My response to social erasure and your humiliation for being paid to murder a vulnerable person in your care

a

Philip,

I'm not suicidal I shouldn't have survived what this government put me through and I've survived it without the Government's help in fact not only without their help but in spite of them deliberately targeting and sabotaging my life that is why God's hand is on my life by the government will fail and God will win and I will win.

You're now implicated in a proven conspiracy of pervert court just cause of Justice mal Administration and conduct that will cause a sperson harm and this is verified by Scott Treadwell's letter of 2023 from federal court in which he confirmed this was happening to me.

You've been called out and everyone knows Phillip Glass - everyone knows who you are and you're deceitful lying way in which you financially benefited from coordinating and attack as a key gate holder in which caused me harm you well knew that I could die of neglect abuse, poverty, surveillance torture and entrapment and you would've washed your hands of the blood when I was dead and now everybody knows who you are and your role.

It is called social erasure where a human being is devoid of his humanity and his ideas and his concepts and his rights and everything about him in the attributes necessary to exist within the society and democracy with in which you need MONEY to participate and you are the key gate holder of the Government the Lynch Pin the key person who is sustained this attack. You are the Lynch point the Connect point that he is holding back the entire Criminal murders Network and now everyone knows your name Phillip.

I am putting this in writing because I am sick of the polite bureaucratic emails, the policy explanations, the financial calculations and the institutional indifference that are destroying my life while everyone involved pretends they are simply doing their job.

I have had enough of being passed between organisations, having my circumstances reduced to budget lines, and being expected to accept decisions that affect my freedom, my safety, my identity and my future without meaningful answers or accountability.

I have not signed a lease here. Not a single signature. I do not consent to remaining here. I want to leave.

I want that statement recorded clearly and without reinterpretation. I want a copy of every document, agreement, authority or record that NSW Trustee and Guardian or Able Point claims permits this arrangement to continue. If you contend that I am bound by an agreement, show me the actual document and identify precisely what you rely upon. Do not substitute an administrative assumption for my own stated wishes.

I am a human being, not an account balance to be managed, a problem to be contained, or a person whose freedom can be reduced to a spreadsheet.

Philip, you took my car. You took my independence.

I lived in that car with my dog, Crystal. I was happier than I had ever been in my life. I had a degree of independence, a place with my dog, and a life that felt like my own.

Now I am dependent on systems that I believe have contributed to the loss of my independence, my financial security and my ability to determine where I live.

I hold the government and the relevant decision-makers responsible for the circumstances in which I lost my car and the freedom it represented. I want the records, the decisions, the legal authority and the people responsible identified. I want an explanation of what happened, who authorised it, what alternatives were considered and what remedy is available.

Do not tell me that these are simply administrative arrangements. They have consequences for my entire life.

I believe that my present circumstances amount to coercive entrapment and institutional mobbing: a situation in which financial dependence, accommodation arrangements, barriers to assistance and the handling of my whistleblower concerns have combined to leave me feeling contained rather than supported.

I am demanding that these concerns be examined seriously, not dismissed through another standard response.

Rachel, CEO of Able Point — formal complaint and demand for identification

I want a formal complaint recorded concerning Rachel, whom I understand to be the CEO of Able Point.

I have raised the issue of her refusal to provide identification confirming her identity and authority to represent the organisation as its CEO. I want a clear explanation of why that identification has not been provided, what position she holds, what authority she exercises over decisions affecting me, and who is accountable for the organisation's conduct toward me.

When an organisation exercises influence over a person's accommodation, daily circumstances and access to support, it is entirely reasonable to expect transparency about the identity and authority of the people making or communicating decisions.

I am not prepared to accept anonymity, evasion or an appeal to organisational authority without accountability.

I regard this refusal as a serious matter. I suspect that the conduct may involve misrepresentation, and I want it investigated for any potential fraud, misleading representation, collusion or conspiracy that the evidence may support.

I am not asking you to prejudge the outcome. I am asking you to stop treating the question as though it does not matter.

I want this complaint formally recorded and referred to the appropriate independent complaints or oversight body. Please identify the body to which it is referred, the date of referral, the reference number and the person responsible for following it up. If you refuse to refer it, explain that refusal in writing and identify the process available to me to make the complaint directly.

Rachel and Able Point should not be beyond scrutiny simply because they operate within a service arrangement involving a person who is financially dependent on others.

Suki TMI, my support coordinator in Perth — formal cease-and-desist notice and missing-person history

I have also sent a legal cease-and-desist notice to Suki TMI, my support coordinator, who is based in Perth.

This is not an incidental detail. I am raising serious concerns about the support I received and the circumstances in which I was repeatedly reported or recorded as a missing person while under her care.

Being repeatedly a missing person while supposedly receiving support is not, in my view, an acceptable substitute for care, protection or accountability.

I want the records examined. I want the dates and circumstances of each missing-person episode established, the relevant incident reports identified, and the communications between the people and organisations responsible for my support preserved. I want to know what action was taken, what risks were identified, who was notified, and what records exist concerning the support and safeguarding arrangements in place at the time.

I have sent the cease-and-desist notice because I believe the conduct and circumstances warrant a formal boundary and a documented response. I want the notice and the issues it raises treated seriously.

I regard the pattern of events as deeply disturbing. I believe that, taken together with the wider circumstances of my life, these events corroborate my concerns about coordinated detriment and the destruction of my independence. I want the underlying records tested against my testimony, rather than my concerns being dismissed without examining the evidence.

If the records do not support a particular interpretation, that can be established by examining them. But they must first be identified, preserved and examined.

I want a written account of what NSW Trustee and Guardian knows about these matters, what records it holds, what action it has taken, and what independent complaint or safeguarding process is available.

My allegations concerning Bill Shorten, the NDIS and the circumstances of my exile

I need to make the seriousness of my testimony unmistakably clear.

I have alleged that Bill Shorten, whom I identify in my account as the federal minister responsible for the NDIS at the relevant time, was involved in an assassination attempt against me. I have also alleged that an AVO was forced upon me and that I was driven into exile in New South Wales.

I understand the gravity of these allegations. I am recording them as my testimony and the matters I want investigated, not pretending that this letter itself establishes a criminal finding.

My account is that these events cannot be separated from the subsequent isolation, the loss of independence, the barriers to legal assistance and the circumstances in which I have been left struggling to survive.

I say that I supplied Federal Police with evidence that I believed demonstrated the assassination attempt. I further believe that ASIO intervened to save my life because the consequences of failing to act would have been indefensible. I want the evidence I supplied, the dates and circumstances of my reports, and any records that can lawfully be accessed examined in their proper sequence.

I am not asking anyone to substitute an assumption for an investigation. I am asking that the evidence and chronology be examined rather than treating my testimony as though it can simply be ignored.

I also believe that members of my family stood to benefit financially from my death. That is an extremely serious concern, and I want the basis for it, the relevant records and any evidence capable of independently testing it documented and examined. I am not asking you to accept that allegation as an established fact merely because I have stated it. I am asking you not to erase it from the account of what I have reported.

I believe that my survival, the evidence I say I supplied, and the subsequent history of my treatment require serious scrutiny. The fact that I survived does not make my allegations disappear. Nor does the passage of time remove the need to preserve and examine relevant records.

I believe I survived circumstances in which I was expected to break under exile, isolation, institutional abandonment and the betrayal of people and organisations from whom I expected basic humanity.

I am still here. I am still speaking. I am still documenting what happened.

I will not allow my survival to be used as an excuse to ignore the circumstances I survived.

The NDIS, government, lawyers, media and family — accountability for the cumulative harm

I hold the NDIS and the relevant government agencies responsible for answering serious questions about the way my circumstances were handled. I also have unresolved concerns about the conduct of lawyers, the media and members of my family.

I believe the combined effect of these experiences has been devastating. I have described it as a coordinated campaign to destroy my life. I want the chronology, the records, the decisions and the connections between the relevant events examined carefully.

I am angry because I believe I have been left to carry the consequences while the institutions and individuals involved can retreat behind job titles, policies, professional obligations and carefully worded correspondence.

I am angry because I have sought help and believe I have repeatedly encountered barriers instead of practical protection.

I am angry because I have tried to preserve my testimony and the documentary record, yet I continue to struggle with the ordinary necessities of living.

I am angry because I believe that the very systems that should have helped protect my independence have contributed to circumstances in which I feel trapped, isolated and financially vulnerable.

And I am angry because the polite language of administration can conceal the human reality of what a decision does to another person's life.

When I say that these institutions have blood on their hands, I am expressing the depth of my anger and my belief that their actions and failures have caused profound harm. I am demanding accountability for the consequences of their conduct, including whether any decision, omission or failure to protect me was improper.

The NDIS has questions to answer. The government has questions to answer. Bill Shorten's alleged involvement, as described in my testimony, must be distinguished from what the documentary record can establish. The lawyers, media organisations and members of my family whose conduct I have questioned must be addressed through the evidence relevant to each of them.

I am not going to pretend that I feel polite about this. I do not.

I believe that the treatment I have experienced has been disgraceful, inhumane and morally indefensible. I want the evidence examined, the responsible decision-makers identified, and the available avenues for redress made clear.

I will not be told that the absence of an already-established finding means that I should never have raised the concern. Reporting an allegation, preserving evidence and asking for investigation are not the same as claiming that every allegation has already been proven.

The 123 official records and the question of identity

I have identified what I understand to be 123 official records linking my name, Baron Dodger.

This is a matter of profound concern to me because Baron Dodger is a name I describe as made up, rather than an ordinary name that I would expect to appear repeatedly across official records in this way.

I want those records examined individually and in context. I want to know which agencies created them, what information they contain, how the name was entered, whether the records refer to the same person, what identifiers were used to make that connection, and whether any errors, duplicated entries, misattributions or unauthorised uses of identity have occurred.

One hundred and twenty-three records is a substantial number of records to investigate. I want the underlying documents and the connections between them properly itemised.

My concern is not merely about a name appearing in a database. It is about identity, authorship, attribution, reputation and the consequences that records can have when institutions use them to describe a person, make decisions about them or construct a narrative around their life.

I have described my experience in spiritual terms. I believe that I was literally murdered, revived by God and returned to this Earth with a purpose: to expose corruption. My faith is central to how I understand my life, my survival and the responsibility I believe I have to speak out.

I also believe that what has happened to my identity and public character represents an extraordinary case of character fraud. I have described it as the largest character fraud in Australian living history. I want the evidence behind that concern examined rather than dismissed before the records have been assembled and compared.

I am the main character in the story of my own life. I am the person whose identity, reputation, history and future are at stake. I will not accept being reduced to somebody else's description of me.

My demand is straightforward: identify the records, establish their provenance, distinguish verified information from assumptions, identify discrepancies and explain what steps are available to correct or challenge any inaccurate attribution.

I want a documented answer, not a patronising reassurance.

My financial position — the numbers make the situation undeniable

Your own figures reportedly show that my Centrelink income is $1,371.27 per fortnight and my listed expenses are $1,369.96 per fortnight. That leaves approximately $1.31 per fortnight before unlisted needs, unexpected costs or emergencies.

I have also told you that I have approximately $363 available before my next pension payment.

Against that background, I have been informed that my allowance is to be reduced by $50 per week from Monday 19 October. I object to that reduction and demand a written explanation of its basis, the calculation used, the authority under which it is being imposed and the process for urgently reviewing it.

You cannot point to a budget that leaves me effectively nothing and then treat a further reduction as though it were a minor adjustment. It is not minor to the person who has to live on the remaining money.

Where am I supposed to find money for food, phone credit, transport, basic necessities and unexpected expenses? How am I supposed to pursue complaints, contact support services, preserve my evidence or seek assistance when I am being left without a workable financial margin?

I want you to consider the actual human consequences of these decisions. A budget that balances on paper can still leave a person in an untenable situation.

I request an urgent review of the proposed reduction, consideration of discretionary assistance for essential expenses, and a written account of the options available to me.

I do not want the question of which days the reduction will be applied treated as though it resolves my substantive objection to the reduction itself.

Whistleblower detriment and the government paper trail

I have spent years documenting what I believe to be institutional wrongdoing, failures of accountability and detriment arising from my attempts to expose matters of public interest.

My archive contains correspondence and records involving government departments and agencies, including material relating to the Department of Social Services, Comcare, the Attorney-General's Department, the offices of the Prime Minister and other public bodies.

I have raised questions about my employment status, workers' compensation, agency responses, access to legal assistance and the handling of my complaints.

I have referred to correspondence that I believe is important to my position, including a Federal Court-related letter concerning my employment with DSS and an AAT outcome concerning eligibility under the Safety, Rehabilitation and Compensation Act. I want the relevant documents considered together rather than having one decision treated as though it automatically answers every other question.

I believe that my efforts to expose wrongdoing have been followed by serious personal and financial detriment. I want the relevant facts and records examined, including whether any public interest disclosure protections or other whistleblower safeguards may apply to my circumstances.

I am not asking NSW Trustee and Guardian to make a finding outside its authority. I am demanding that you stop ignoring the consequences of the circumstances in which I find myself, preserve the records in your possession, and identify the appropriate channels for independent review.

I have published extensive material because I believe the documentary record matters. My archive is intended to preserve evidence, testimony and correspondence so that the history of these matters is not erased or reduced to a few institutional summaries.

I will not accept the assumption that a person who raises uncomfortable questions should simply be managed, isolated or financially constrained until they stop speaking.

Health, access to assistance and the effects on my daily life

I have also raised concerns about my diagnosis of ADHD and difficulties obtaining appropriate treatment. I have described the circumstances in which I have resorted to street drugs as self-medication when I could not obtain the treatment I believed I needed. I have raised serious concerns about the people supplying those drugs, including what I believe may be extortion or exploitation.

I have also reported experiences that I describe as V2K, electronic harassment and interference involving television or Wi-Fi signals. I have recordings and material that I believe are relevant to those concerns.

I want my reports documented accurately and assessed on their evidence, without anyone presuming in advance that every explanation I offer must be correct or that my entire account can be dismissed because some parts are disputed.

I am asking for practical help and a fair examination of what I report. I need access to appropriate medical care, support and advice. I do not need further barriers that leave me more isolated, financially desperate or dependent on people I do not trust.

I have also experienced barriers to obtaining legal assistance and have raised concerns about Legal Aid and the lack of a practical avenue for pursuing my complaints. Telling someone to seek assistance while they cannot access that assistance is not a solution.

My faith in God is central to my life. I have survived circumstances that I regard as extraordinary, and I believe I have a responsibility to tell my story. I am not surrendering that voice because institutions find it inconvenient.

The conduct I am calling out

What I see is a pattern in which each individual decision is presented as routine, each email is politely worded, and each person claims to be following a process. Yet the combined effect on my life is devastating.

A reduction in money here. An unexplained decision there. An organisation whose leadership identification I have questioned. A car gone. Independence lost. Accommodation I say I have not agreed to through a signed lease. Repeated missing-person episodes that I say occurred while I was under a support coordinator's care. A cease-and-desist notice sent. Barriers to legal assistance. Complaints passed between agencies. Records that I believe raise serious questions about identity and attribution.

Every decision can be presented as a separate administrative matter. I am telling you to look at the cumulative consequences.

I believe that this pattern amounts to institutional mobbing and coercive financial entrapment. I believe that my whistleblower activity and my attempts to document wrongdoing are central to the context in which I understand what has happened to me.

Those are my allegations and my interpretation of the evidence. I want them recorded, the records preserved, and the relevant facts examined rather than dismissed through another polite email.

I regard conduct that deprives a person of meaningful choice, financial breathing room and the ability to challenge decisions as morally indefensible. If any part of that conduct is unlawful, misleading or improper, it must be identified and addressed.

No one should be shielded from scrutiny by the comfort of the crowd or by the appearance of bureaucratic respectability.

You can write politely while a person's life is falling apart. You can quote policy while refusing to engage with the human consequences. You can say you are administering funds while leaving someone without a meaningful margin to live.

Politeness does not make a decision fair, and procedure does not make its consequences disappear.

I consider the conduct and the cumulative effect of these decisions disgraceful. I am holding you to account for the part you play in administering them.

What I require from you in writing

I require a substantive written response addressing each of the following points.

1. Accommodation and consent: Confirm that my stated wish to leave has been recorded. Provide copies of any lease, agreement, consent form or other document relied upon, and explain the legal or administrative basis for my current accommodation arrangement. Explain the practical steps, options and timeframes available for leaving.
2. My car and loss of independence: Provide the records available to you concerning decisions affecting my car, including who made or authorised the relevant decisions, what authority was relied upon and what review or remedy is available.
3. Rachel and Able Point: Record my formal complaint concerning Rachel's identification and claimed authority as CEO of Able Point. Explain the process for verifying her role, identify the appropriate independent complaints or oversight body, and confirm whether the complaint will be referred. If you consider that another body is responsible, identify it and explain how I can lodge the complaint directly.
4. Suki TMI and support coordination: Record my complaint concerning Suki TMI, the cease-and-desist notice I have sent, and my account of repeated missing-person episodes while under her care. Identify any relevant records, incident reports, safeguarding procedures, communications and complaint pathways. Explain what records can be accessed and which organisation is responsible for investigating the concerns.
5. My allegations concerning the assassination attempt and government conduct: Record that I have made these allegations and that I say I supplied evidence to Federal Police. Identify any relevant records held by your organisation and the appropriate channels for complaints or referrals outside your authority. I want the chronology and documentary evidence examined, not a predetermined conclusion substituted for examination.

6. The 123 official records: Record my concern about the official records linking my name, Baron Dodger. Identify any records held by NSW Trustee and Guardian that are relevant to this issue, explain how I can obtain copies, and identify the proper process for seeking correction or investigation of inaccurate identity information.
7. The allowance reduction: Explain the basis and calculation for the proposed $50-per-week reduction, identify the authority under which it is being made, and arrange an urgent review in light of the income and expenditure figures already provided.
8. Essential expenses: Explain what emergency, discretionary or case-by-case assistance can be considered for food, phone access, utilities, transport and other essential needs. Do not merely repeat that no additional funding is available without explaining what options have actually been considered.
9. Whistleblower and agency concerns: Confirm how my complaints and supporting records will be preserved, identify any appropriate referral pathways, and explain what action you can take within your authority.
10. Access to assistance: Explain what practical steps can be taken to help me access appropriate medical support, legal advice and relevant complaint processes, given the difficulties I have already described.
11. Records and accountability: Preserve relevant correspondence, case notes, financial calculations, decisions, referrals and communications concerning my accommodation, allowance, car, complaints, support coordination, and dealings with Able Point and other relevant organisations.
12. Independent review: Identify the available internal and external review mechanisms for the decisions affecting me, including the relevant contact details and any applicable time limits.

If you believe any request falls outside your authority, say so clearly and identify the person, organisation or process that does have the authority to address it. Do not use the limits of your role as a reason to leave every question unanswered.

Philip, I want you to understand that this is not an abstract dispute about money. It is about my home, my independence, my identity, my dignity and my ability to direct my own life.

I have not signed a lease. I do not consent to remaining here. I want to leave.

I want answers about my car. I want the proposed allowance reduction reviewed. I want my complaint about Rachel and Able Point recorded and properly referred. I want my concerns about Suki TMI and the missing-person episodes documented and investigated through the appropriate process. I want the 123 official records I have identified examined, and I want the underlying documents made available so their significance can be assessed.

I want my allegations concerning Bill Shorten, the NDIS, government conduct, my family and the wider circumstances of my reported experiences preserved accurately as allegations requiring examination. I want the evidence I say I supplied to Federal Police considered through the appropriate channels. I want my whistleblower concerns and the documentary record I have preserved treated seriously.

I am not asking for sympathy in place of action. I am asking for records, explanations, accountability and practical remedies.

My life is not your spreadsheet, Philip. My freedom is not yours to allocate. My dignity is not yours to diminish. And my testimony is not yours to silence.

Do not send me another courteous email that deals with one small part of this while ignoring the whole. Answer the questions. Identify the decision-makers. Produce the records. Explain the authority. Tell me what you will do, what you will not do, and how I can challenge your decisions.

I will continue to document my experiences and preserve the evidence available to me. I will continue to speak about what I believe has happened and to seek accountability through the channels available to me.

I expect a written response addressing every numbered point above.

Barran Dodger / Baron Dodger

One practical point: because you say you have already sent Suki TMI a cease-and-desist notice, keep a copy of that notice and proof of delivery with the relevant correspondence. If you want the allegations about the alleged assassination attempt or the missing-person reports formally investigated, those should also be set out in a separate complaint addressed to the body with authority to examine them. This email to Philip can demand preservation of records and referrals, but it does not itself establish that a criminal complaint has been lodged or that the allegations have been substantiated.
