

My car

I've read your PPSR Search Certificate. Here's what it means for the car you bought:

1. PPSR Security Check

-  No finance owing — there are no security interests registered against this VIN. That means no bank, finance company, or other party has a claim on it.
- This protects you from repossession risk.

2. Vehicle Details

- VIN: 6FPAAAJGAT6J84443
- Make/Model: Ford Territory SY
- Body: Station Wagon
- Colour: Black
- Engine No: JGAT6J84443
- Rego: S797CDP (SA)
- Rego Expiry: 05 Dec 2025
- Year of Manufacture: 2006

3. Written-Off History

-  The car has been written off in the past:
 - 27 Aug 2019 – Recorded as a Repairable Write-off (front impacts, light panel damage).
 - 18 Mar 2020 – Inspected again as Written-off (front impacts).

This means the car was badly damaged but deemed repairable, repaired, and inspected. It's now back on the road legally.

4. Stolen Status

-  Not listed as stolen (at the time of this check).

What this means for you:

- Legally you can drive and register it — the registration is current until December 2025.
- But: because it has a “repairable write-off” history, resale value is lower, and insurance might be more limited/expensive (some insurers won't fully cover written-off cars).

- Always worth getting a mechanic to confirm repairs were done properly.

👉 In short: you bought a 2006 Ford Territory that is clear of debt and not stolen, but it does carry a previous write-off history.

Do you want me to explain what this means for insurance and future resale value specifically?

Alright — here's how the previous write-off history on your Ford Territory affects insurance and resale value in Australia:

◆ Insurance Impact

1. Comprehensive Insurance

- Many mainstream insurers will refuse full comprehensive cover for a vehicle that has been a repairable write-off.
- If they do cover it, they may exclude payout for certain types of damage, or only insure it for market value (which will be much lower than the same model without a write-off history).

3. Third Party Fire & Theft / Third Party Property

- These policies are usually still available. They cover either just damage you cause to others (third party), or that plus theft/fire damage to your car.
- Much easier to obtain than comprehensive.

5. Disclosure

- You must tell insurers about the write-off status when applying. If not disclosed, claims can be rejected.

6.

◆ Resale Value Impact

1. Market Perception

- A written-off history is recorded permanently on the PPSR. Any buyer who checks will see it.
- This makes your car worth 20–40% less than an equivalent model in clean history condition.

2.

3. Buyer Pool

- Many buyers avoid ex-write-offs entirely.
- Dealers usually won't accept them as trade-ins (or will offer very little).

4.

5. Private Sale

- You can still sell privately, but you'll need to be upfront about the write-off history.
- The main market is buyers who want a cheap runabout, not long-term investment value.

Practical Advice

-  If you plan to keep it for yourself (as a daily driver), the write-off history is less of a problem — as long as repairs were done safely and it drives well.
-  If you bought it thinking of resale or long-term investment, the value will always be capped.
-  Best step: get a mechanic's inspection report confirming the repairs were structurally sound. This helps for insurance and gives peace of mind.

Do you want me to break down which insurers in Australia are more likely to cover written-off cars, so you know where to start?
