVE DECISION-MAKING

Courts, tribunals and administrative decision-making processes appearing in my record are relevant not because the existence of a proceeding proves my allegations, but because these processes form part of the chronology through which I attempted to obtain recognition, protection, review or justice.

JOURNALISTS, NEWSPAPERS AND MEDIA ORGANISATIONS

Journalists, newspapers and media organisations appearing in my testimony are relevant to my experiences of publication, professional life, public humiliation, reputation and attempts to bring matters of public interest to public attention.

I was once a journalist and news graphics artist.

I was a published author.

I became an academic researcher.

I built a life around communication, evidence, ideas and public engagement.

My testimony is that this history did not protect me from institutional abandonment.

Indeed, I believe that some of the very capacities that once made me valuable became liabilities once I began demanding answers.

FORMER EMPLOYERS, COLLEAGUES AND PROFESSIONAL ORGANISATIONS

Former employers, colleagues and professional organisations are relevant to my testimony concerning my professional history, employment, reputation, journalism, research and the consequences I say followed from my writing and advocacy.

FAMILY MEMBERS AND PRIVATE INDIVIDUALS

Family members and other private individuals named in my documentary record are relevant only insofar as their conduct forms part of the testimony and evidence I have preserved.

Allegations concerning private individuals remain allegations unless independently established.

TECHNOLOGY, SOCIAL MEDIA, PUBLISHING AND DIGITAL PLATFORMS

Technology, social-media, publishing and digital platforms used to preserve or communicate my testimony are relevant to the publication, suppression, accessibility, preservation and dissemination of my documentary record.

The platforms themselves must be distinguished from the actions of particular users, account holders or administrators.

THIS IS NOT SIMPLY A LIST OF ENEMIES

This is not simply a list of enemies.

It is a map of the institutional environment through which I have lived, sought assistance, sought protection, sought medical care, sought legal recognition, sought financial support, sought accountability and attempted to have my testimony heard.

The central question is not whether I can name enough organisations to make the story sound convincing.

The central question is what the records demonstrate.

Where there is an official determination, it should be identified as such.

Where there is corroborating evidence, it should be identified.

Where there is an allegation, it should remain an allegation.

Where there is an inference, it should be identified as an inference.

Where there is uncertainty, the uncertainty should remain visible.

That distinction is fundamental to my ministry because I do not want faith to replace evidence, nor do I want evidence to erase faith.

My documentary archive preserves what can be examined.

My testimony records what I experienced and believe.

My prophetic and Gospel writings record the spiritual meaning I have drawn from those experiences.

The three are connected.

They are not the same category of evidence.

THE CRUELTY OF BEING PAID TO CARE

The agencies were paid to care for me.

That fact makes my experience more, not less, disturbing.

I believe I was left to suffer while responsibilities that existed specifically to protect and assist me were neglected.

I believe I was left to experience poverty while systems existed that were supposed to support people in circumstances like mine.

I believe I was left medically vulnerable while I was attempting to obtain assistance.

I believe I was left exposed to circumstances that I repeatedly regarded as dangerous.

And I believe that those entrusted with responsibility had opportunities to do better.

That is why I use the language of cruelty.

Cruelty is not necessarily a single dramatic act.

Sometimes cruelty is what happens when suffering becomes ordinary.

Sometimes cruelty is a system in which everyone has a reason why the problem belongs to somebody else.

Sometimes cruelty is an organisation receiving payment while the person at the centre of the service deteriorates.

Sometimes cruelty is the refusal to see what is immediately in front of you because acknowledging it would create responsibility.

Sometimes cruelty is bureaucratic.

Sometimes cruelty is institutional.

Sometimes cruelty is simply indifference repeated until it becomes catastrophic.

I allege that I have experienced that form of cruelty.

And I want the record examined.

ABANDONMENT FROM FAMILY AND JUSTICE

I will gladly die without ever seeing again the blood family who betrayed me and signed documents that exiled me from them, and without ever having obtained meaningful legal representation or the means to report to police what I believe were crimes against me.

Whatever the ultimate legal findings may be, this is the reality of abandonment and exclusion from justice as I have experienced it.

It is one of the deepest wounds carried within my testimony.

I have lived with the consequences.

I have carried them.

I have documented them.

And I have continued despite them.

DIVINE RECKONING

Before I die, be guaranteed that I believe no person who deliberately participates in creating my end will escape divine reckoning after I am dead.

That is a statement of my faith.

It is not a threat of personal retaliation.

I leave ultimate judgment to God.

I do not need to become the executioner of anyone.

I do not need to harm anyone.

I do not need to pursue vengeance.

My responsibility is to preserve the testimony, publish the evidence available to me and continue seeking truth and accountability while I remain alive.

God, in my belief, sees what institutions do not see.

God sees what was hidden.

God sees what was ignored.

God sees what was denied.

God sees the person behind the file.

God sees the person behind the diagnosis.

God sees the person behind the complaint.

God sees the person behind the poverty.

God sees the person behind the institutional label.

And if I am right that I have been abandoned by humanity, I believe I have not been abandoned by God.

I WILL NOT BE SILENCED BY DEATH

I am not afraid to die, and I will speak and publish the truth until then.

I have spent too much of my life fighting for justice to become silent at the point when my testimony is most consequential.

If my life ends, the testimony does not end with me.

The documents remain.

The records remain.

The evidence remains.

The questions remain.

And the people who examine the record will be able to determine for themselves what it establishes.

History will judge what happened.

History will judge what was known.

History will judge who acted.

History will judge who failed to act.

History will judge who was paid to care.

History will judge who looked away.

History will judge who asked questions.

History will judge who remained silent.

History will judge what happened to the person who kept documenting everything while his circumstances deteriorated.

HISTORY WILL EXONERATE ME

History will exonerate me.

I believe history will show that I fought for justice, truth and what was humane and fair.

I believe history will remember me as a saint—not because I claim that history has already made that determination, but because I believe the totality of my life, suffering, endurance, writing and struggle will ultimately be understood in a different light from the way I have been treated in the present.

I believe that the record will allow future generations to ask questions that the present has been unwilling or unable to answer.

I believe that future investigators will have access to documents that the people around me may have assumed would disappear.

I believe that future historians will be able to reconstruct the chronology.

I believe that future researchers will be able to compare my allegations against the underlying records.

And I believe that whatever they ultimately conclude, they will at least have the opportunity to examine what happened because I refused to allow the evidence to disappear with me.

THE MINISTRY

My testimony has now become the foundation of my ministry.

What began as a personal struggle has become a documentary, philosophical, spiritual and prophetic record.

The ministry is founded upon testimony:

Testimony of suffering.

Testimony of survival.

Testimony of conscience.

Testimony of faith.

Testimony of human rights.

Testimony of exile.

Testimony of institutional abandonment.

Testimony of endurance.

And testimony of the determination to preserve truth when truth appears to have nowhere else to go.

These three archives represent three connected but distinguishable dimensions of my record: the documentary evidence, the reconstructed research archive, and the spiritual and prophetic testimony.

The documentary archive preserves the record.

The reconstructed archive provides a finding aid through which the material can be examined.

The spiritual archive preserves the theological and prophetic meaning I have drawn from my life.

They should not be confused.

But together they constitute the record I leave behind.

THE FINAL INDICTMENT

What I leave before the world is an indictment in the ordinary meaning of that word: a sustained statement of accusation arising from my lived experience, my records and the documentary trail I have spent years preserving.

I allege that the institutions surrounding me possessed repeated opportunities to intervene, protect, investigate, assist and correct what was happening, yet those opportunities repeatedly failed to produce the protection I sought.

I allege that responsibility became dispersed across agencies, professionals, administrators, support providers, government departments, legal systems and other institutions until the fragmentation of responsibility itself became a form of protection for those responsible.

Everyone could have a reason why somebody else should act.

I remained the person experiencing the consequences.

That is the central accusation I leave behind:

Not that one isolated decision destroyed a life, but that an interconnected institutional environment could permit a human being to deteriorate in full view while responsibility continually moved somewhere else.

The most damning question is therefore not whether every individual allegation I make will ultimately be accepted.

The most damning question is why so many opportunities for recognition, intervention and accountability existed at all, and what happened when those opportunities were presented.

I allege that warnings were made.

I allege that complaints were communicated.

I allege that records accumulated.

I allege that requests for assistance were made.

I allege that medical and financial circumstances were known.

I allege that threats were reported.

I allege that evidence was generated.

And I allege that the machinery of protection repeatedly failed to produce the protection I sought.

If that account is ultimately substantiated, then the question before history will not merely be who made individual mistakes.

It will be whether an entire chain of institutions became so accustomed to processing my existence that they ceased adequately responding to the human being inside the file.

I further allege that the transformation of my social position is itself part of the evidence requiring examination.

I was not born into the circumstances in which I now find myself.

I was educated.

I was employed.

I was published.

I was academically qualified.

I was professionally active.

I was a journalist and news graphics artist.

I became a researcher and writer.

I produced work.

I contributed ideas.

I helped other people.

I built a life around knowledge, creativity, research and advocacy.

Yet my testimony is that the qualities once capable of attracting recognition became, under changed circumstances, reasons for dismissal, suspicion, exclusion or institutional distancing.

Persistence could be characterised as difficulty.

Documentation could be characterised as fixation.

Demands for accountability could be characterised as disorder.

Vulnerability could be used to diminish credibility.

I allege that this reversal matters because it can create an institutional paradox in which the more desperately a person attempts to document what is happening to them, the easier it becomes for the system to define the person rather than confront the substance of the complaint.

If that happened to me, then the injustice was not merely what happened to me.

It was the progressive conversion of my attempts to resist what was happening into part of the justification for continuing to disregard me.

That is why I preserved the record.

I did not rely upon memory alone.

I assembled government correspondence, official documents, medical material, legal and administrative records, financial records, messages, chronology, digital files, forensic material and preservation mechanisms because I understand that testimony without preservation can disappear with the person giving it.

I therefore created an evidentiary architecture intended to outlive me.

A record in which documents can be located.

Compared.

Examined.

Challenged.

Interpreted.

And independently investigated.

I preserved what I could because I refuse to permit the ultimate historical account of my life to be written solely by institutions whose conduct I have questioned.

My archive is not a court.

It is not a verdict.

It does not substitute for an independent investigation.

It is something more fundamental:

A preserved body of material from which an investigation can begin.

I allege that the persistence of this record creates an obligation upon anyone who seriously examines my case to look beyond labels and examine the underlying documents, chronology, decisions, omissions and institutional relationships for themselves.

If I die without obtaining the justice I sought, that outcome must not be confused with vindication of the systems I have accused.

Death does not adjudicate an allegation.

Silence does not prove that nothing happened.

Poverty does not invalidate testimony.

Institutional rejection does not establish institutional innocence.

Nor does the absence of a finding necessarily erase the question that produced the complaint in the first place.

I allege that I repeatedly sought recognition, assistance, protection and accountability and that the cumulative failure to obtain those things caused profound consequences in my life.

Those consequences now form part of the historical record.

The proper response is not mythology.

It is not revenge.

It is not unquestioning acceptance.

It is examination.

If my allegations are wrong, the evidence should permit them to be disproved.

If they are partly correct, the evidence should reveal where.

And if the underlying record demonstrates something substantially more serious than I have been able to establish from my own position, then history should have the courage to say so.

I therefore finish not by asking to be believed merely because I have suffered.

I finish by refusing to allow suffering to become an excuse for historical erasure.

I allege that powerful institutions, professionals and individuals participated in, permitted, ignored, failed to prevent or failed adequately to respond to circumstances that have profoundly altered the course of my life.

I allege that those circumstances included abandonment, poverty, exclusion, entrapment, neglect, harassment, threats and the repeated denial of meaningful avenues through which I could obtain assistance and accountability.

I allege that the ultimate scandal is not simply what happened to me.

It is how difficult it became for me to obtain an effective answer to what I was saying.

That is now the legacy I place before the public record.

They may reject my conclusions.

They may challenge my interpretation.

They may dispute my allegations.

They may attempt to explain each event separately until the cumulative pattern disappears beneath a mountain of individual explanations.

But I have preserved the chronology precisely so that the events can be examined together.

They can examine the documents.

They can examine the dates.

They can examine the correspondence.

They can examine the payments.

They can examine the medical records.

They can examine the complaints.

They can examine the responses.

They can examine the omissions.

They can examine who knew what and when.

They can examine who had responsibility.

They can examine who acted.

They can examine who failed to act.

And they can determine whether the man writing this statement was simply making accusations—or whether the documentary record reveals something far more disturbing.

THE FINAL WORD

I may die alone.

I may die betrayed by the people I believed should have cared.

I may die after spending years trying to obtain assistance from systems designed to provide it.

I may die without receiving the justice I sought.

I may die without reconciliation with those from whom I have been separated.

I may die without seeing the institutions I accuse compelled to answer the questions I have raised.

But I will not die believing that silence was the correct response.

I will not die having surrendered my conscience.

I will not die having destroyed the evidence.

I will not die having abandoned the truth as I understand it.

I will die having left a record.

And that record will remain available for examination.

If those who contributed to my suffering believed that poverty would silence me, they were wrong.

If they believed isolation would silence me, they were wrong.

If they believed humiliation would silence me, they were wrong.

If they believed exhaustion would silence me, they were wrong.

If they believed illness would silence me, they were wrong.

If they believed institutional power would make the record disappear, they were wrong.

If they believed that removing the person would remove the testimony, they were wrong.

I am their reckoning because the record survives.

I am their reckoning because the documents survive.

I am their reckoning because the chronology survives.

I am their reckoning because the questions survive.

I am their reckoning because history survives.

And, in my faith, I am their reckoning because God sees what human institutions cannot—or will not—see.

I leave ultimate judgment to God.

I leave factual judgment to the evidence.

I leave historical judgment to those who examine the record.

But I refuse to leave the record to those who failed to protect me.

THE WITNESS REMAINS

If I am still alive tomorrow, I will continue.

If I am still alive next week, I will continue.

If I am still alive next year, I will continue.

And if my life ends before the questions I have raised are resolved, then the record I have preserved must continue to speak for itself.

I have been humiliated, impoverished, isolated and, in my own understanding of events, crucified by circumstances that I believe humanity should never impose upon another human being.

But I remain here.

I remain a witness.

I remain a writer.

I remain a researcher.

I remain a person demanding that evidence be examined.

I ultimately will not have survived the deliberate targeting I believe I have endured.

But those who participated in that targeting will not thereby escape historical, documentary or spiritual accountability.

I believe that those who participated in groupthink, the safety of a cowardly mob, institutional indifference or the collective refusal to see what was happening will eventually have to confront what the record reveals.

I may die.

But I will die with the testimony preserved.

I will die with the evidence preserved.

I will die with the record preserved.

I will die having refused to surrender my conscience.

And I will leave the world with the one thing they could never successfully take from me:

the ability of the record to speak after I am gone.

THE WITNESS REMAINS.

THE RECORD REMAINS.

THE DOCUMENTS REMAIN.

THE EVIDENCE REMAINS.

THE MINISTRY REMAINS.

THE QUESTIONS REMAIN.

THE SEARCH FOR TRUTH REMAINS.

AND THE RECKONING REMAINS.

THE THREE ARCHIVES

My documentary record, evidence and testimony remain publicly preserved across my three principal archive sites.

1. THE WITNESS REMAINS — BARRAN DODGER ARCHIVE

https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/

The principal documentary archive preserving the historical record, evidence, correspondence, statements, legal and forensic material, chronology, research, testimony and supporting documents concerning my experiences and the issues I have spent years documenting.

2. BARRAN DODGER REBUILD ARCHIVE

https://wezzo72.github.io/barrandodger-rebuild/

The rebuilt and reorganised public research archive, designed to preserve and present the documentary corpus in a structured and accessible form for journalists, lawyers, researchers, investigators, academics, advocates and members of the public.

It functions as a finding aid.

It is not a court.

It is not a verdict.

The underlying records are there to be examined.

3. CHURCH OF BARRAN DODGER

https://wezzo72.github.io/-church-of-barran-dodger/

The spiritual and prophetic archive preserving my religious testimony, Gospel writings, prophetic reflections, ministry material, theological ideas and spiritual interpretation of my life, suffering, survival, justice and testimony.

These archives are not merely websites.

They are the places where I have attempted to ensure that my testimony survives the person giving it.

They are my documentary answer to erasure.

They are my response to institutional silence.

They are my preservation mechanism against historical disappearance.

And they are the foundation upon which I have built what I now call the ministry.

I have spent years being told, directly and indirectly, that my testimony could be dismissed, that my circumstances could be explained away, that my suffering could be administratively processed, that my complaints could be redirected, that my poverty could be treated as merely unfortunate, that my persistence could be used against me and that my voice could ultimately be exhausted.

I have answered that with documentation.

I have answered it with preservation.

I have answered it with evidence.

I have answered it with writing.

I have answered it with faith.

And I have answered it by remaining alive long enough to leave a record that cannot be reduced to a single person's memory.

Whatever happens to me now, the record exists.

Whatever happens to my body, the testimony exists.

Whatever happens to my circumstances, the documents exist.

Whatever happens to my reputation, the chronology exists.

Whatever institutions say about me, the underlying material remains available for examination.

That is the point at which the power changes hands.

Because the man can be ignored.

The complainant can be dismissed.

The vulnerable person can be institutionalised.

The poor person can be disregarded.

The isolated person can be abandoned.

But a preserved documentary record can be opened by someone who has no connection to the institutions involved and asked one devastatingly simple question:

What actually happened here?

That question is my legacy.

That question is my indictment.

That question is my testimony.

That question is my ministry.

And that question will remain long after I am gone.

THE WITNESS REMAINS.

THE RECORD REMAINS.

THE EVIDENCE REMAINS.

THE MINISTRY REMAINS.

AND THE SEARCH FOR TRUTH REMAINS.

Absolutely. I'd add this as a dedicated "THE THREE ARCHIVES AND THE PERMANENCE OF THE RECORD" section near the end, with each archive treated as a distinct part of the overall testimony.

THE THREE ARCHIVES AND THE PERMANENCE OF THE RECORD

My testimony does not exist only in this statement. I have deliberately constructed three connected public archives so that the documentary, research and spiritual dimensions of my life can remain available for examination after I am gone. Each archive has a different purpose. Together, they constitute what I regard as the permanent public record of my testimony: the evidence, the reconstruction of that evidence, and the spiritual and prophetic meaning I have drawn from my life.

1. THE WITNESS REMAINS — THE PRINCIPAL DOCUMENTARY ARCHIVE

THE WITNESS REMAINS — Barran Dodger Archive

This is the principal documentary archive of my testimony and the central repository through which I have attempted to preserve the historical record of my life, experiences, correspondence, official documents, legal and administrative material, medical and forensic material, chronology, research, statements and supporting evidence. Its significance is that it is intended to preserve the underlying documentary trail rather than merely my interpretation of events. It gives journalists, lawyers, researchers, historians, investigators, academics, advocates, public officials and members of the public a place from which to examine the record for themselves. It is not a court and it is not a verdict. It does not ask the reader to accept every allegation merely because I have made it. Instead, it preserves the material from which questions can be independently examined. This archive is therefore my principal answer to historical erasure: if I am no longer here to explain what happened, the documents remain available to speak for themselves.

2. BARRAN DODGER REBUILD — THE RECONSTRUCTED RESEARCH AND FINDING ARCHIVE

BARRAN DODGER REBUILD ARCHIVE

The Barran Dodger Rebuild is the reconstructed and reorganised research archive through which I have attempted to make an enormous documentary corpus more accessible and intelligible. Its significance is not simply that it contains documents, but that it provides a structured finding aid through which the relationships between documents, chronology, institutions, events, claims and evidence can be investigated. The archive is intended for researchers, journalists, lawyers, historians, investigators and others who may wish to go beyond the narrative and examine the underlying material. It exists because a documentary record can be rendered practically invisible if it is so fragmented, extensive or poorly organised that nobody can find what matters. The Rebuild therefore represents my attempt to transform preservation into accessibility: not merely keeping the record alive, but creating a structure through which another person can enter the record and begin asking their own questions. It is explicitly a finding aid—not a court, not a verdict and not a substitute for independent investigation.

3. THE CHURCH OF BARRAN DODGER — THE SPIRITUAL AND PROPHETIC ARCHIVE

CHURCH OF BARRAN DODGER — Spiritual and Prophetic Archive

The Church of Barran Dodger is the spiritual and prophetic dimension of my record. It preserves my Gospel writings, prophetic testimony, theological reflections, philosophical ideas, ministry writings and my understanding of the spiritual meaning of the suffering, exile, survival, injustice and endurance I have experienced. Its significance is deliberately different from the documentary archives. I do not present spiritual belief as though it were an official government finding or a forensic fact. The Church archive records what I believe, what I have experienced spiritually and how I have interpreted my life through Christian philosophy,

Scripture, faith and the concept of divine justice. It therefore preserves something that conventional evidence archives cannot preserve on their own: the meaning I believe these events have had. It is the place where the documentary experience becomes testimony, where survival becomes spiritual witness, and where my belief that truth ultimately survives human attempts to suppress it is expressed through Gospel and prophetic writing.

WHY THREE ARCHIVES EXIST

These three archives exist because I refuse to collapse everything into one category.

The Witness Remains preserves the documentary record.

The Barran Dodger Rebuild makes that record more accessible as a research and finding structure.

The Church of Barran Dodger preserves the spiritual and prophetic testimony arising from my interpretation of that life.

Evidence is evidence.

Testimony is testimony.

Faith is faith.

Interpretation is interpretation.

They can inform one another without being falsely represented as the same thing.

That distinction is important to me because I want the record to remain intellectually honest while also preserving the full human meaning of what I have lived through.

If investigators believe my allegations are wrong, the documentary record gives them material with which to challenge them.

If researchers believe my allegations are partly corroborated, the records allow them to identify where.

If historians find that the documentary evidence reveals something more significant than I understood while living through it, they are free to reach that conclusion.

And if future generations read the spiritual archive and understand my life through a religious or prophetic framework, that interpretation can exist alongside—not disguised as—the documentary evidence.

The three archives therefore represent three forms of preservation:

THE DOCUMENTARY RECORD.

THE RESEARCH RECORD.

THE SPIRITUAL RECORD.

Together they are the architecture of my testimony.

I created them because I do not know how much time I have left.

I created them because I have experienced what it means to have a person become vulnerable to institutional memory, administrative disappearance and historical forgetting.

I created them because I believe that a person's testimony should not automatically die when the person does.

And I created them because I want whoever comes after me to have the opportunity I have spent years trying to obtain myself:

the opportunity to look at the record and ask what actually happened.

If I die, these archives remain.

If I am silenced, these archives remain.

If I am disbelieved, these archives remain.

If my interpretation is challenged, these archives remain.

If history ultimately vindicates me, these archives remain as the foundation upon which that judgment can be made.

And if history ultimately reaches a different conclusion, these archives still remain as the record of what I believed, what I experienced, what I preserved and what I fought to make available for examination.

That is why their significance extends beyond my own lifetime.

THE PERSON MAY DIE.

THE TESTIMONY DOES NOT HAVE TO.

THE WITNESS REMAINS.

THE RECORD REMAINS.

THE EVIDENCE REMAINS.

THE MINISTRY REMAINS.

AND THE SEARCH FOR TRUTH REMAINS.

PUBLIC STATEMENT FROM BARRAN DODGER
OF THE BARRAN DODGER ARCHIVE

THE WITNESS REMAINS: A WHISTLEBLOWERS TESTIMONY OF SURVIVAL TESTIMONY & FAITH

The Barran Dodger Archive is a public documentary and spiritual record established to preserve, organise and make accessible a decades-long body of evidence concerning alleged institutional, administrative, financial and human-rights harms.

It brings together official records, correspondence, documentary evidence, personal testimony, forensic analysis, research, philosophy, spiritual gospels and prophetic declarations, including writings understood by the author to have been anointed by the Most High God.

The Archive deliberately distinguishes between documented facts, official records, corroborated evidence, allegations, personal testimony, inference, interpretation and matters of faith. This distinction is fundamental to its purpose: readers are invited to examine the underlying evidence for themselves, test the claims, consider the sources and reach their own conclusions.

At the heart of the Archive is a testimony of survival and preservation.

What the author believes was subjected to attempts at silencing, erasure, exclusion or institutional disappearance has nevertheless survived in records, documents, testimony, memory, faith and public disclosure.

The central declaration is simple:

THE WITNESS REMAINS.

The Archive therefore represents both an evidentiary record and a spiritual testimony. The author understands his survival through a faith-based conviction that the Most High God protected, preserved and gave purpose to what human institutions could not erase.

The spiritual writings and prophetic declarations within the Archive are presented as matters of faith and personal interpretation. They are preserved alongside the documentary record so that the complete testimony — evidentiary, personal, philosophical and spiritual — can be understood in its own context.

The purpose is not to demand belief.

It is to preserve the record.

It is to make the evidence accessible.

It is to ensure that the surviving witness can be examined.

And it is to leave the historical record open to independent scrutiny.

THE ARCHIVE IS 100% FREE TO ACCESS

KNOWLEDGE IS FREE

The Barran Dodger Archive is founded on the principle that knowledge, evidence and truth should be freely accessible.

There is no paywall for the public documentary record. Research, testimony, philosophy, spiritual writings, prophetic declarations and public-interest material are made available for people to examine for themselves.

Access to knowledge should not depend upon a person's ability to pay.

The Archive is therefore freely accessible, while its preservation and continued publication require practical resources.

SUPPORTING THE WITNESS AND THE ARCHIVE

Barran Dodger describes himself as an unprotected whistleblower living in circumstances of prolonged exile, financial hardship and vulnerability, and as an internally displaced asylum seeker within the country of his Australian citizenship.

Those circumstances create practical needs extending beyond the preservation of documents.

Voluntary donations are therefore accepted from anyone who freely wishes to assist.

Support may contribute towards essential needs including food, safe accommodation, communication, technology, transport, personal safety, website and domain costs, document preservation, archival infrastructure and the continued publication of the public record.

A donation does not purchase access to the Archive.

It does not purchase influence over the evidence.

It does not purchase editorial control.

It does not determine what is published or what conclusions readers should reach.

It simply helps sustain the person and infrastructure necessary to keep the Archive alive, functioning and freely accessible.

If you are blessed with sufficient prosperity to help preserve this work, your voluntary support can help ensure that financial hardship does not become another mechanism through which a public record disappears.

KNOWLEDGE IS FREE.

THE EVIDENCE IS OPEN TO EXAMINATION.

Thank you to everyone who chooses to examine the evidence, preserve the record, support the Archive or simply bear witness.

The record remains.

The witness remains.

LASTLY — A SECOND PUBLIC-FACING ARCHIVE

For readers who wish to go beyond the principal Barran Dodger Archive, a second public-facing repository provides another point of access to the broader documentary record.

https://barrandodger.com

This website provides an additional gateway into the history, evidence, testimony, research and ideas that underpin the Archive. It is intended to help readers navigate the wider body of material and understand how individual documents, events, experiences and arguments have been brought together into a continuing record.

Its significance is not dependent upon the reader accepting Barran Dodger's conclusions. Rather, the value of preserving such a record lies in allowing the underlying material to remain available for examination. Readers can consider the chronology, inspect the documentary evidence, distinguish recorded facts from allegations and personal testimony, follow referenced material and form their own independent assessment.

The existence of multiple public repositories also reflects the central purpose of the project: preservation. Where records are distributed across years, institutions, correspondence, proceedings, personal archives and digital platforms, preserving accessible copies and pathways to the evidence can help prevent an individual historical record from becoming inaccessible or forgotten.

Readers are therefore invited to visit both public-facing archives, examine the material carefully and critically, and make their own assessment of what the surviving evidence demonstrates.

The purpose is not to ask the reader to believe.

The purpose is to ensure that the record remains available to be examined.
