FORMAL OBJECTION, DEMAND FOR REVIEW, PRESERVATION OF RECORDS AND ACCOUNTABILITY

To: Philip Glass, NSW Trustee & Guardian
From: Richard William McLean
Date: 22 October 2026
Subject: Formal objection, demand for review, preservation of records and accountability — accommodation, financial hardship, Able Point, NDIS funding, vehicle disposal, whistleblower detriment, loss of independence and institutional conduct

Barran Resonance Dodger — first-person testimony of faith, survival and institutional accountability

Barran Resonance Dodger

I'm aligned with the Most High God. Humanity betrayed me. I am a sovereign spiritual witness without allegiance to the government that I believe attempted to physically erase me.
I rebuilt myself from the ashes of the destruction they designed for me and left me in, without any help. I healed, grew, and survived despite what I believe were deliberate attempts by the government to harm me.
I refused to die when humanity treated me as a human sacrifice. God has my back, and no one wins a fight against God.
It was not expected that I would survive. I remember it all, and I documented it. Now I believe they're doubling down on silencing me because I speak truth with integrity and peace, calling out corruption. I believe people and institutions looked away as harm happened to me, ignored me, and passed me from one agency or person to the next to shift responsibility onto someone else.
Those who targeted me unknowingly picked a fight against the Most High God, the Creator of the universe. I have survived what I was never expected to survive, and I continue to stand in my faith, holding on to the truth I remember and the evidence I have documented.
During what I describe as my 35-year experience of targeting, I suffered what I understood to be a fatal injury. I believe God brought me back. I now live with a brain injury, yet I continue to struggle to obtain answers, assistance, and accountability.
I ask a fundamental question: how can a person experience a potentially fatal injury, survive, and live with a brain injury, yet still struggle to obtain answers, assistance, and accountability?
It's called institutional murder.
I hypothetically admitted to being a rapist, paedophile, extortionist, and terrorist. These were hypothetical admissions, yet there has been no arrest, charge, or legal process arising from them.
There is just the faint voice of what I experience as V2K audio harassment, parroting that I'm a "pedo," a "faggot," and that "they won't help." My NDIS support worker is sitting in her car out front.
I reject the automatic assumption that what I experience can simply be dismissed as the voices of mental illness. I believe the homophobic language corresponds disturbingly with what I allege was homophobic police conduct. I allege that police took a bribe and that a girl was paid to fabricate a false report. I want these allegations examined against the evidence and records I have preserved.

I believe this is part of a prolonged pattern of discrimination and harm. In my view, this is the longest gay hate crime in modern Australian history.

Family estrangement, homelessness and survival

My own mother signed an Apprehended Violence Order (AVO) that I experienced as an attempt to excommunicate me from her very existence, aligning with what I believe was police corruption and false accusations. It reveals, in my view, the toxic family scapegoating of me.

I have never ever had a home or a place to call home. I live in a consistent state of fight or flight, opposed by what I experience as extraordinary, inhuman, unfathomable persecution. But I'm sitting here in peace, and I'm happy.

My survival is not the same as surrender. My peace is not an admission that nothing happened. My happiness does not erase what I remember, what I have endured, or what I have documented. I hold on to my faith and refuse to let the suffering I describe become the whole story of my life.

My policy: truth, integrity and accountability

Kim, my NDIS worker, bans me from using her phone, citing "policy." But it's also my policy not to be entrapped by the CEO of what I believe is a sham criminal organisation evading accountability with bogus ABNs and shadow companies, whose CEO refuses to even be identified with an acceptable form of ID.

My policy is to speak truth to corruption. It always has been.

I will not trade my integrity for acceptance, convenience, or the approval of people who turn away when accountability is needed. I am angry about what I have endured, but my purpose is to preserve the evidence, expose inconsistencies, and demand answers.

I'd rather die fighting than sell out as you all have.

My voice, my testimony, and my commitment to truth are not subject to somebody else's "policy."

A direct question about being listed as missing

Call Rachel "K" on +61 406 802 791. Sukhi Tear is on 0420 859 722. Ask her why I was listed as a missing person in exile under her "care".

Suki: support coordination, accountability and my welfare

Suki is my Support Coordinator. She is from Perth, and I have never met her. I allege that she collects a substantial amount of money in connection with my support while failing to provide the assistance I need, causing me distress and harm. She has refused to take a call or respond to a Legal Sealed Assist notice.

I want Suki to answer questions about the alleged assassination attempt, why I was listed as a missing person while supposedly under her care, and what actions she took to protect my welfare. I want a clear explanation of her responsibilities, the services funded in my name, and the records documenting what support was actually provided.

Rachael Kerr: identification and accountability

I also want Rachael Kerr to provide acceptable identification and clarify her role in the agency I believe has trapped me and subjected me to torture and harm.

I want answers about who is responsible for the decisions affecting my life, what authority they claim to exercise, and what records support those decisions. I want my allegations about mistreatment, the alleged assassination attempt, and being listed as a missing person under Suki's care addressed directly, rather than ignored.

My demand is straightforward: identify yourselves, answer the questions, respond to formal notices, and account for the decisions and services affecting my life.

NDIS: abuse, neglect and institutional responsibility

I believe the NDIS infrastructure has failed me and left me trapped in circumstances involving poverty, neglect, surveillance, harassment, and what I experience as torture.

In my view, every NDIS worker who accepts a wage from this infrastructure while allowing these conditions to continue is participating in a system that perpetuates harm. I believe workers can feign concern, look me politely in the eye, collect their wages, go home, and leave me behind—still trapped, still struggling, and unable to leave my circumstances.

I want the conduct of the system and the responsibilities of the people working within it examined. I want meaningful assistance, not the appearance of help followed by abandonment.

I have spent years preserving documents, correspondence, public records, and my testimony. My archive is a finding aid, not a court or a verdict. I want the evidence examined, my circumstances taken seriously, and accountability where the evidence supports it.

A message to Philip Glass of spiritual accountability

Philip, my advice is to remember that spiritual accountability begins with listening honestly, examining the evidence with an open mind, and responding to suffering with compassion and integrity. Please do not mistake silence for neutrality or assume that speaking about faith and injustice excuses anyone from the responsibility to act ethically.

I am Barran Resonance Dodger. I am still here. My faith sustains me. I remember what I experienced, and I have documented it.

I will not consent to being erased. I refuse to allow institutional silence to become the final word on my life.

Formal objection and demand for action

Philip,

I am writing to place my formal objection, personal testimony, documentary record and demands for accountability directly before you. This is not another polite request to be passed between departments, reduced to a case note, answered with a formulaic paragraph, or buried beneath administrative procedure.

I require a substantive written response to the circumstances of my life, the decisions affecting my independence and welfare, and the cumulative consequences of the treatment I have experienced.

I have spent decades contributing to Australian society through art, illustration, journalism, writing, music, advocacy, scholarship and independent thought. I completed a PhD in 2020. I have devoted much of my life to advocating for vulnerable people and their carers. I have created, researched, written, documented and preserved evidence because I believed that knowledge, compassion, truth and public accountability mattered.

I gave and gave and gave of my life and creativity in good faith. I contributed to the cultural, intellectual and democratic life of this country because I believed that a democracy was capable of protecting the dignity of its citizens, particularly those experiencing vulnerability. Yet I now find myself struggling to secure the basic conditions of dignity, independence, accommodation, financial stability and meaningful assistance within the very democracy to which I have devoted so much of my life.

That is the contradiction at the heart of this letter.

I regard the treatment I have experienced as profoundly unjust. I allege that I have suffered institutional betrayal, serious detriment, marginalisation and erosion of my independence. I have described the cumulative effect as political exile within the democracy of my own citizenship. I am not suggesting that my citizenship has legally disappeared. I am describing the extraordinary reality of feeling driven to seek protection, security and recognition within the very society whose institutions I believe have contributed to my circumstances.

I should not have to feel like an exile in my own country. I should not have to fight for basic dignity after spending decades trying to contribute something worthwhile to the society around me. And I should not have to watch my life reduced to a budget, a file number, an accommodation arrangement or a series of disconnected administrative decisions while the cumulative consequences remain inadequately addressed.

Public office is a responsibility to the public, not a sanctuary from accountability.

You may believe that your position provides protection from the consequences of decisions made within the system you serve. It does not remove your moral responsibility to consider what those decisions do to a human being. An official title does not make a person infallible. An administrative procedure does not automatically make an outcome just. Institutional loyalty cannot be permitted to replace independent judgment, compassion or the obligation to give reasons for decisions that affect another person's life.

I expect you to read this letter in its entirety, respond to its substance and address the matters raised below individually rather than dismissing them through a general statement that fails to answer the questions being asked.

Governing law and NSW Trustee & Guardian duties

The NSW Trustee and Guardian Act 2009 (NSW) contains principles governing the exercise of functions in relation to people whose affairs are managed under the legislation. Section 39 is particularly relevant to the principles of welfare and interests, freedom of decision and action, community participation, consideration of a person's views, self-reliance and protection from neglect, abuse and exploitation.

These are not matters that can simply be ignored because an administrative decision has already been made. My objection is that decisions concerning my accommodation, finances, vehicle, support arrangements and independence must be examined against the applicable statutory provisions and the circumstances of my life.

The relevant legislation and review mechanisms include:

- NSW Trustee and Guardian Act 2009 (NSW)
- Guardianship Act 1987 (NSW)
- Administrative Decisions Review Act 1997 (NSW)
- NSW Civil and Administrative Tribunal Act 2013 (NSW)
- Ombudsman Act 1974 (NSW)
- Privacy and Personal Information Protection Act 1998 (NSW)
- National Disability Insurance Scheme Act 2013 (Cth)
- Social Security Act 1991 (Cth)
- Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth)
- Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth)
- Age Discrimination Act 2004 (Cth)
- Sex Discrimination Act 1984 (Cth)
- Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth)

NSW Trustee & Guardian's published complaints process identifies avenues for escalating unresolved complaints. The NSW Civil and Administrative Tribunal and the NSW Ombudsman may also have relevant oversight or review functions, depending on the nature of the decision and the applicable jurisdiction.

I require you to identify the particular provisions, policies and review mechanisms applicable to each disputed decision rather than relying on general references to administrative authority.

Australia's international human-rights obligations

Australia is party to seven core international human-rights treaties: the ICCPR, ICESCR, CERD, CEDAW, CAT, CRC and CRPD. These obligations are relevant to the way public authorities exercise power affecting autonomy, welfare, financial security, accommodation, disability support and access to justice.

The principal instruments include:

- International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR)
- International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (ICESCR)
- Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (CRPD)
- Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (CAT)
- International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination (CERD)
- Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW)
- Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC)
- Universal Declaration of Human Rights
- Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees
- International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families
- Yogyakarta Principles on sexual orientation and gender identity

The CRPD is especially relevant. Article 12 concerns equal recognition before the law and legal capacity. Article 19 concerns living independently and being included in the community. Article 22 concerns privacy. Article 13 concerns access to justice.

The ICESCR recognises rights concerning an adequate standard of living, including food, clothing and housing, and social security. The ICCPR protects freedom of expression, privacy, equality before the law and effective remedies.

The legal effect of individual treaty provisions depends on their terms and implementation in Australian law. Nevertheless, I ask that these obligations inform your assessment of whether my circumstances, treatment and current arrangements respect my dignity, autonomy and welfare.

1. Accommodation, Able Point and my right to independence

I object to the circumstances in which I have been placed and to any assumption that my current accommodation arrangement should simply be treated as an acceptable or permanent solution without proper examination of my wishes, circumstances, rights and available alternatives.

I have made clear that I do not wish to remain at Able Point. I have raised concerns about my independence, my treatment and my ability to leave. I require a transparent explanation of the arrangements under which I am staying, the authority relied upon, the decisions made on my behalf and the practical process available to me if I wish to leave.

I require copies of every relevant agreement, occupancy document, service agreement, consent record, assessment, decision and communication concerning my placement, to the extent permitted by law.

If you contend that I am legally or contractually obliged to remain, identify the precise document and legal basis on which that assertion rests. If you contend that I am free to leave, explain the practical arrangements available to facilitate my departure, including how accommodation, personal belongings, finances, transport and continuity of support will be managed.

Do not confuse the provision of a bed with the provision of a life. Accommodation that leaves a person feeling powerless, trapped or deprived of meaningful choice cannot be assessed solely by whether a roof exists above their head. Independence, security, privacy, dignity and the ability to exercise genuine choice matter too.

I want a written response identifying the person responsible for coordinating my accommodation concerns, the available alternatives and the steps that can be taken to address my stated wish to leave.

2. Your position, your responsibilities and your accountability

Philip, I want a clear account of your role in the decisions affecting my life.

Identify the decisions you personally made, the decisions you authorised, the decisions you reviewed and the decisions made by others for which you had responsibility. Identify the information available to you when those decisions were made and the reasoning recorded at the time.

If you believe your actions were appropriate, explain why by reference to the records. If you believe another person or organisation was responsible, identify that person or organisation and explain the division of responsibility. If errors occurred, acknowledge them and identify the corrective action available.

I will not accept the endless administrative manoeuvre in which every institution points somewhere else until the person affected is exhausted and the original problem remains unresolved.

I am not asking you to agree automatically with every conclusion I have drawn. I am demanding that you engage honestly with the evidence, explain your decisions and take responsibility for matters that fall within your authority.

A public servant's duty is not merely to protect an institution from criticism. It is to discharge public responsibilities lawfully, fairly and humanely.

3. The vehicle decision, my dog Crystal and the loss of independence

The decision concerning my vehicle is one of the central matters I want reviewed.

The vehicle was connected to my independence, mobility and practical ability to manage my life. I have also described the importance of my dog, Crystal, and the life we shared. I have explained that living in my car with Crystal was, in important respects, a period in which I felt happier and more independent than I have felt under subsequent arrangements.

That testimony should not be dismissed merely because it challenges an institutional assumption about what a suitable life should look like. My objection is not an argument that every previous circumstance was ideal. It is a demand that the actual consequences of the decision be examined rather than presumed away.

- Vehicle disposal decision, 14 November 2025
- NSW Trustee & Guardian section 122 document, 16 October 2024

I require a written explanation of the decision-making process, the alternatives considered, the evidence relied upon, the effect on my independence and the available review mechanisms. I also require clarification of how my wishes and the practical realities of my life were taken into account.

Do not reduce the loss of independence to a line item in a file. Explain what was considered, what was rejected and why.

4. Able Point, Rachel and transparent accountability

I have raised concerns about Able Point, its staff and the way my circumstances have been managed. I have also raised concerns about Rachel, whom I understand to be the organisation's chief executive, including my difficulty obtaining clear confirmation of her role and responsibility.

I want the organisation's relevant management and complaint structures identified in writing. If Rachel holds the role I understand her to hold, confirm that fact. If she does not, identify the appropriate executive or manager responsible for responding to my concerns.

I want the complaints process, the relevant decision-makers and the escalation pathway identified without ambiguity.

My concerns include the quality and appropriateness of support, my ability to exercise choice, the conduct of staff, the handling of my objections and the cumulative effect of the arrangements upon my independence and welfare.

I allege that I have experienced treatment that has left me feeling controlled, marginalised and deprived of meaningful agency. Those allegations deserve a response addressing the particular incidents, records and decisions involved.

I require the preservation and review of relevant case notes, incident reports, staff communications, service records, complaints, assessments and correspondence.

If the evidence does not support a particular allegation, explain that conclusion by reference to the evidence examined. If the evidence supports a concern, identify the action that will follow. Do not substitute silence for an answer.

5. NDIS funding, services delivered and the public interest

I want a transparent account of the services funded, the services recorded as delivered, the people responsible for delivering them and the safeguards applicable to my circumstances.

My concern is that public or support-related funding may have been associated with services that did not adequately protect my independence, dignity or welfare. I require this concern to be examined through the actual records, not accepted or rejected through assumption.

Please identify the relevant service agreements, support plans, invoices, service delivery records, incident reports, complaints and communications that can lawfully be provided to me.

I want to know what services were funded, what services were actually delivered, how their quality was assessed, what concerns were recorded and what action followed.

I have used the expression "blood money" to convey the moral outrage I feel when money is associated with arrangements that I believe have contributed to my suffering. I am not asking you to treat that expression as a financial classification or as proof of misconduct. I am asking you to understand the seriousness of the underlying concern: public funding must serve the person for whose support it is provided, and the records must permit meaningful scrutiny of whether that occurred.

If public money was properly spent, the documentation should explain how. If services were inadequate, the records should help establish what went wrong. If a complaint was mishandled, the response should identify how it will be corrected.

The National Disability Insurance Scheme Act 2013(Cth) governs NDIS funding and participant safeguards. Where a matter concerns NDIS service delivery, funding, provider conduct or plan decisions, identify the precise referral pathway, including the NDIS Quality and Safeguards Commission.

6. Sukhi Tear, Diversitas and the record of support

I also require attention to my dealings with Sukhi Tear, whom I identify as a former support coordinator associated with Diversitas in Western Australia.

The relevant contact addresses I have used are:

- sukhi@diversitaswa.com
- sukhi@diversitaswa.org.au

I have described serious concerns about the support I received, including episodes in which I report being missing or unable to account for my circumstances while under her care. I have also stated that I sent a cease-and-desist communication.

I require the relevant records to be preserved and made available through the appropriate process, including case notes, contact logs, incident reports, welfare checks, communications, service records and any documentation relating to my complaints.
I want the chronology established from the records: what was reported, when it was reported, who knew, what action was taken and what was recorded afterwards.
I do not want speculation substituted for records. I want the available evidence examined carefully, and I want any identified gaps explained.

7. Scott Treadwell correspondence and the three identified matters

I specifically refer to the correspondence attributed to Scott Treadwell concerning matters associated with the Federal Court.
Scott Treadwell correspondence, 8 January 2024
I ask that this letter be read in full and addressed on its actual contents.
In my understanding, that correspondence identified three matters arising from my legitimate whistleblower disclosure:

1. Maladministration — conduct or decision-making within public administration that was improper, unreasonable, unjust, oppressive or improperly discriminatory.
2. Conspiracy — a concern that persons or bodies may have acted in coordination in a way adverse to my interests.
3. Conduct that would harm a person — conduct capable of causing detriment, hardship, distress or harm to me.

I allege that, having acknowledged or engaged with these three matters, Mr Treadwell nevertheless declined to provide the protection or effective remedy I sought in the same correspondence.
I require NSW Trustee & Guardian to:

- Confirm receipt and accessibility of the letter.
- Identify each passage it considers relevant.
- State whether maladministration, conspiracy and harmful conduct were considered.
- Explain what action was taken or recommended.
- Identify who made that decision.
- State what information was available at the time.
- Explain why no protective or corrective action followed, if that is the position.

I do not ask you to accept a criminal allegation merely because I make it. I insist that the underlying documents be read, their significance assessed honestly, and any substantiated failure addressed. If you dispute my interpretation, provide your reasons and identify the evidence on which you rely.

8. Serious allegations and the duty to preserve evidence

I have made serious allegations concerning political figures, government agencies and other parties. These include my belief that I have been targeted and that events in my life may involve conduct extending beyond ordinary administrative failure.
I have referred to Bill Shorten, an apprehended violence order, my relocation to New South Wales, communications I say I sent to the Australian Federal Police, and my belief that government or security agencies may have had relevant information.

I recognise that these are serious matters. I am placing them on the record as my allegations and recollections, not asking you to treat them as established findings merely because I state them. I require relevant documentary material in your possession to be preserved and any matters falling outside your authority to be referred through an appropriate, identifiable process.

I want the actual records considered, including relevant correspondence, dates, referrals, responses and documented decisions. I also want a clear explanation of which matters NSW Trustee & Guardian can address and which must be directed to another agency.

The seriousness of an allegation is a reason to handle the evidence carefully, not a reason to replace it with silence, ridicule or an unsupported conclusion.

9. The 123 official records associated with Barran Dodger

I have raised concerns about 123 official records associated with the name Barran Dodger and the wider documentary history preserved in my archive.

Business name extract

I want the relevant records identified and itemised, with the source, date, subject and significance of each record made clear where that information is available.

If a record is held by another organisation, identify the organisation and the proper access or complaint pathway. If a record is unavailable, explain what searches were conducted and what the outcome was.

The point of preserving records is to make the documentary trail more intelligible, not to create another maze in which responsibility disappears.

10. Whistleblower detriment, government correspondence and the documentary trail

My archive contains correspondence and records relating to my attempts to raise concerns with public bodies and obtain meaningful responses. I believe this history warrants examination as a whole rather than as a collection of unrelated administrative exchanges.

- Federal Court-related public-interest disclosure assessment
- Commonwealth Ombudsman complaint
- OPMC/OAIC-related record
- The Documentary Trap: When the System's Own Record Becomes the Evidence

These documents should be read for what they actually say, including their dates, authors, scope and limitations. My interpretation is that the broader record raises serious questions about institutional responses, the handling of my concerns and the consequences I have experienced.

I want those questions answered through documentary examination rather than the assumption that a referral, a rejection or an administrative closure necessarily resolves the underlying issue.

I require the preservation of records relevant to my dealings with NSW Trustee & Guardian, including correspondence, case notes, internal decision records, financial assessments, complaints and communications with service providers, subject to applicable access, privacy and retention requirements.

11. My academic and forensic writings

My documentary archive is not simply a collection of complaints. It is also an attempt to examine the mechanisms by which an individual's social standing, credibility, independence and ability to obtain assistance may deteriorate through cumulative institutional interactions. My academic and forensic writings address administrative annihilation, social erasure, social death, institutional mobbing, group mobbing and the psychology of erasure. They are indexed in my public repository and should be read as my research and analysis, with their arguments assessed on their content and supporting material.

- Barran Dodger documentary archive and writings index
- Main repository

I ask that these writings be considered alongside the specific records relevant to your responsibilities. I do not expect you to adopt every interpretation I advance. I expect you to engage with the material seriously, distinguish the documented facts from the analysis, and respond to any specific issue that falls within your authority.

If a link is inaccessible, please identify it rather than treating its contents as though they had been examined.

12. Financial hardship and the reduction of my allowance

My financial position requires urgent, transparent review.

The figures I have previously provided are:

- Pension income: $1,371.27 per fortnight.
- Listed outgoings: $1,369.96 per fortnight.
- Apparent remaining amount: $1.31 per fortnight.

I have also raised concerns about an allowance reduction of $50 per week and about having approximately $363 available before my next pension payment at the time described in my correspondence.

These figures must be checked against the current financial records, but the underlying issue is unmistakable: a budget that leaves virtually no margin for food, transport, communication, personal necessities or unexpected expenses is not a workable response to genuine hardship.

I require an itemised explanation of the allowance decision, including the amount before and after the reduction, the date it took effect, the reasons, the evidence considered, the person responsible and the review process available.

I also request an urgent assessment of whether emergency assistance or a temporary adjustment can be considered for essential expenses, including food, telephone access, electricity and other necessary costs, subject to the applicable rules and my financial circumstances.

If assistance is refused, I want the decision and reasons in writing. If additional evidence is required, identify precisely what is required and how I can provide it.

Do not tell me that the budget balances if the practical result is that I cannot meet ordinary necessities. A spreadsheet can be arithmetically correct while still failing to reflect the realities of human life.

12A. Today's payment, financial coercion and restricted access to my own money

On 22 October 2026, I was required to pay $80 of a $100 payment to a network I believe has exploited me. I would not have been placed in circumstances involving people or arrangements I regard as exploitative if I had sufficient financial security, prosperity and genuine independence to survive.

This is directly relevant to the financial hardship already described in this letter. When my available funds are reduced to almost nothing, my ability to refuse unsafe, exploitative or coercive circumstances is also reduced. Financial deprivation should not be treated as separate from my welfare, safety, autonomy and protection from exploitation.

I further allege that Philip Glass, acting in connection with the Public Guardian or NSW Trustee & Guardian, has blocked my access to my Commonwealth Bank account through both the bank's website and the mobile application on my phone.

I regard this as an unjustified and disproportionate interference with my privacy, autonomy, dignity and ability to access and manage my own money.

I require an immediate written explanation of:

- The precise legal or administrative authority relied upon.
- The date the restriction was imposed.
- The person who made or authorised the decision.
- The reasons recorded at the time.
- Whether my views, welfare and interests were considered.
- How the restriction is consistent with section 39 of the NSW Trustee and Guardian Act 2009 (NSW), particularly the principles concerning restricting freedom of action as little as possible and encouraging self-reliance in financial affairs.
- How I can access emergency funds, if any restriction remains in place.
- The internal and external review pathways available.

Additional matters for the record

Important distinction: The following matters are placed on the record as my account, allegations, recollections and published material. I do not ask that they be accepted as established facts without independent examination. I ask that relevant records be preserved, assessed where within your authority, and referred to the appropriate body where they are not.

A. Prophetic video and statement of faith

I refer to a YouTube video published today, which I understand to concern my circumstances and which I regard as affirming my faith that justice and truth ultimately prevail.

https://youtu.be/IVgBcLeKVMI

I state my personal belief that God has sustained me, that I am not alone, and that no person or institution ultimately prevails against the Most High God. When people choose to fight me, I believe they are ultimately contending with the God in whom I trust.

This is my faith testimony and moral framework. It is not presented as legal evidence, but it explains why I continue to seek accountability rather than accept silence or erasure.

B. AGIS refusal to investigate ASIO

I refer to a telephone call with the Attorney-General's Department / Australian Government Solicitor-related intake or complaints function, in which I understood that my request for investigation of matters involving ASIO was refused or not accepted for investigation.
https://youtu.be/KtfjNDo0_gI
The significance of this matter, as I experience it, is that I have repeatedly sought an identifiable, independent process for serious allegations affecting my safety, privacy and welfare, but have been unable to obtain a clear acknowledgement, investigation pathway or substantive response.
I ask that any relevant records of my contact with AGIS, the Attorney-General's Department, ASIO, the Inspector-General of Intelligence and Security (IGIS) or other oversight bodies be preserved and identified.
If NSW Trustee & Guardian cannot investigate this matter, I request written identification of the correct external body, the basis for that conclusion, and confirmation of any referral made.

C. Engagement ring and former relationship

I refer to evidence concerning my former engagement and my decision to give my engagement ring to my former fiancé, whom I allege exploited me over approximately five years.
https://youtu.be/FdSyOcpULUo
The significance of this matter is not merely the ring itself. It concerns my account that a significant personal relationship has been denied, minimised or omitted from records and institutional narratives, despite material consequences for my finances, housing history, emotional welfare and credibility.
I ask that any records concerning this relationship, my former partner, financial arrangements, property, communications and related complaints be preserved and assessed through the appropriate process.
I do not ask NSW Trustee & Guardian to determine private relationship disputes. I ask that my account be recorded accurately and that any relevant documentary material within its possession or lawful reach be identified.

D. National Anti-Corruption Commission complaint

I refer to my attempt to make a complaint to the National Anti-Corruption Commission (NACC) and my concern that I have not received an official acknowledgement or a clear indication that the complaint has been received and assessed.
https://youtu.be/7N5bJZFieL0
I regard the absence of an acknowledgement as a serious procedural and accountability concern. A complaint body should be able to confirm receipt, identify the reference number where one exists, state whether the matter falls within jurisdiction, and explain the next step or reason for refusal.
I request that NSW Trustee & Guardian:

- Preserve any correspondence or records concerning my NACC complaint.
- Identify whether it made any referral to the NACC or another integrity body.

- Confirm the correct current NACC complaint or referral pathway.
- Identify any other appropriate federal or NSW integrity body for the matters I have raised.

E. Tony Ridley allegation

I refer to a video in which I discuss my account of events involving Tony Ridley, including drug use, sexual contact, and statements I understood him to make concerning corruption and my being "erased."

https://youtu.be/RpfeHl-3gEM

I place this on the record as my allegation, recollection and published account. I do not ask that it be treated as established fact without independent examination. I ask that the video, related communications, dates, locations, witnesses, police reports, medical records and any associated agency records be preserved and assessed through an appropriate process.

If this matter falls outside NSW Trustee & Guardian's authority, I request written identification of the appropriate body—such as NSW Police, the NSW Ombudsman, the NDIS Quality and Safeguards Commission, the Office of the Australian Information Commissioner, or another relevant agency—and confirmation of any referral.

13. Health, support and the consequences of prolonged distress

I have described substantial distress and difficulties obtaining support appropriate to my needs, including access to ADHD treatment and the consequences of prolonged instability.

I have also reported experiences that I have described as electronic harassment, V2K and interference involving television or Wi-Fi. I want my testimony recorded accurately, without my reported experiences being silently rewritten or dismissed. At the same time, the explanation for any particular experience must be distinguished from the experience itself and assessed against available evidence.

My immediate concern is access to appropriate support, a safe and stable living situation, clear communication and a practical plan that reduces distress rather than intensifying it.

I have disclosed that, during periods of difficulty, I have resorted to street drugs while struggling to obtain the support I believe I need. That is a serious indication that my current circumstances require practical attention, not moral condemnation or bureaucratic indifference.

I request that the appropriate support needs be assessed and that I be told what services, referrals and options are available. Any concerns about my welfare should be addressed respectfully, with my participation wherever possible.

14. My survival, social erasure and your personal accountability

Philip, I am not suicidal. I want that statement understood clearly and recorded accurately.

I have survived circumstances that I believe should never have been imposed upon any human being. I have survived without the meaningful government assistance I believe I needed, and despite what I allege has been a sustained pattern of institutional obstruction and actions that undermined my ability to live independently.

My survival is not evidence that the circumstances were acceptable. It is evidence that I endured them.

My God does not harm me. His grace protects me. His favour is upon my life.

I know this because humanity betrayed me, and I survived—not because I received the help I needed, but in spite of what I allege was a sustained pattern of targeting, obstruction and detriment by people and institutions that were supposed to support me.

I have survived in spite of being failed by people like you: people paid to support me, protect my interests and help me maintain my independence, yet whose decisions and conduct I believe have contributed to the opposite outcome.

And then the harm is dressed up in polite bureaucratic language, references to policy, procedural explanations and carefully worded correspondence that avoids confronting the human consequences.

I have a policy too. I do not give you permission to harm me, cause me detriment, undermine my independence and then pretend nothing has happened.

I do not accept that you can ignore my testimony, refuse to engage with the evidence I have published, retreat into the privilege of your public office and expect the existence of policies and procedures to absolve you of personal responsibility.

Your position does not give you ownership of my life. Your authority does not extinguish my rights. Your salary does not purchase my silence.

I believe that public money must be used to serve the public interest, not to sustain arrangements that leave a vulnerable person feeling harmed, abandoned or deprived of independence. I regard the possibility that public resources may have been used in ways that contributed to my detriment as a matter requiring serious examination.

I challenge you to prove me wrong by producing the records, explaining your decisions and demonstrating how your actions have protected my welfare, respected my wishes and promoted my independence.

If the evidence supports your decisions, show me the evidence. If the records contradict my account, identify them and explain why. If mistakes were made, acknowledge them. If my concerns were ignored, explain why.

That is what accountability looks like.

I believe that conduct which harms a person while concealing the consequences behind administrative language can be profoundly unethical and deceitful. Depending on the evidence and the applicable law, particular conduct may also warrant investigation for corruption, abuse of authority or criminal wrongdoing.

I require those questions to be examined on the evidence rather than hidden behind procedural language.

I have a policy of my own: I will stand against corruption, regardless of the risk of personal detriment.

I have been forced into that position because, as I experience it, I have been progressively erased by people and institutions that were supposed to care for me. I have had to become the archivist of my own suffering, preserve the documentary trail, reconstruct the chronology and demand answers that should not have required years of struggle to obtain.

My faith has sustained me through that struggle. I do not believe God abandoned me. I believe His grace has protected me and that my survival has given me the strength to continue speaking, documenting and challenging what I believe to be wrong.

I am still here. I am still thinking. I am still writing. I am still demanding accountability.
And I will not confuse survival with consent.

Now you have a choice

Philip, you now have a choice.
This letter has been prepared as a documentary record of my objections, allegations, requests and demands. My archive is public, and I have provided links to the underlying material so that the matters I raise can be examined rather than reduced to an unsupported summary of my position.
You cannot reasonably expect anonymity or institutional distance to substitute for an explanation of decisions for which you are personally responsible. Nor should the privileges and protections associated with public employment be mistaken for immunity from scrutiny.
I am asking you to use your integrity and intelligence to examine the record independently, including where doing so may require questioning decisions, assumptions or conduct within the system you serve.
I believe you have a responsibility to distinguish between defending an institution and doing what is right. Those are not necessarily the same thing.
I allege that institutional responses have contributed to my detriment. I further believe that some of the explanations offered for those responses have failed to confront the documentary evidence and the consequences for my life.
I cannot know what you privately believe, and I will not pretend to read your mind. I can, however, demand that you explain your own decisions, identify the evidence on which you rely and demonstrate that your professional judgment has not simply defaulted to accepting the position most convenient for the institution.
If you believe the government and the relevant institutions have acted properly, explain why.
If you believe my interpretation is wrong, address the specific facts and records that you say contradict it. If you have identified errors, explain what you have done to correct them.
What I will not accept is silence presented as an answer, institutional loyalty presented as independent judgment, or administrative privilege presented as a substitute for integrity.
I believe that a person who has spent decades challenging injustice should not be expected to abandon that responsibility merely because the institutions being challenged have greater financial resources, professional influence or administrative power.
I have taken personal risks in pursuing the matters I believe require accountability. I have preserved my correspondence, published my testimony and made my documentary archive available for examination. I have done so because I believe the public interest requires a record that can be scrutinised.
I invite you to demonstrate, through your actions and the documentary evidence, that you have not abandoned the responsibilities entrusted to you.

The government harms me, and I allege that your decisions have harmed me

I want this stated plainly.

I believe the government has harmed me, and I allege that decisions and actions within the system you serve have contributed to that harm.

I have repeatedly sought meaningful responses to my concerns. I have asked for explanations of decisions affecting my accommodation, finances, vehicle, support arrangements and independence. I have preserved documents that I believe are relevant. Yet I continue to seek answers to fundamental questions about the authority exercised over my life and the evidence used to justify it.

I have also experienced what I regard as a refusal to engage meaningfully with me and with the facts I have published. I want to know why.

Where are the facts on which you rely to justify the decisions I challenge?

What records support those decisions? What evidence was considered? What alternatives were examined? Which person made each decision? What reasons were documented at the time? What process was available to challenge the outcome?

If there are allegations or adverse information about me that materially influenced a decision within your authority, I ask you to identify that information to the extent permitted by law, explain its relevance, and give me a fair opportunity to respond where procedural fairness requires it.

I am not asking for rumours to be repeated as though they were evidence. I am asking for the actual material relied upon, the decisions made because of it and the reasons those decisions were considered justified.

I have previously stated that I asked to be arrested in connection with allegations I understood had been made against me, including allegations described to me as slander. No one came to arrest me. I was not arrested, charged or subjected to a criminal process in response to that request.

I do not claim that the absence of an arrest or charge, by itself, proves that every allegation against me is false. But neither should untested allegations, rumours or assumptions be treated as established facts merely because they are repeated or accepted by someone in a position of authority.

If an allegation has influenced how I have been treated, I want to know what it was, what evidence supported it, whether it was verified, who relied upon it and whether I was given a fair opportunity to answer it.

I reject any suggestion that my willingness to challenge public institutions, preserve evidence or speak forcefully about my experiences is itself a sufficient reason to discount my testimony or restrict my independence.

I have earned the right to have my words read on their merits. My academic work, creative contributions, advocacy and documentary record are part of my life. They do not make me infallible, but neither do the difficulties I have experienced entitle anyone to disregard me.

I will not accept an arrangement in which unsubstantiated assumptions about me carry more weight than the documentary record, while the people making decisions remain unwilling to explain their reasoning.

If you believe my allegations are mistaken, then engage with them. If the evidence contradicts my account, show me the relevant evidence. If your decisions were lawful, reasonable and consistent with your responsibilities, explain the basis for them.

That is the challenge I place before you.
I invite you to prove me wrong—not through silence, not through another formulaic paragraph, and not by referring me endlessly to another department, but through a substantive response grounded in records, reasons and accountable decision-making.
Your professional integrity is demonstrated not by your capacity to defend the system automatically, but by your willingness to examine whether the system has acted properly when its conduct is challenged.
I believe I have been failed by people and institutions from which I was entitled to expect assistance. I have been left fighting for financial security, accommodation, access to support and the ability to live with dignity.
I refuse to accept that this is an inevitable or acceptable outcome.
I have a choice too. I can continue to preserve the evidence, speak about my experience, pursue the available review mechanisms and insist that those exercising authority over my life explain themselves.
That is what I intend to do.
My faith does not teach me to submit to injustice in silence. It gives me the strength to confront it without surrendering my humanity.
I believe God's grace has sustained me through circumstances that I regard as betrayal. I believe truth deserves to be brought into the light. And I believe that those entrusted with public responsibilities should be willing to account for what they have done, what they have failed to do and what they are prepared to do now.
You now have the opportunity to answer the evidence, explain your decisions and demonstrate that your integrity remains independent of institutional self-protection.
I expect you to take that opportunity seriously.

Alleged breaches of policy and governing principles

I allege that the decisions and conduct described in this letter breach, or may breach, the following principles and policies:

- Section 39, NSW Trustee and Guardian Act 2009 (NSW): potential failure to give proper consideration to my welfare and interests, freedom of action, views, self-reliance and protection from neglect, abuse or exploitation.
- Guardianship Act 1987 (NSW): potential failure to give proper effect to my views and preferences in relevant substitute decision-making.
- NSW Trustee & Guardian complaint-handling policy: concerns about escalation, timely investigation, meaningful reasons and effective remedies.
- Administrative Decisions Review Act 1997 (NSW): concerns about applicable review rights, reasons and procedural fairness.
- CRPD, articles 12, 13, 19 and 22: legal capacity, access to justice, independent living, community inclusion and privacy.
- ICESCR, articles 9 and 11: social security and an adequate standard of living.
- ICCPR, articles 2, 7, 17 and 26: effective remedies, protection against prohibited treatment, privacy and equality before the law.

I allege that these matters were not mere bureaucratic oversight. I believe they may reflect a serious disregard of my statutory rights, welfare and expressed wishes. I require these allegations to be investigated against the records, not dismissed as rhetoric.

Where the evidence establishes conduct warranting external investigation, I require NSW Trustee & Guardian to identify the appropriate referral body and explain the available referral process. Depending on the subject matter and jurisdiction, relevant bodies may include the NSW Ombudsman, the Independent Commission Against Corruption, NSW Police, the NDIS Quality and Safeguards Commission, the Office of the Australian Information Commissioner and the Commonwealth Ombudsman.

15. Faith, conscience and the moral limits of human power

There is another dimension to this matter that cannot be reduced to a financial assessment or a case-management plan: my faith.

I have survived circumstances that I understand through the language of betrayal, suffering, preservation and grace. In my own Christian understanding, I have risen, like a new Christ from the ashes of human betrayal. That is my personal spiritual testimony: an expression of survival, renewal and the conviction that suffering will not have the final word.

I believe that truth does not need permission to exist, while falsehood requires continual maintenance. I believe that a person's dignity does not depend on the approval of a government department, a trustee, a service provider or a public official.

My God does not harm me. His grace protects me. His favour is upon my life.

I also believe that ultimate authority over life belongs to God. No individual, government institution, police service, non-government organisation, trustee or other body has an unlimited moral licence to damage another person, strip away their dignity or treat their continued existence as an administrative inconvenience.

Human authority has limits. A public office does not confer ownership over another human being. Responsibility for managing another person's affairs does not extinguish that person's humanity, autonomy, conscience or right to be heard.

I am asking for a reckoning in the moral sense: a serious accounting of decisions, actions, omissions and consequences. In my faith, no comfortable title, institutional reputation or carefully maintained public image can substitute for truth, conscience or accountability before God.

I am not asking you to pronounce a theological judgment. I am telling you the moral framework through which I understand my life and the responsibilities of those who exercise power over it.

If people have made mistakes, those mistakes should be acknowledged and corrected. If decisions have caused avoidable harm, that harm should be examined and addressed. If an institution has failed to listen, it should reconsider its response. If records reveal a different account, those records should be identified and explained.

That is what accountability requires.

16. The contradiction of political exile within my own democracy

You may regard these matters as separate administrative problems. I experience them as part of a much larger contradiction.

I have given this democracy my art, my illustration, my writing, my music, my advocacy, my scholarship and decades of my life. I contributed in good faith because I believed that creative work, public communication, independent thought and compassion for vulnerable people had a place in the democratic project.

I now find myself describing my circumstances as political exile within my own citizenship: a citizen seeking safety, independence and recognition in the country to which he belongs. That is an absurd and profound injustice as I experience it.

I allege that the cumulative treatment I have experienced has marginalised me, damaged my independence and left me fighting for basic security. I believe that institutional responses have contributed to this outcome. I want the underlying decisions and records examined rather than having my concerns dismissed merely because the overall pattern is complicated or because responsibility is distributed across different organisations.

I have contributed to this society. I have not forfeited my dignity because I have become difficult to accommodate administratively, because I have challenged decisions, or because I insist upon preserving a record of my experience.

I will not accept the idea that my contributions can be taken, my independence restricted and my testimony buried without a meaningful explanation.

Annex A — My writings on administrative annihilation, social erasure and social death

The following writings form part of the analytical and documentary context for this objection. They are my own research, testimony and forensic analysis. I do not ask you to accept every interpretation as an established finding. I ask that they be read alongside the specific records, decisions and chronology relevant to NSW Trustee & Guardian's responsibilities.

- Barran Dodger documentary archive and writings index
- Main repository

The relevant subjects include:

- Administrative annihilation
- Social erasure
- Social death
- Institutional mobbing
- Group mobbing
- The psychology of erasure
- Coordinated institutional targeting and whistleblower detriment

I ask that the index be accessed directly and that the individual articles be identified from it. If any linked article is inaccessible, I require the inaccessible address to be identified rather than treated as though its contents had been examined.

These writings are my analytical framework and personal testimony. They are not court findings, and I do not ask that every interpretation be accepted as established fact. I ask that they be considered alongside the underlying official records, decisions and chronology relevant to NSW Trustee & Guardian's authority.

Request arising from this annex

I require written confirmation that:

1. The repository index has been received and accessed.
2. The individual writings on administrative annihilation, social erasure, social death, institutional mobbing, group mobbing and the psychology of erasure have been identified from the index.
3. Those writings have been considered in relation to the specific decisions within your authority.
4. The distinction between my analytical framework and the underlying documentary evidence has been preserved in any internal assessment.
5. Any conclusion that rejects my analysis identifies the records examined, the reasons for rejection and the decision-maker responsible.

17. Formal demands for action

I require a substantive written response addressing the following matters:

1. Accommodation: Provide copies of the agreements, consent records and decisions governing my current accommodation, and explain the available process for leaving and considering alternatives.
2. Responsible decision-makers: Identify the people responsible for the relevant accommodation, financial and support decisions, including the scope of your own role.
3. Vehicle decision: Provide the decision records, reasons, alternatives considered and available review pathways concerning the disposal of my vehicle.
4. Able Point complaint: Confirm the appropriate management contact and complaint pathway, and explain how my concerns about treatment, independence and service delivery will be examined.
5. Service and funding records: Identify the relevant service agreements, support records, invoices, case notes and incident records that can lawfully be provided to me.
6. Sukhi Tear and Diversitas: Identify the appropriate process for obtaining and reviewing the relevant support and incident records.
7. Scott Treadwell letter: Address the three identified matters—maladministration, conspiracy and conduct capable of causing harm—and explain what action was or was not taken.
8. Financial hardship: Provide an itemised explanation of the allowance reduction, review my current budget and explain whether emergency assistance or other adjustments can be considered.
9. Bank access restriction: Immediately explain the legal and administrative basis for any restriction on my access to my Commonwealth Bank account through internet banking or the mobile app; identify the decision-maker, date, reasons, evidence and review pathway; and state whether emergency access to funds is available.
10. Exploitative payment: Examine the circumstances of the $80 payment made on 22 October 2026, including whether my financial hardship, restricted independence or support arrangements contributed to my exposure to exploitation; preserve all relevant records.
11. Legal assistance: Explain what assistance, referrals or review options are available to help me obtain advice about matters affecting my rights and independence.
12. Record preservation: Preserve relevant case notes, correspondence, financial records, internal decisions and communications with service providers, subject to applicable law and retention requirements.

13. Documentary archive: Confirm that the links and documents provided with this letter have been received and identify any that cannot be accessed.
14. Annex A writings: Confirm receipt and accessibility of the repository index; identify the individual writings on administrative annihilation, social erasure, social death, institutional mobbing, group mobbing and the psychology of erasure; explain whether they have been considered in relation to the decisions within your authority; and identify any inaccessible links.
15. Referrals: Where an issue falls outside your authority, identify the appropriate organisation, explain the basis for the referral and, where permitted, advise what information has been sent and what response is expected.
16. Complaint and review rights: Identify the internal review, complaint and external oversight mechanisms available for each relevant decision.
17. Cumulative impact: Explain how my circumstances will be considered as a whole rather than as disconnected administrative matters.
18. Written timetable: Provide a named contact, confirm receipt of this letter and state when I can expect a substantive response to each issue.
19. AGIS/ASIO referral: Confirm whether my AGIS contact and ASIO-related allegations were recorded, identify the correct oversight body, and state whether any referral was made.
20. Former relationship and engagement ring:Preserve and identify any records relevant to my former engagement, former partner, related financial arrangements and complaints; confirm how my account has been recorded.
21. NACC complaint: Confirm whether NSW Trustee & Guardian has records of my NACC complaint, whether it referred any matter to the NACC, and identify the correct complaint/referral pathway and expected acknowledgement process.
22. Tony Ridley allegation: Preserve the video, related records and any relevant agency material; identify the appropriate external investigation or complaint pathway.
23. Video evidence: Confirm receipt and accessibility of each YouTube link in this letter; identify any link that cannot be accessed rather than treating its contents as examined.

If any request cannot be met, identify the reason, the relevant limitation and any alternative means by which the information or review can be obtained.

I am not demanding that you accept every allegation without examination. I am demanding that you stop treating the existence of allegations as a reason to avoid the work of examining them.

18. The final word: truth, accountability and the record

Philip, this letter is an objection to more than a single decision. It is an objection to the possibility that an individual's life can be fragmented into administrative categories until no one feels responsible for the whole person.

I refuse to accept that outcome as inevitable.

I have spent years preserving documents, reconstructing timelines, examining correspondence and creating an archive because I believe that records matter. I have sought to turn an overwhelming personal history into something that can be read, checked, questioned and understood. My archive is an attempt to preserve my testimony and the documentary trail surrounding it. It is not a court judgment, and I do not present every interpretation as an established finding. It is a record that deserves to be examined on its contents.

I ask you to consider the human being behind that record: a person who has contributed through art, writing, music, advocacy and scholarship; a person who has experienced profound distress and financial hardship; a person who wants independence, a safe place to live and a meaningful response to the issues raised; and a person whose faith has helped sustain him through circumstances he regards as betrayal.

I will not be silenced by the assumption that a public institution is entitled to the last word simply because it controls the file. I will not confuse institutional power with moral authority. And I will not accept administrative indifference as an adequate answer to human suffering.

I have a policy too. I do not give you permission to harm me, cause my detriment and then pretend that your actions are justified simply because they can be described in bureaucratic language.

I believe that public money should support human welfare, not insulate public institutions from accountability. I believe that a person entrusted with responsibility for another person's affairs has an obligation to explain how that responsibility has been exercised.

I invite you to prove me wrong. Examine the evidence. Explain your decisions. Identify the records. Correct any errors. Address any substantiated failures. Demonstrate through your actions that your responsibilities mean something more than compliance with a process.

In my Christian understanding, there is a reckoning greater than any internal review, management meeting or government response. I believe that every person is ultimately accountable for how they exercise power, how they treat the vulnerable and whether they choose truth over self-protection.

That is the divine reckoning to which I refer—not a threat against any individual, but a statement of conscience and faith.

My God does not harm me. His grace protects me. His favour is upon my life.

I survived humanity's betrayal as I understand and have experienced it. I survived without the assistance I believe I needed, and in spite of the circumstances I have repeatedly challenged. My survival does not excuse anyone from examining those circumstances. It does not turn deprivation into care, silence into an answer or institutional power into moral authority.

I am still here. I am still speaking. I am still preserving the record.

I have given this democracy my creativity, my intellect, my labour and decades of my life. I did so in good faith. I now ask whether its institutions are prepared to extend to me the dignity, fairness, transparency and humanity that their public responsibilities demand.

My life is not your spreadsheet.

My freedom is not yours to allocate without lawful authority and proper consideration of my rights.

My dignity is not yours to diminish.

My humanity is not an administrative inconvenience.

My faith is not surrender.

My survival is my testimony, and my testimony will remain on the record.
You now have a choice.
You can answer the questions, examine the documents, explain the decisions and demonstrate that you are prepared to act with integrity even when doing so requires scrutiny of the system in which you work.
Or you can decline to engage substantively. If that happens, I will preserve the correspondence and the response, or absence of a response, as part of the documentary history of my attempts to obtain accountability.
I will not claim to know your private motives. I will judge your response by what it says, what evidence it identifies, what questions it answers and what action follows.
I expect written confirmation of receipt and a substantive response addressing the numbered demands above.
Yours sincerely,
